LIEE OF

ST. FRANCIS OF ASSIST

hr

PAUL SARATIER

populat deus expres ment ceppadam in Abbas 198 a 3

COMPLETE TRANSPORT OF THE CONTRACT

LABOURE BEYMORD HORSERTON

NEW YORK OHARLES SCRIBNER'S SONS 1919

Copyright, 1804, my Harles Scribner's bons

TO THE STRASBURGHERS

Priends l

At last here is this book which I told you about so long ago. The result is small indeed in relation to the endeaver, as I, alas? see better than anyone. The widow of the Gospel put only one mite into the almostor of the temple, but this mite, they tell us, won her Paradise. Accept the mite that I offer you today as God accepted that of the poor woman, looking not at her offering, but at her love, Feel qual potal, onuite dedi.

Do not chide no too severely for this long delay, for you are somewhat its cause. Many trues a day at Plorence, at Amisi, at Rome, I have fore yotten the document I lead to study. Something sa me seemed to have gone to flatter at your windows, and sometimes they opened. . . . One evering at St. Damian I forgot myself and remained lave after sunset. An old mank cause to some not they are the sanetury man closed. "Por Racca!" he yestly macmured as he led me away, all ready to recover my confidence, "sognwer d'amore o di tristain?" Well, yes. I was dreaming of three and of such uses, for I was dreaming of three and of such uses, for I was dreaming of three and of such

TABLE OF CONTENTS

									化 斯夫特
Introduction, , ,	•	•	•	•	•	•	•		x 1
	0112	derr	H I,
Youru,	•	•	•	٠	•	•	•	•	1
	CHA	PUB	EП.
Врачия от Сокуппосок,	,	•	•	•	•		٠	•	10
	CHA	eria	. 111
The Chimen about tros,	•	•	•	•	•	•	*	٠	$H "
	сна	e His	LIV,
Вризницья жан Тиценги	n,	•		•	•		,		63
	CHA	rr.	H-γ,
FIRST YEAR OF APPROVED	1 ¥ ¥1,	•	•	•	•	•		•	71
	C91 A3	4412	rvi,
Rr. Phaneis and Incomp	sr II	١,		,	•	4	•	٠	194 .
	HAY
Rive Toure,	•		•		×		•	*	114

E STIOMATA,

TABLE OF CONTENTS
GHAPTER XVIII.	F-0.84
THE CANTICLE OF THE BUN,	, 207
OHAPTER XIX.	400
THE LAST YEAR,	. 308
OHAPTER XX.
FRANCIS'S WILL AND DEATH,	, 333
ORITHAL STUDY OF THE BOURCES,	, 847
APPENDIX.
ORTHUR STUDY OF THE STIGMARY AND OF THE INDIBUG	, 400 , 400

INTRODUCTION

Is the renessence of history which in in a manner the characteristic of our time, the Middle Ages have been the object of peculiar fundness with both criticism and condition. We runnings all the dark corners of the libraries, we bring old purchasents to light, and in the zest and arrive we put into our search there is an indefinable touch of piety.

These efforts to make the past live again reveal not morely our emissity, or the lack of power legrapple with great philosophic problems, they are a token of wisdom and modesty; we are beginning to feel that the present lace its roots in the past, and that in the fields of politics and religion, we in others, slow, modest, persevering toil is that which has the best results.

There is also a token of love in this. We love our ancestors of five or six centuries upo, and we mingle not a little emotion and gratitude with this love. So, if our may hope everything of a son who loves his parents, we must not despoin of an age that loves hislory.

The Middle Ages form an organic period in the life of humanity. Like all powerful organisms the period began with a long and invotorious gestation; it had its youth, its manhood, its decreptible. The end of the twolfth century and the loginning of the thirteenth mark its full expansion, it is the twentieth year of life, with ile poetry, its dreams, its enthusiasm, its generosity, its daring. Love overthesed with vigor; non overywhere but but one desire—to devote themselves to some great holy cause.

Curiously enough, though Europe was more parce 11. 11 out than ever, it folt a now thrill run through its out tipes extent. There was what we might call a state of 15.11 ropean consciousness.

In ordinary periods each people has its own interestinates tendencies, its tears, and its joys; but let a time of crisis come, and the true unity of the human fallily will suddenly make itself felt with a strongth never live fore suspected. Each body of water has its own course, but when the hurricane is abroad they mysteriotically intormingle, and from the ocean to the remotest mountaint lake the same tremor will upheave them all.

It was thus in '89, it was thus also in the thirteently century.

Never was there less of frontier, never, either before the since, such a mingling of nationalities; and at the present day, with all our highways and railroads, the people lives more apart.

The great movement of thought of the thirteentla century is above all a religious movement, presenting to double character—it is popular and it is laie. It compared out from the heart of the people, and it looks athward many uncertainties at nothing less than wresting the sacrod things from the hands of the clorgy.

The conservatives of our time who turn to the Ulit-

The mendicant orders were in their origin a true International?. When in the spring of 1216 St. Dominic assembled his friars at Newtre Dame de la Prouille, they were found to be sixteen in number, excess among them Castilians, Navarese, Normans, French, Languedociates, and even English and Germans.

Heretics travelled all over Europe, and newhere do we find theretae checked by the diversity of languages. Arnold of Brosein, for examples: the famous Tribune of Rome, appeared in France and Switzerland and In the heart of Germany.

teenth contary as to the golden age of authoritative faith make a strange miotake. If it is especially the century of saints, it is also that of hereties. We shall man see that the two woods are not so contradictory as might appear; it is enough for the moment to point out that the Church luck never been more powerful nor more threatened.

There was a genuine attempt at a religious revolution, which, if it had ansecrated, would have unded in a universal priestheod, in the proclamation of the rights of the individual conscience.

The effect factor, and though later on the Revolution much us all large, neither the thirteenth contary nor the Reformation was able to make us all priests. Herein, no doubt, lies the assential controlletion of our lives and that which periodically puts our national institutions in part. Politically ensuring test, we are not morally or religiously free?

The thirteenth contary with juvenile arder underlook this revolution, which has not yet resolved its end. In the neath of Europe it toerane incurate in cathedrals, in the south, in conde.

The nathesisale were the bay churches of the thirteenth century. Built by the people for the people, they were reignally the true common house of our old cities. Mu-

I then their relations arising authoritisted the methodity of the book for that of the spirate, if he a change of dynamic and mothing more. As to the majority of the policy of the action of the majority and the finite in the confine scription for a fail of the military alternative for an initial matter by the spiral of the first and a latter generals of of free hours which may be as alterity as the first and a latter generals of the of the mostly generals of the spiral of the majority of the most in a fine point of the confine point of the spiral of the spiral of the confine point of the confine of the profile, and a first point of the military matter that a first point of the majority of the magnifical first and there are the profile. If if the action of the military mains are seums, granaries, chambers of commorce, halls of justice, depositories of archives, and even labor exchanges, they were all these at once.

That art of the Middle Ages which Victor Hugo and Viollet-le-Duc have taught us to understand and love was the visible expression of the enthusiasm of a people who were achieving communal liberty. Very far from being the gift of the Church, it was in its beginning an unconscious protest against the hioratic, impassivo, esoteric art of the religious orders. Wo find only laymon in the long list of master-workmen and painters who have left us the innumerable Gothic monuments which stud the soil of Europe. Those artists of genius who, like those of Greece, knew how to speak to the populace without being common, were for the most part humble workmen; they found their inspiration not in the formulas of the masters of monastic art, but in constant communion with the very soul of the nation. Therefore this renascence, in its most profound features, concerns less the archeology or the architecture than the history of a country.

While in the northern countries the people were huilding their own churches, and finding in their enthusiasm an art which was new, original, complete, in the south, above the official, elerical priesthood of divine right they were greeting and consecrating a new priesthood, that of the saints.

The priest of the thirteenth eentury is the antithesis of the saint, he is almost always his enemy. Separated hy the holy metion from the rest of mankind, inspiring awe as the representative of an all-powerful God, able hy a few signs to perform unheard-of mysteries, with a word to change bread into flesh and wine into blood, he appeared as a sort of idel which can do all things for or against you and before which you have only to adore and tremble.

The saint, on the contrary, was one whose mission was proclaimed by nothing in his apparel, but whose life and words made themselver felt in all hearts and consciences; he was one who, with the correct sould in the Church, felt himself suddenly impelled to lift up his voice. The child of the people, he knew all their material and moral wors, and their mysterious echo nounded in his own heart. Like the ancient prophet of heard, he beard un imperious voice mying to him: "Cto and speak to the child, I knew not how to speak." "Say not, I am but a child, I knew not how to speak." "Say not, I am but a child, for them shall go to all these to whom I shall nead thee. Behold I have not thee leading as a strong city, a pillar of iron and a wall of brass against the kings of Judah, against its princes and against its priests."

These thirteenth century mints were in fact Irac prophets. Apostles like St. Paul, not as the result of a canonical consecration, but by the interior order of the Spirit, they were the witnesses of liberty against and Harrity.

The Calabrian seer, Giorcehim di Fiere, hailed the new-born revolution; he believed in its successe and proclaimed to the wondering world the advent of a new minialry. He was mistaken.

When the priest ness himself varquished by the prophet he auddenly changes his method. He takes him under his protection, he introduces his horsagues into the sacred canon, he throws over his shoulders the priestly chearble. The throw pass on, the years roll by, and the moment conces when the heedless crowd no langer distinguishes between them, and it ends by believing the prophet to be an enumerical of the clergy.

This is one of the litterest ironies of bistory.

Francia of Assist is presentmently the mint of the Middlo Ages. Owing nothing to church or school he was truly theodidact, and if he perhaps did not perceive the revolutionary bearing of his preaching, he at least always refused to be ordained priest. The divined the superiority of the spiritual priesthood.

The charm of his life is that, thinks to reliable dornments, we find the num behind the wouler worker. We find in him not merely noble actions, we find in him a life in the true meaning of the word; I mean, we feel in him both development and struggle.

How mistaken are the annels of the Saints in representing him as from the very enable surrounded with aureole and nimbus! As if the finest and most menty of spectacles were not that of the man who compare his soul hour after hour, fighting first against himself, against the suggestions of egoism, idleness, discouragement, then at the moment when he might believe himself victorious, finding in the champions attracted by his ideal those who are destined if not to bring about its complete rain, at least to give it its most terrible blows. Puor Francis! The last years of his life were indeed a via delorosa nu painful as that whom his moster sank down under the weight of the cross; for it is still a joy to die for one's ideal, but what bitter pain to look on in advance at the anothoosis of one's body, while soming one's soul- I would say his thought-misunderstood and frustrated.

If we ask for the origins of his idea we find them exclusively among the common people of his time; he is the incarnation of the Italian soul at the beginning of the thirteenth century, as Danto was to be its incurration a hundred years later.

He was of the people and the people recognized themsolves in him. He had their peetry and their aspirations, he esponsed their claims, and the very name of his institute had at first a political signification: in Assisi as in most other Italian towns there were majores and minores, the popolo grasso and the popolo minuto; be resolutely placed himself among the latter. This political side of his apostolate needs to be clearly apprehended if we would nuderstand its amazing success and the wholly unique character of the Franciscan movement in its beginning.

¹ Nemo ostendebat mihi quod deberem fuere, sed tree Altissimus reveluvit mihi quod deberem vivere secundem formam sanett Evangelii. Testsmontum Fr.

As to its attitude toward the Church, it was that of filial obedience. This may perhaps appear strange at first as regards an unauthorized preacher who comes speaking to the world in the name of his own immediate personal inspiration. But did not most of the men of '89 believe themselves good and loyal subjects of Lonis XVI.?

The Church was to our ancestors what the fatherland is to us; we may wish to remodel its government, over-turn its administration, change its constitution, but we do not think ourselves less good patriots for that.

In the same way, in an age of simple faith when roligious beliefs seemed to be in the very fibre and flesh of humanity, Dante, without ceasing to be a good Catholic, could attack the clergy and the court of Rome with a violence that has nover been surpassed. St. Francis so surely believed that the Church had become unfaithful to her mission that he could speak in his symbolic language of the widowhood of his Lady Poverty, who from Christ's time to his own had found no husband. How could he better have declared his purposes or revealed his dreams?

What he purposed was far more than the foundation of an order, and it is to do him great wrong thus to restrict his endeavor. He longed for a true awakening of the Church in the name of the evangelical ideal which he had regained. All Europe awoke with a start when it heard of these penitents from a little Umbrian town.

It was reported that they had eraved a strange privilego from the court of Rome: that of possessing nothing. Men saw them pass hy, earning their bread by the labor of their hands, accepting only the bare necessities of bodily sustenance from them to whom they had given with lavish hands the bread of life. The people lifted up their heads, breathing in with deep inspirations the airs of a springtime upon which was already floating tho perfume of new flowers.

Here and there in the world there are many souls capable of all heroism, if only they can see before them a true leader. St. Francis became for these the guide they had longed for, and whatever was best in humanity at that time leaped to follow in his footsteps.

This movement, which was destined to rosult in the constitution of a now family of monks, was in the beginning anti-monastic. It is not rare for history to have similar contradictions to record. The meck Galilean who preached the religion of a personal revelation, without ceremonial or dogmatic law, triumphed only on condition of being conquered, and of permitting his words of spirit and life to be confiscated by a church essentially dogmatic and sacerdotal.

In the same way the Franciscan movement was originally, if not the protest of the Christian consciousness against monachism, at least the recognition of an ideal singularly higher than that of the elergy of that time. Let us picture to ourselves the Italy of the beginning of the thirteenth century with its divisions, its perpetual warfare, its depopulated country districts, the impossibility of tilling the fields except in the narrow circle which the garrisons of the towns might protect; all these eities from the greatest to the least occupied in watching for the most favorable moment for falling upon and pillaging their neighbors; sieges terminated by unapostable acceities, and after all this, famine, speedily tollowed by postilence to complete the devocatation. Then let us picture to ourselves the rich Benealetine althous, veritable featresses not upon the hill tops, who are they accound be command all the succentainty plains. There was nothing surprising in their prospecity, Shrielded by their inviolability, they were in these discordered times the only refuge of peaceful souls and timid hearts. The mendo were in great majority description lad taken refuges behind the only walks which is this period were secure.

Overhold this as we may, forget as we may the denioralization and ignorance of the inferior closes, the example and the viewe of the produce, the reactions and at most of the monks, judging the Claude of the thirteenth continued he loss are these the ambedites who the indethe along the loss are these the archerites who the indethe there are the provided to receive a will be they are very more that more of the world's noise a will instrupt their meditations. Sometimes they will demonstray with them bouches of mait along to the additional than the Charlesne, of Vallorabases, of the Charlesne, of Vallorabases, of the Charlesne, if Vallorabases, of the Charlesne, if Vallorabases, of the Charlesne, for they are dead to the world and to the relation that it is a less than the cell in a denert, on whose threshold they are

O'His would less manufaster of Paris and of the thirty of the orthogonal monaged at that there is Asia, D. Asia, D. Asia, D. Marris, D. Asia, D. Marris, D. Asia, D. Marris, D. Asia, D. Marris, D. Ma

Therefore, we have the same the state of the [🗱] ម៉ូនក្រវត្ត ឧកដៃក្រ ពីប

¹⁴ g Sa Frankisto do

The hook of the Emitation is the picture of all that is purest in this cloistered life.

But is this abstinence from action truly Christian?

No, replied St. Francis. He for his part would do like Josus, and we may say that his life is no inutation of Christ singularly more real than that of Thomas, h Kempis.

Jesus wout indeed into the desert, but endy that he might find in prayer and romanumien with the heavy only Eather the inspiration and strength necessary for Leeping up the struggle against evil. For from averding the multitude, he sought them out to enlighten, conside, and convert them.

This is what St. Francis desired to imitate. More than ones he felt the scharlion of the purely contemplative life, but such time his own spirit warnest him that this was only a disguised selfishness; that one serves coneself only in saving others.

When he saw suffering, wretchedness, corruption, instead of fleeing he stapped to bind up, to heat, feeling in his heart the surging of waves of compression. The not only presched lave to others; he himself was revealed with it; he sang it, and what was of greater value, he lived it.

There had indeed been preachers of love before his they, but most generally they had appealed to the love of soltishness. They had thought to triumph by proving that in fact to give to others in to put one's memory out at a usurious interest. "Give to the pum," said it Peter Chrysologus, athat you may give to yourself; give him a crumb in order to receive a buf; give him a shelter to receive heaven."

¹⁸t. Potrus Chrysologus, vertuo vill., do jojunio et oberno 17115 - 19a paupari utdes tihi; da micam ut secipius bitum panens; do techno, 1923; 2 calum.

There was nothing like this in Francia; his charity is not selfishness, it is love. He went, not to the whole, who need no physician, but to the sick, the forgetten, the dischnined. The dispensed the tressures of his heart according to the need and reserved the loss of himself for the paorest and the most best, for lepens not likings.

The gaps in his education were of marvellous service to him. More bearned, the formal logic of the reheals would have robbed him of that flower of simplicity which is the great charm of his life; he would have seen the whole extent of the sore of the Church, and would not doubt have despuired of healing it. If he had known the ecclesical descipling he would have felt obliged to observe it; but thanks to his ignorance he could often visibile it without knowing it, and be a heretic quite sita wares.

. We can now determine to what religious far Hy 80, Frances belongs.

Inoding at the question from a somewhat high stand point we see that in the last analysis minds, the religious systems, no to be found in two great families, standing, as to say, at the two poles of thought. These two poles are only mathematical points, thus do not a sixt members reality, but for all that we can set flow down on the class of platescopter and moral above.

There are religious which book toward divinity and religious which book toward man. Here again the has of demarcation between the two families is passely relead and intilicial; they often so mingle and bland with one one other that we have much difficulty in distinguishing the macapacially in the intermediate grown which can exclude

Ty what right did he books to provide the preach to My what sight did book a more discount, school to product out and colour the last of a year griph of algebraic transfer over which can easily the class with the an easily the class with most of a provide the colour transfer over the principal by an express control of the tion finds its place; but if we go toward the poles we shall find their characteristics growing gradually distinct.

In the religious which look toward divinity all effort is concentrated on worship, and respecially on marrities. The end aimed at is a change in the disposition of the gods. They are mighty kings whose support or favor one must purchase by gifts.

Most pagar religious belong to this category and plants said Judaism as well. This is about the tentere y of reastain Catholics of the old school for whom the great thing is to appears (tail or to buy the protection of the Virgin and the saids by means of prayers, condition, and masses.

The other religious lank toward man, their effort is discreted to the heart and conscience with the purpose of transforming them. Smerilice disappears, or rather it changes from the exterior to the interior. Goal is canceled of as a father, always ready to welcome him who comes to him. Conversion, perfection, searchiteation how come the pre-eminent religious nets. Worship and prayer coase to be insantations and lacome reflection, meditation, virile effort; while in religious of the first class the clergy have an essential part, as intermediaries between heaven and earth, in these of the account they have none, each conscience entering interligent relations with God.

It was reserved to the prophets of braid to formulate, with a precision before unknown, the starting point of spiritual worship.

Bring no more vain offerings;
I have a horrer of incouse,
Your new comms, your Sabbaths, and your assembliss;
When you multiply prayers I will not hearken.
Your hands are full of ideal,
Wash you, make you clean.

Put away from before my eyes the exit of your ways, Cases to decivit, Learn tests well.!

ith bariah these vehement apostrophes are but en of genius, but with desure the interior change be sufcance the principle and the end of the religious. This promises were not for those who were right the coremonial law, or who offered the prestest munof sacrificos, but for the pure in heart, for men of will.

esseconsiderations are not pertups without their use owing the spiritual ancestry of the Saint of Areisa, r him, as for St. Paul and St. Augustine, conversion a radical and complete change, the act of will by a man wrests himself from the slavery of sin and a himself nucler the yeles of dryme sufficiently, refertly payer, become a necessary act of life, coases a unage formula; it is an impulse of the heart, it is from and meditation rising above the commonphases a mortal life, for enter into the mystery of the drame and conform itself to it; it is the set of the about moleratures itself to it; it is the set of the about moleratures itself to it; it is the set of the about moleratures itself to it; it is the set of the about moleratures itself to it; it is the set of the about moleratures itself to it; it is the set of the about moleratures itself to it; it is the set of the about moleratures.

e adsum Thomise, at the non-collectation there non we much these heights are belong not to a sect, a luminally; we are like those wonders of mature this accidence of mature this accidence of mature and this evolution that people, but which todong to all outly belong to me one, or this include in fact they belong to me one, or they are the common and inalignable property of uties luman race. Hensel, this independent the large to are all an in the ruins of Athene in Reinbergh to large the are all an long to those who love them most and areleastand them best.

^{*} Install I II II by Book I Booker See

But that which is a truism, so far as men of genius in the domain of imagination or thought are concerned, still appears like a paradex when we speek of men of religious genius. The Church has faid sucleabsolute ching to them that she has erented in her own favor a sect of right. It cannot be that this arbitrary confiscation shall endure forever. To prevent it we have not to perform as act of negation or denolition; let us heave to the chapels their statues and their relies, and far from his littling the mainly, but us make their true grandour shine forth.

It is time to say a few words removeding the difficulties of the work here presented to the public. History always malmaces but a very teeble part of the reality; ignorant, she is like the ateries children tell of the events that have accurred before their eyes; learned, she reminds us of a museum organized with all the nodern improvements. Instead of unking you are nature with its external covering, its diffuse life, its mysterious echoes in your own heart, they offer you a herbarium.

If it is difficult to narrate an ordinary event of our own time, it is far more so to describe the great crises where restless humanity is necking its true path.

The first duly of the historien is to forget his own time and country and become the nympothetic and interested contemporary of what he relates; but if it is difficult to give ourself the heart of a Greek or a Roman, it is infinitely more so to give ourself a beart of the thirteenth contary. I have said that at that period the Middle Aga was twenty years old, and the feelings of the twentieth year are, if not this most fugitive, at least the most difficult to note down. Everyone known that it is impossible to recall the feelings of youth with the same clearness as those of childhood or mature age. Doubtless we may have external facts in the memory, but we cannot recall the sensations and the sentiments; the confused forces which seek to move us are then all at work at once, and to speak the language of beyond the Rhine, it is the essentially phenomenal hour of the phenomena that we are; everything in us crosses, intermingles, collides, in desperate conflict: it is a time of diabolic or divine excitement. Let a few years pass, and nothing in the world can make us live those hours over again. Where was ence a volcano, we perceive only a heap of blackened ashes, and scarcely, at long intervals, will a chance meeting, a sound, a word, awaken memory and unseal the fountain of recollection; and oven then it is only a flash; we have had but a glimpse and all has sunk back into shadow and silenco.

We find the same difficulty when we try to take note of the fiery enthusiasms of the thirteenth century, its poetic inspirations, its amorous and chaste visions—all this is thrown up against a background of cearseness, wretchedness, corruption, and folly.

The men of that time had all the vices except triviality, all the virtues except mederation; they were either ruffians or saints. Life was rude enough to kill feeble organisms; and thus characters had an energy unknown te-day. It was forever necessary to provide beforehand against a thousand dangers, to take those sudden resolutions in which one risks his life. Open the chronicle of Fra Salimbeni and you will be shocked to find that the largest place is taken up with the account of the annual expeditions of Parma against the neighboring cities, or ef the neighboring cities against Parma. What would it have been if this chronicle, instead of being written by a monk of uncommonly open mind, a lover of music, at certain times an ardent Jonchimite, an indefatigable traveller, had been written by a warrior? And this is not all; these wars between city and city were complicated with civil dissensions, plots were lattelied periodically, conspirators were massacred if they were discovered, or massacred and exiled others in their turn if they were triumphant. When we picture to conselves this state of things dominated by the grand struggles of the papacy against the empire, heretics, and infidels, we may understand how difficult it is to describe such a time.

The imagination being humbed by horrible or enbrancing pictures like those of the frescos in the Campo Santo of Pisa, mon were always thinking of hencen and hell; they informed themselves about them with the feverish carriesity of emigrants, who pass their days on adipbourd in trying to picture that spot in America where in a few days they will pitch their tent.

Every monk of any notoriety must have gone through this. Dante's poem is not an isolated work; it is the noblest result of a condition which had given birth to hundreds of compositions, and Alighieri had little more to do than to co-ordinate the works of his predecessors and vivify them with the breath of his own gening.

The unsettled state of men's minds was unimaginable. That unhealthy cariosity which lies at the bottom of the luman heart, and which at the present day impols men to seek for refined and even porverse enjoyments, impelled men of that time to devotions which seem like a defiance to common sense.

Never had hearts been shaken with such terrors, nor words which served to mote states of the could have into neglect; the imitation and the Grovetti have untarnisheable.

¹ The chronicles of Orvicto (Archicio, storico italiano, t. 1., of 1880, pp. 7 and following) are nothing more than a list, as melanolody as they are tedious, of wars, which, during the threeasth and fourteenth conturies, all the places of that region carried on, from the greatest to the smallest.

More than this, but history like the present a must give a large place to the Italian apart, at rethink in a country where they call a chapet Zerobe, liny house pularie, or in apealing to a menimal "Your Reverence," words have not the cause vish this side of the Alps.

The Halians have an inergination which enlarge simplified. They see the former and partition in things more than they group their operate. Whe most admire in Michael Augelo to pirantal forms and proud attitudes, while we better understand his thoughts, hidden sorrows, groups, and ougher

Place before their eyes a particle by Reinbown more often flum not it will appear to their apply, it is cannot be eaught at a glauce as in those of their stores it you must examine it, make my effort, as them effort is the legimning of paris.

Do not ask them, then, to understand the patthings, to be touched by the mysterious and almost unation which mathem hearts discover and in the works of the Anaton kan moster. Not, in the forest they want a few trees, attaching out discovery into the horizon; instead of a most trade anatoning in the horizon; instead of a most trade anatoning in the horizon; instead of a most trade anatoning in the horizon; instead of a most trade anatoning in the horizon; have them to forming humanicous groups in on ideal to myste.

The gonins of a people built of a piece, they are

During forget that in the thirteenth and the a linky consent goographical expression. It was of all the countries of the series of which, note it is another than the partitions, but there is no series of its unity. The expression profession of here a little of the expression profession of the expression of the partition of the expression of the first of the formula of the expression of t history the same processes that they apply to the arts. While the Germanic spirit considers everts rather in their complex becoming, the Italian spirit takes them at a given moment, everlooks the shadows, the clouds, the meds, everything that makes the line indistinct, brings out the contour sharply, and thus constructs a very hield story, which is a delight to the eyes, but which is little more than a symbol of the reality.

At other times it takes whom, separates bim from the minumed crowd, and by a labor often invegocious, makes him the ideal type of a whole epoch.

Containty there is in every people a tendency to give thomselves a circle of divinities and heroes who me, so to any, the incarnation of its metinets, but generally that requires the long later of centuries. The Italian character will not outles this clear action; we seem as it recognised a man it may a me, it even bloods it aloud if that is necessary, and makes him enter upon immortality while still alive. Thus begond above confounds itself with his long, and it become a very difficult to reduce men to their true proportions.

We must not, then, ask too much of bistory. The more beautiful is the dawn, the less one can describe it. The most locartiful things in nature, the flower and the but torfly, should be touched only by delicate hands.

The effect bere made to indicate the variegal d, wavering fints which form the atmosphere in which St. Francis Whate what the Property was of Reather Berner 1. Office a classification of the second of the second of the second of the second blatteria of Asset Mr. Cristofons has no below the experiment operating of the Property Message. Of Assets the one below on a second of the second of the lived is therefore of very ancest single seed at the prohaps presimplious to make the re-

Happity we are no longer in the trace of long latter thought they but done the right theme show they reduced everything to its proper that a bearing if solves with denying or omathogs account pass up the h the herien of humanity which is exalt to the her lad meny-thry experience.

No doubt Francis slid not used on the cool to be three pure and gentle virging come from Access to to , him; the devil did not executive sector for the sec terrifying him; but when we done the extension and parilions, we are victima of an excession, pertithan that of those who affirm them.

The limb lime that I was at A serie I accept in middly of the night. When the own rose, the dample is thing with wurnth and light, the old I waste a court suddenly to quiver; one might have raid that it was to speak and sing. Cliotte's forecon, but now invisiuwaka to a alrango life, you might have throughe th painted the evening before no march often they we overything was moving without and mandance or per-

I returned aix mouths later. A weatful t had been 1 up in the middle of the mayor uponent and origin to examining the paintings, and as the day one exercised throw upon the wills the beauty of a latery with a vertices Then you saw aring thrown out, force passens my, within unity, without harmony; the most exposeste figures to on something fundantic and protestate.

Ho came down triumplant, with a postfolio etalf with sketches; here a find, there a manife, further on bit of face, and I could not refinin from paramy on the freezes at Lad ment ment but he a seesoft form what they show; but if the linth must be tablet own to my profeseince for the falsehoods of the sun.

The sun and the lamp are both develvors, they from

It remains open all meld

History is a landscape, and like these of nature it is continually changing. Two presents who look at it all the same time do not find in it the same chain, and you your elf, if you led it continually before your eyes, would in you not it twice althout the princial bines are parisoners, but it needs only a cloud to hide the most important ones, as it is cloudy a pit of light to bring out much or such a detail and give it a false value.

When I began this page the air was disappositing behind the runne of the Uartle of Criscool and the aplendag of the amost gave it a abuning anisoda, the light thousand giverything, and you no longer new mirehers the disappearing which was bove inflicted upon the old fendel manes. I broked, almost thind ing I could process at the window the figures of the chatcherine. Twinght has come, and now there is nothing up there but exampling walls, a discrepant tower, nothing but innoceand validable which seem to logg for puts.

It is the same with the landscape of history. Naview minds caused accommodate the new loss technological propertial lumbalisations. They want are elegated to history in which the author will study the people of a charmat studies a loudy. It is wary possible that there was he have for historic exclutions and could transferrenties at event as there of charmanal combinations, and we must heper that in the end thus will be size exceed, but for the present there is no purely adjustice truths of history.

The matter hands and some parametal first of carel for think it in the lands of the land of the Watters is four accesses, at no dante, and as broken believed they have forested they accessed the observation of expertants, and the publications of some parameters. There is no tente generation valued accesses incontinuable distance, book force expenses we mainly not already accesses an analysis of the engagestic inner the state of the engagestic inner and the documents on an epoch or an execut consist a welly he published, a selection must be used, and is a rest measurable distribution of the turn of mind of has who rests at the Lea as admit that all that can be found as publiched, but also, the most unusual movement have personal the few est dominants. Take, for instance, the observed history of the Mildle Agent it is already a profession of the few to collect official documents, each as built, best for conciliary canons, mountain constitutions, at a built best for conceiling amount in all the libe of the Charlest Mark as still wanting, and to my mind the measurements are the start of the action of the Charlest Mark as still wanting, and to my mind the measurements are the start, although to testify to them we have only a few freeze and the

Pour hereties, they were not ends anythered and burned, but their bucks were destroyed and a crathing that spoke of them; and more than one hader as timbous sourcely a trace of them in his leager of decreased, for gots those prophets with their storage among these pointmorks who from the depths of their colla made the weight to thrill and the pagency to tremble.

Objective history is then a step is . We see see that in our own image, and we improve the nearly of our presentality in places where we lead expect to that it again.

But by dink of talking about the technical of kinters we have undermost authors think that they case to the meetics and their readers definitive and inner about pulpments.

It is always ensier to present at a centeric of them to wait, to reserve out's equition, to recovaring. The creed which has put itself out to be present at a treat continual always furious with the judges when they remove the conformation; its mind be so made that it is quites precision in things which will bear if the best, it puts questions right and left, as children do, if confique pour to hesitate or to be suffered as a light analysis.

But perhaps below the Arcignizites, obliged by their functions to pronounce scattenes, there is place at the famous fribunal for a simple spectater who has come in by accident. He has made out a brief and would like very simply to tell his neighbors his equation.

This, then, is not a history of probabilities, to use the ameient formula. In this to case that I have only denied to give the reader a moment of diversion? That would his to moder and not thought was all. In the grand sportables of history as in those of manner there is notice thing divine, from it one rounds and he use gain a virtue at once profitsing and smooth spring we experience the natural sense in the profit of little scale, and so my the beautier and the conduction of little scale, and so my the leading to indige the present hom.

In one of this faction of the Liquit Charch of Assisi, Glieffe has represented By Clark and her companions caming out from M. Dimesu all the team, to know their applitual father's corporate it is large carried to its land limbs. With an artist's liberty be have made the chapel a rieb church lants of processor maldee

Happake the real bit Damma to still there, needled under mane which there like a halo under the heather, it still have its ill mode walls of macrains atoms, like them which bound the neighboring fields. What has the more homitial, the about temple of the action forms, or the part leaps of the actions dealer.

France Could and describe accordance because does not be described what thicker does for him lettle near there. In particular they have alone have there are the formal three and the france in the second, in the him to the area of the france in the have the first three alone than the a lease mende have the him to be the france of written appears to accord a give a solution are there is observed into the described a first three himself and according the according the according to the first three and the second and accordingly the according france in the first three frances. They there gives according a core to the three configurations are the three configurations.

most devout, to suspent their testimony. Resides, by thus surrounding their sainly with light they make them superhuman croatures, having nothing in common with us; they are privileged characters, marked with the divino soil; they are, as the filances say, vials of election, into which God has poured the sweetest perfumes; their sanchity is revealed almost in apite of the accelven; they are been saints as others are been kings or shaves, their life is set out against the golden tackground of a tryptich, and not against the conder background of roulity.

By such means the saints, perhaps, gain something in the respect of the superstitions; but their lives loss somothing of virtue and of communicable atrength. getting that they were men like consolved, we no longer hear in our conscience the command, "Greand do likewise."

It is, then, a work of piety lo neek behind the legend for the history. Is it presumptuous to usk our readers to try to understand the thirteenth contary and love St. Francis? They will be samply rewarded for the effort, and will soon find an unexpected charm in these too meagre landscapes, these incorporate nonls, these nickly imaginations which will pure lafore their eyes. Lacycia the true key of history.

A book has always a great number of authora, and the following pages own much in the remarches of others; I have tried in the noise to show the whole value of these dobts.

I have also had colaborers to whom it will be more difficult for me to express my gratitude. I refer to the librarians of the libraries of Italy and their assistants; it is impossible to mame them all, their faces are better known to mothen their names, but I would here may that during long months passed in the various collections of the Poniusula, all, even be the most lumble employees, have shown a fireless helpfulness even at those periods of the year when the number of altendants was the smallest.

Professor Alexandro Leto, who, burely recovered from a gravic attack of influence, kindly mayed as my guide among the archives of Accisi, deserves a very particular mention. To the Synthe and municipality of that city I desire also to express my godifinds.

I cannot chose without a warm renembrance to the spiritual none of M. Francis dispersed in the mountains of Umbria and Pascauy.

Dear dwellers in Gt. Dunian, Portiunents, the Careeri, the Verm, Monte Celombe, you purlage remember the strange pilgrim who, though he were neither the freek nor the cord, used to talk with you of the Scraphic Father with an much love as the most piece Franciscan; you used to be surprised at his engerness to see everything, to look at everything, to thoese all the mosylored paths, You often tried to restrain him by telling him that there was not the mualbed relic, the most meagre indulgence in the far-away grotter to which he was dragging you, but you always ended by going with him, thinking that none but a Frenchman could be pessessed by a devotion so forvent and occumpandent.

Thank you, pious unclouites of Greecie, thank you for the broad that you went out and begged when I arrived at your hermitage bounded with cold and langue. If you read these times, read here my gratitude and also a little admiration. You are not all saints, but nearly all of you have hours of saintliness, flights of pure love.

If some pages of this look give you join, turn them over quickly; let no think that others of them will give you pleasure, and will make the name you lear, if possible, still more precious to you than it now is.

LIFE OF ST. FRANCIS

CHAPTER I

YOUTH

Assisi is to-day very much what it was six or seven hundred years ago. The fendal eastle is in ruins, but the aspect of the city is just the same. Its long-deserted streets, bordered by ancient houses, lie in terraces half-way up the steep hill-side. Above it Meunt Subasio proudly towers, at its feet lies outspread all the Umbrian plain from Perugia to Spoleto. The crewded houses elamber up the rocks like children a-tiptoe to see all that is to be seen; they succeed so well that every window gives the whole panerama set in its frame of rounded hills, from whose summits castles and villages stand sharply out against a sky of incomparable purity.

These simple dwellings contain no more than five or six little rooms, but the rosy hues of the stone of which they are built give them a wonderfully cheerful air. The one in which, according to the story, St. Francis was born has almost entirely disappeared, to make room for a church; but the street is so modest, and all that remains of the palazzo dei genitori di San Francesco is se precisely like the neighboring houses that the tradition must be correct. Francis entered into glory in his lifetime; it would be surprising if a sort of worship had not from the first been centred around the house in which he saw the light and where he passed the first twenty-five years of his life.

¹ Eleven hundred and one motres above the level of the sea; the plain around Assisi has an average of two hundred, and the town of two hundred and fifty, metres above.

² As In the majority of Tusean oities the dimensions of the houses were formorly fixed by law.

He was born about 1182. The biographies have preserved to us few details about his parents. His father, Pictre Bernardone, was a wealthy cloth-morehant. We know how different was the life of the merchants of that

The biographies say that he died (October 3, 1223) in his forty-fifth year. But the terms are not precise enough to make the date 1181 improbable. For that matter the question is of small importance. A Franciscan of Erfurt, about the middle of the thirteenth century, fixes the date at 1182. Portz, vol. xxiv., p. 193.

A number of different genealogies have been fabricated for Francis; they prove only one thing, the wreck of the Franciscan idea. How little they understood their hero, who thought to magnify and glorify him by making him spring from a noble family! "Que rero," says Father Snysken, S. J., "do ejus gentilito insigni disserit Waddingus, non lubet mihi attingero. Factis et virtuibus cluxit S. Franciscus non proarorum insignibus aut titulis, quos neo desideravit," (A. SS. p. 557a.) It could not be better said.

In the fourteenth contury a whole sycle of legends had gathered about his birth. It could not have been otherwise. They all grow out of the stery that tells of an old man who comes knocking at the parents' deer, begging them to let him take the infant in his arms, whou he announces that it will do great things. Under this form the episode certainly presents nothing impossible, but very soon marvellous incidents begin to gather around this unclous until it becomes unrecog-Barthotomew of Pisa has preserved it in almost its primitive form. Conform., 28a 2. Francis certainly had severat brothers [3 Sec., Mater . . . qua cum pra ceteris filits diligebat], but they have left no trace in history except the theident related farther on. Vide p. 44-Christofani publishes several official pieces concerning Angelo, St. Francis's brother, and his descendants: Storie d'Assisi, vol 1., p. 78 ff. In these documents Angelo is called Angelus Pice, and his son Johanneotus olim Angelt domine Pice, appellations which might be cited in faver of the nobic origin of Pica.

on his return chose to call him Francis.¹ Had he already determined on the education he was to give the child; did he name him thus because he even then intended to bring him up after the French fashion, to make a little Frenchman of him? It is by no means improbable. Perhaps, indeed, the name was only a sort of grateful homage tendered by the Assisan burgher to his noble clients beyond the Alps. However this may be, the child was taught to speak French, and always had a special fondness for both the language and the country.¹

These facts about Bernardone are of real importance; they reveal the influences in the midst of which Eraneis grew up. Merehants, indeed, play a considerable part in the religious movements of the thirteenth century. Their calling in some sense forced them to become colperters of ideas. What else could they do, on arriving in a country, but answer these who asked for news? And the news most eagerly looked for was religious news, for men's minds were turned upon very different subjects then from now. They accommodated themselves to the popular wish, observing, hearkening everywhere, keeping eyes and ears open, glad to find anything to tell; and little by little many of them became active propagandists of ideas concerning which at first they had been simply curious.

The importance of the part thus played by the mer^{&#}x27;8 Soc., 1; 2 Cel., 1, 1. Vide also 3 Soc., edition of Pesaro, 1831.

The langue doil was at this epoch the international language of Europe; in Italy it was the language of games and tourneys, and was spoken in the petty princely courts of Northern Italy. Vide Dante, De rulgari elequio, lib. I., cap. x. Brunetto Latini wrote in French because "the speech of France is more delectable and more common to all people." At the other end of Europe the Abbet of Stade, in Westphalia, spoke of the nobility of the Gallic dialect. Ann. 1224 apud Pertz, Script, xvi. We shall find St. Francis often making allusions to the tales of the Round Table and the Chanson de Roland.

ñ

clants as they came and went, everywhere sowing the now ideas which they had gathered up in their travels, has not been put in a clear enough light; they were often, unconsciously and quite involuntarily, the curriers of ideas of all kinds, especially of heresy and rebellion. It was they who made the success of the Waldenses, the Hugenses, the Humiliati, and many other sects.

Thus Bernardone, without dreaming of such a thing, hecarme the artisan of his son's religious vocation. The tales which he brought home from his travels seemed at first, portups, not to have aroused the child's attention, but they were like germs a long time buried, which suddenly, mader a warm ray of smulight, bring forth unlocked-for fruit

The boy's education was not carried very far; the school was in these days overshadowed by the church. The priests of San Giorgio were his teachers, and taught brim a libbe fatin. This huguage was spoken in Umbria mittle toward the middle of the thirteenth century; every one understand it and spoke it a libbe; it was still the language of sermons and of political deliborations.

He learned also to write, but with less success; all through his life we see him take up the pen only on rare excessions, and for but a few words. The autograph of

We must not be led astray by earthly remarks upon his ignorance, from which are might at first conclude that he knew absolutely nothing; for example, 2 Col., 3, 45; Quancis home iste beatus millis fucrit actionalis invutvitus. This evidently refers to aclouns such as the Franciscan ason came to apprehend it, and to the dogy in particular.

[&]quot;The ideas of the passage in Calone is bootf in evident proof of this.

Bion., 240; Cf. A. 88., p. 560a. 1 Col., 23.

Ozuman, Documents incidits pour servir à l'histoire littéraire d'Italie et le l'Ille au XIIIe siècle. Parla, 1851, 8vo, pp. 65, 68, 71, 73. Faurlol, Deente et les origines de la littérature italienne. Parla, 1864, 2 vols., 8 vo., 8., p. 382, 379, 429.

V. il Soc., 51 and 67; 2 Gd., 3, 110; Bon., 55; 2 Gd., 3, 99; End., Bernard the Besse, Turbi MS., fo. 96a, calls Brother Line the mostrary of St. Francis.

Sacro-Convento, which appears to be entirely authentic, shows extreme awkwardness; in general he dietated, signing his letters by a simple τ , the symbol of the cross of Jesus.¹

That part of his education which was destined to have most influence upon his life was the French language, which he perhaps spoke in his own family. It has been rightly said that to know two languages is to have two souls; in learning that of Franco the boy felt his heart thrill to the melody of its youthful poetry, and his imagination was mysteriously stirred with dreams of imitating the exploits of the French eavaliers.

But let us not anticipate. His early life was that of other children of his age. In the quarter of the town where his house is still shown ne vehicles are over seen; from morning till night the narrow streets are given over to the children. They play there in many groups, frolicking with an exquisite charm, very different from the little Romans, who, from the time they are six or seven years old, spend hours at a time squatting behind a pillar, or in a corner of a wall or a ruin, to play dice or "morra," putting a passionate ferecity even into their play.

In Umbria, as in Tuscany, children love above all things games in which they can make a parade; to play at soldiers or procession is the supreme delight of Assisan children. Through the day they keep to the narrow streets, but toward evening they go, singing and dancing, to one of the open squares of the city. These squares are one of the charms of Assisi. Every few paces an interval occurs between the houses looking toward the plain, and you find a delightful terrace, shaded by a few trees, the very place for enjoying the sunset without to sing one of its sphembers. Hither no doubt entire often the sear of Bernardone, leading one of those for and oles which you may see there to this day: from his very bubyhood be ween a prince among the children.

¹ See page 357, n. 8. Bon., 51 and 308.

^{&#}x27;1 Cel., 16; 3 Soc., 10; 23; 24; 33; 2 Cel., 1, 8; 3, 67. See also the Testament of St. Clara and the Speculum, 119a.

VOUTH 7

Thomas of Colanic traws an appatting picture of the education of that day. He describes parents inciting their children to vice, and driving them by main force to wrong doing. Francic responded only for quickly to these unhappy tessons?

His father's predession and the possibly noble origin of his norther revised him almost for the level of the titled families of the country; money, which he spout with both hands, made him welcome among them. Well pleased to enjoy theoremizes at his expense, the young nobles paid him a west of court. As to Bornardone, he was too hoppy to see his non-associating with them to be niggarelly so be the means. He was misorly, and the course of this history will show, but his pride and self-concept exceeded his avaries.

Pica, his wife, partle and modest creature,? concerning whom the Inequaphers have been only too become, any all this, and measured user it in adence, but though weak as mothers are, also would not despair of her sen, and when the neighbors told her of Francish companies, she would ashely coply, "What are you thinking about?"

I Province a magnetine of the well distance embedding. They expend the effect of the middle expensed overlap of matter provides and from matter of magnetic fragments of the expense of th

A P. Mall, I. 1 If all melons, $45, $ If the to its modified implication in healing it and I known at relation, but it makes it makes to include a finite the manuscal decided and a state in the finite of the control of modes about I and the include all makes a control of the finite of the finite of the finite of the include all I are included in the include of the am very sure that, if it plusses God, he will become a good Christian." The words were instural enough from a mother's lips, but later on they were held to have been truly prophetic.

How far did the young mus permit himself to be led on? It would be difficult to say. The question which, as we are told, termented Brother Lee, could only have suggested itself to a discussed inagination. Themes of Colano and the Three Companions agree in picturing him as going to the worst excesses. Later biographers speak with more circumspection of his worldly correct, A too widely credited story gathered from Celano's narrative was medified by the chapter general of 1260, and the frankness of the early biographers was, no doubt, one of the causes which most effectively contributed to their definitive condemnation there years later.

Their stalements are in necessar obsence; according to them the sen of Bernardone not only patterned bimself after the young men of his age, he made it a paint of honor to exceed thou. What with eccentricities, halfour-ories, pranks, predigalities, he ended by achieving a sent of celebrity. He was forever in the attracts with his companions, compelling allention by his extravagant or funtastic attire. Even at night the joyona company kept O'Plac reading given by the Conform., 14a, 1, Meritarum gentlet det filium ipsum novadis uffuturum, weems believ than that of 2 Col., 1, 1. Maltarum gratia Dei filiarum putrem ipsum novaritis offuturum. — Cf. 8 Soc., 2.

Bermedo of Bosso, Turin MS., 102 h.: An integer caracte decider and quod non extersisset a Sancto mernit obtained a Deo quod virgo esset. Cf. Conform., 211n, 1, and A. 184., p. 7680f.

¹ to In illa antiphana qua incipit: His cir in canitatibus natutus insolentor, flat tulis mutalis: Dicinis karismutibus presentas est cie monter." Arohiv., vl., p. 35.

Vide p. 805, the desistant of the absolute of 1963 ordaining the destruction of legends welfer than that of Henry altera.

up their merrymakings, causing the lown to ring with their neday seasys.

At this very time the trembadones were reaming over This towns of Northern Haly and bringing brilliant los livities and especially Courts of Love into vegue. If they worked apon the presions, they also node appeal to horlings of company and delicacy; it was this that served Princip. In the midst of his exceptor he was always refined and considerate, excefully identaining from every lane or indecent attenues. Already his chief angication was terrise above the commonphace. Tortured with the degice for that which is for off and high, he had convolved a seat of previous for chiralry, and foreying that dissipation was one of the distinguishing features of nability, he had thrown bineself into it with all his seat.

that he who, at twenty, goes from pleasure to pleasure with the heart not absolutely choosed to good, unust now

¹⁴ Cal., 1 and 2., 69, 4 Son., 9 (12) A 163, 7466, Vigoria of Humayata, Spec Last, 165, 29, exp. 30

^{*} Plein Vidal was at the court of Bouifsee, Marquis of Montferial, about 110% and 19hed his surcessedings as sold that he desired to establish Rele Idinaelf there | K. Bastech, Proce 3 old a Inches, Berlin, 1967, ii. Mr. Ern. Monord, First and old proventile, Rotto, 1999, col 47. Dan idental read this piece to have no bleast the favor with which this post idimed the lapes of Italy and Assisted its in Republic ion. This political unto to found tooks in a feater of Manfaed H. I mate, addressed to Pfopo Vidal (V. Mones), La vit, val dis e Grandline Patelli was also at this count or well as Rejudenced of Vacqueryes (11901-1907). Polynet de Romento partial measily will like life to their . Regulard of Ventadour HIM HIMO, Published Assessment Him Prival and many others about There is longer or shorter time. Very secon the Railings began to ring in Program of atmosphishings this Manford Largers, and Ather Manquis of Malespina (116), 1910, Pretro della Carassina scho in 1806 stirred up the Loudenst toward against Heavy VI, Phetra della Mula, who about PRESONS at the sousst of Cortemplets - Passengents from their pools may be found to Monact, op off , e.a. 49 $

^{*}Halon Br. S. Car. L. L.

t Cam read physicians interpress willest alliquees so protectives, Which 10.

and then, at some turning of the road, become aware that there are hungry folk, who could live a month on what he spends in a few hours on frivolity. Francis saw them, and with his impressionable nature for the moment forgot everything else. In thought he put himself in their place, and it sometimes happoned that he gave them all the money he had about him and even his clothes.

One day he was husy with some customors in his father's shop, when a man came in, begging for charity in the name of God. Losing his patience Francis sharply turned him away; but quickly reproaching himself for his harsliness he thought, "What would I not have done if this man had asked something of mo in the name of a count or a baron? What ought I not to have done when he came in the name of God? I am no bottor than a clown!" Leaving his customers he ran after the boggar.

Bernardone had been well pleased with his son's commercial aptitude in the early days when the young man was first in his father's employ. Francis was only too proficient in spending monoy; he at least know well how to make it.2 But this satisfaction did not last long. Francis's bad companions were exorcising over him a most pernicious influence. The time came when ho could no longer endure to be separated from thom; if ho heard their call, nothing could keep him, he would leave everything and go after them.3

All this time political ovents were hurrying on in Umbria and Italy; after a formidable struggle the allied republics had forced the empire to recognize thom. the immortal victory of Legnano (May 29, 1176) and the Peace of Constance (June 25, 1183) the Lombard League had wrested from Frederick Barharossa almost all the protogatives of power; little use left to the emperor but imagina and outward show.

¹ 1 Cel., 17; 3 Sec., 3; Bon., 7. Cf. A. SS., p. 562.

² 1 Cel., 2; Bon., 6; Vit. 200. apud, A. SS., p. 560.

Youn

From one and of the Peninenta to the other visions of liberty were making in ata heat high. For an instant it we med as if all listy was about to rise up as one man and had the foreigner from its borders; but the readiles of the other green from its borders; but the readiles of the other were boretrong for them to see that head blearly without a common independence in precurious and illustry. Home VI, the successed of Radarceae (1984-1966, had Italy under a voke of ison; he might perhaps in the end links manned the domination of the empire, if the carear had not been middenly and about by a promise two death.

Yet he had not look adde to just fethere men ideal. The commissed mesons at which was chaking the math of France revealerated beyond the Mps.

Although a city of accord mit, Amini had not been todaid in the great struggler for independence. The had been accordy chartered, but bed her franchise, and was addiged to automit to themad of Findia, Duke of Epolete, who from the heights of his forties hept her in milijectures.

Hat values langurenast III, execusively the peculiational theoryte foliassions is, 11/19/8 there exist cleans because langual for his first lines. He issued in the first lines the issued in the first lines. The issued is the peculiated as his could the first in the set that their peculiated as his could the size in the lines have been been the first in the first interval the peculiates as a size of the first interval the peculiates as a size of the first interval the first interval in the first interval in the first interval in the first interval in the first interval.

Lieben After grune durief Ariff, Abrieb Alanigi von von blies Chansborenter elfel nert kannifischer eine Spurchiebel. Man erincognie nachen Ulaus einernab unb the road to Nami than they rashed to the assaulcasile. The arrival of envoyer charged to take sion of it as a ponlified domain by no means got pause. Notime stone of it was left approximation, with incredible rapidity they enclosed their cirwalls, parts of which are still etaneting, their forming a witness to the zeal with which the whole tion labored on them.

[·] Per Balle. Tratas meno androis dig ill wording colline of the programming a distabiliana. Ascrittuding of Magazinius — A. Colletofacia, p. 20, 188

It is natural to think that Francis, then reyears old, was one of the most gathant laborers a glorious days, and it was perhaps there that he the habit of carrying stones and wickling the which was destined to nerve him so well a fee later.

Unhappily his fellow-ritizens had not the a profit by their hard-won liberty. The lower who in this revolution had become aware a strongth, determined to follow out the victory by possession of the property of the nobles. The took refuge in their fortified houses in the interiority, or in their castles in the authorise, The people burned down several of the latter, who counts and barons made request of aid and once the mighboring cities.

Porngia was at this time at the apoges of its and had already made many efforts to reduce I submission. It therefore received the fugitive alastity, and making their cause its own, declar upon Assisi. This was in 1202. An encount

¹ All these evenis are related in the Hesta Innocentii III. contance, edited by Italiza: Migne, Inn. op., vol. 1., ed., a especially the fetter of Innocent, Rectoribus Tusche: Mirari & April 16, 1108. Migne, vol. 1., ed., 75–77. Pottlind, No. B2 ² See Enigl Bonazzi, Storia di Pernyha, 2 vols., 8vo. Paril 1870, vol. 1., esp. v., pp. 257–823.

liances without authorization of the commons. Rural serfage was maintained, which proves that the revolution had been directed by the burghers, and for their own profit. Ten years more were not, however, to elapse before the common people also would succeed in achieving liberty. In this cause we shall again see Francis fighting on the side of the oppressed, earning the title of Patriarch of religious democracy which has been accorded him by one of his compatriots.²

The agreement being made the prisoners detained at Perugia were released, and Francis returned to Assisi. He was twenty-two years old.

¹ See this arbitration in Cristofani, op. cit., p. 98 ff.

¹ Cristofani, toc. cit., p. 70.

CHAPTER 11

STAGES OF CONVERSION

Spaing 1984 Spaing 1988

his return to Assisi Francis at once resumed lies ands of fife; perhaps he even tried in some desermands up for test time. Fites, games, festivals, saipations began again. He did his part in them I that he soon felt gravely it!! For bung weeks he death so closely in the face that the physical crisis at about a morat one. Thomas of Celano has profession as in incident of Francis's convaluement, the gaining strongth little by little and had began to at the house, when one day he felt a deaire to walk, to contomplate nature quietly, and no take held of life. I bearing on a stick he bent his steps the city gate.

neared one, called Porto Nuova, is the very one opens upon the threat seemery. Immediately on allowing through it one finds one's self in the open country; of the hill hides the city, and ents off every soundight come from it. Before you lies the winding a Poligner; at the left the imposing mass of Mount o; at the right the Undrian plain with its farme, lages, its cloud-like hills, on whose pleques pines, eaks, the vine, and the clive-tree sheet alread an usuable. The whole country sparkles with beauty, a beauty harmonious and thoroughly human, that is, made to the measure of man.

¹¹ Cal., 8; et. Hen., 8, and A. 88, p. 563a.

Francis had hoped by this sight to recover the delicious sensations of his yenth. With the sharpened sensibility of the convalescent he breathed in the eders of the spring-time, but spring-time did not come, as he had expected, to his heart. This smiling nature had for him only a message of sadness. He had believed that the breezes of this beloved country-side would carry away the last shudders of the fever, and instead he felt in his heart a discouragement a theusand-fold more painful than any physical ill. The miserable emptiness of his life suddenly appeared before him; he was terrified at his solitude, the solitude of a great soul in which there is no altar.

Memeries of the past assailed him with intolerable bitterness; he was seized with a disgust of himself, his former ambitions seemed to him ridiculous or despicable. He went home overwhelmed with the weight of a new suffering.

In such hours of moral anguish man seeks a refuge either in love or in faith. Unhappily the family and friends of Francis were incapable of understanding him. As to religion, it was for him, as for the greater number of his centemporaries, that crass fetiohism with Christian terminelogy which is far from having entirely disappeared. With certain men, in fact, piety consists in making ene's self right with a king mere powerful than any other, but also more severe and capricions, whe is called Ged. One proves one's leyalty to him as to other sovereigns, by putting his image mere er less everywhere, and punctually paying the impests levied by his ministers. If you are stingy, if you cheat, you run the risk of being severely chastised, but there are courtiers around the king who willingly render services. Fer a receo able recompense they will acide a favorable moment to admitty make away with the sentence of your condensation or to slip before the prince a form of plenay alsolution which in a mount of good hunner be will sign without booking at it.

Finch was the religious basis upon which Francis had lived up to this that. He did not so much as dream of socking the operatual balm which he meaded for the heading of he wounds. By a hely violence he was to arrive at last at a pure and virtle faith; but the read to this point to long, and sown thick with electroles, and at the moment at which we have arrived be hed not yet entered upon it, he did not even suspect its existence, all he knew was that pleasure leads to mithinguess, to eather and soll contempt.

He know this, and yet be non-about to throw himself once more interaction of ple cares. The body is no weak, so promote is time to the old paths, that it make them of itself, the moment we energe to will done not step it. Though no longer under any allower with respect to it, Francis is itumed to bis former life. Was he trying to divert his mind, to forget that day of buth r thought? We might suppose no, we ing the cardor with which he thought into himself into him as y projects.

An apportunity reflered itself for him to realize his theamned place. A knight of Variai, perhaps one of those who had been in explicitly with term at Perugua, was prespering to got to Yealia under such as from Court there

It is an expectation that I in the country of Neglect to have the there is nothing a somewhat in this plane . I am much maple I that intelliges and good some that is that in the part and good some two states to change the subject formal and there go glove with a close to be expected in the What a some lake to the area to be important contracts not to a format in Montal and the above on Montal Marials we Montal Line had to select the applicable as a late.

^{1 1} that af and 4.

tile. The latter was to join Gaultier de Pricane, who was in the south of Italy fighting on the sade of Innocent III. Gaultier's renewn was immense all through the Princental ho was held to be one of the most gallant brights of the time. Francis's heart bounded with joy; it seemed to him that at the side of such a here he should soon cover himself with glory. His departure was decided upon, and he gave himself up, without reserve, to his joy.

The made his preparations with extentations prodigative. It is equipment, of a princely beauty, soon became the universal subject of conversation. It was all the more talked about became the chief of the expedition, rained perhaps by the revolution of 1200 or by the exposes of a long captivity, were constrained to order things much more modestly. But with Francis kindliness was much atrouger than love of display. The gave his samptions clothing to a poor knight. The longuables do not say whether or not it was to the very one whom he was to accompany. To see him running hither and thiblier in all the builts of preparation one would have thought him the son of a great lead. His companions were doubtless not allow to feel almfed by his ways and to promise themselves to make him ernelly expinte them. As for him, he perceived nothing of the jewlousien which he was exciting, and night and day he thought only of his future glory. In his dremus he seemed to see his parents' house completely transformed. Instead of lades of cloth he saw there only gleaning bucklers hanging on the walls, and mine of all kinds are in a seignorial coatle. The max binaself there, beside a noble and homitiful laide, and he never majected that in this vision Thora warring presage of the future which was reserved for him. Never had any one ocen him no communicative, no radiant; and when he was asked for the hundredth time whomee came all this joy, he would reply with surprising montance; "I know that I abill lose men great princa,"

¹⁸ San, 5. In the existing white of the documents it is impossible to know whom this sense designates, for at that time is reached by a number of counts who are only to be all thegether the terms of their nucles. The three following are possible 1. General cover de Campillo, who in 1916 paid homego for his paracrets to the communical Orvido: Lountichermachedi Orsich, Ash. 200 Mal, lith 200 cm., 1640. Ill., p. 47. 2. Gentilieromes flines Albert's, who with others I ad needs doubtlon of a moundary to the Illshop of Policies Conferences from In animenti of April 10, 1910; thehells, Rober Street, 1, p. 607; tent hust, 8974. B. Gentli's comes Manageth ; whom we that to July, 1996, assuring to Palurum the victory over the temps west by house and 111. against Marckwald; Huilland Drebothes, Hot. day 2, 1 p. 30 ff - C3 - Fox thust, 1996. Centa Innoventi, Migno, vol. 1, annal, M. 12 Mailland Broholles, low, cit., pages 40, 94, 59, 101. It is seroing to consider that Contile could hore be a more affective; the William was elected nomine.

^{*1} Col., 4; #800., 5.

⁸ Soc. 6; 2 Cal., 1, 2; Hom., 8,

The day of departure arrived at last. Francis on horastock, the little buckler of a page on his arm, hadualien to his untal city with joy, and with the little troop took the road to Spoletic which winds around the basis of Meant Subscio.

What happened next? The documents do not say, They conflue themselves to reporting that that very evening Francis had a vision which decided him to return to Assist. Perhaps it would not be far from the truth to conjecture that once fairly on the way the young modes fook them revenge on the son of Bernardone for his airs used a future prince. At twenty years one hardly purdone things like those. If, as we me often resured, there is a pleasure menspected by the profuse in getting even with a stranger, it must be an almost divine delight to get even with a young coverant upon whom our law to exercise an righterman vengence.

¹¹ Cel., 5 : 4 800 , 5 : 2 thd., 1, tt ; Ban., 0,

[#] H Hard, D ; Dane, U; 2 Cal., 1, 12.

Arriving at Spoleto, Francis touk to his had. A fevor was consuming him; in a few hours he had seen all his dreams crumble away. This very next day he took the road back to Assisi.

So unexpected a return amon a great atir in the little city, and was a cruol blow to his parents. As for him, he doubled his charities to the poor, and sought to keep aloof from society, but his ald companious came theck ing about him from all quarters, hoping to find in him once more the tireless purveyor of their allo wants. He let them have their way.

Nevertholess a great change had taken place in him. Neither pleasures nor work could long hold him; hu spent a portion of his days in long country rambles, often accompanied by a friend most different from them whom until now we have seen about him. The name of this friend is not known, but from certain indications one is inclined to believe that he was Bombarone da Bevig Tin, the future Brother Eline."

18 Soo., 6 ; 2 Cal., 1, 2,

Those days are reculted by Colone with a very particular providen. It is very fraprobable that Franch, usually so reserved us to his percental experience, should have table little about them CP 15d , 3, 243, and 42, of, Bong 144). On the other bond, and dog for lifts the having lower in formed on this matter by Brother Elian. (I strongly enspect the begond which talk of an old race appearing on the day Francis was born and logging parmission to take the cliffs to blanting maybeg. "To day, two infunts were born-tide one, who will be among the hest of mean and another, who will be among the weest" of laving been invented by the celebrat ngoing Drother Ellie. It is existent that such a story is almed at some one. Whom, if not ldm who werenflerward to appear as the Anti-Francis?) We have nufficient details about the obvious it of disciples to know that nous of them is been in question. There is nothing surprising in the fact that Ellies does not appear in the earliest years of the Order (1209-1219), because after baying practical at Asals! ble double calling of enhantmenter and enry lage trimmer is at a all ras et doschut pusrulus psatterium legere, Balliuloene, je 40% lie wist scriptor at Hologue (Each, 13). And from the psychological redul of Francis now went back to his reflections at the time of his recovery, but with less of hitterness. His own head and his triend agreed in wrying to him that it is possible no longer to trust either in plenones or in glory and yet to find worthy causes to which to consecrate one's life. It is at this moment that religious thought scene to have awaked in him. From the moment that he saw this new way of life his desire to tun in it had all the tery importantly which he put into all his retions. The was continually colling upon his friend and leading him apart into the meet requestered putto.

But intense conflicts are indescribable. We struggle, we suffer alone. It is the metriand wrestling of Boths of, mystorious and solitary. The road of Francis was great enough to enduce this tragic duel. His friend bud maryellously understood his part in this confest. He gave a few rare composes, but much of the time he combented himself with manifesting his solicitude by following Francis everywhere and never asking to know more than be conditable by

Often Francis directed his steps to a graffe in this country near Assisi, which he entend alone. This rowky rave concented in the midst of the object term became for faithful Franciscans that which Gothocounce is for Christians. Thus Francis relieved his avaichniged locart by heavy grouns. Monetimes, seized with a real horror for the where this hapothesis would admirably explain the necessity which Ellin mas deathed always to exceed as cover like master. Attill it is maked difficult to understand why the land and not maked Liberbore, but the present of Liberbore, but the present of Liberbore, but the present of Liberbore and the later and Almedia addition of the later and may have been referred a later the later a full.

Havidin is a simple farm three quarters of an hear methan of daried, almost helf was to Polyiquame. Half an hear from Arabida the dies from of Hearights to a gratter, which may very well be that of which is are about to epeak.

disorders of his youth, he would implere mercy, but the greater part of the time his face was turned toward the future; feverishly he sought for that higher truth to which he lenged to dedicate himself, that pearl of great price of which the gespel speaks: "Whosoever seeks, finds; he who asks, receives; and to him who knecks, it shall be eponed."

When he came out after long hours of seclusien the pallor of his countonance, the painful tension of his features told plainly enough of the intensity of his asking and the vielence of his knecks.

The inward man, to berrow the language of the mystics, was not yet formed in him, but it needed only the co-casion to bring about the final break with the past. The occasion soon presented itself.

His friends were making centinual efferts to induce him to take up his eld habits again. One day he invited them all to a sumptuous banquet. They thought they had conquered, and as in old times they proclaimed him king of the rovels. The feast was prolonged far into the night, and at its clese the guests rushed out into the streets, which they filled with song and uproar. Suddenly they perceived that Francis was no longer with them. After long searching they at last discovered him far behind them, still helding in his hand his scoptro of king of misrule, but plunged in se prefeund a revery that he seemed to be riveted to the ground and uncenscieus of all that was going on.

"What is the matter with you?" they cried, bustling abent him as if to awaken him.

"Den't you see that he is thinking of taking a wife?" said one.

"Yes," answered Francis, arousing himself and looking at them with a smile which they did not recognize.

¹ Cel., 6; 2 Cel., 1, 5; 8 Soc., 8, 12; Bon., 10, 11, 12.

"I am thinking of laking a wife more legatiful, more rich, more pure than you could ever imagine."

This reply marks a decisive stage in his inner life. By it he cut the heat links which bound him to brivial pleasures. It remains for as to see through what struggles he was to give himself to thed, after having torn himself free from the world. His friench probably understood adding of all that had taken place, but he had become aware of the abyes that was opening between them and him. They seem accepted the situation.

As for himself, no longer having any reason for caution, he gave himself up more than ever to his passion for additude. If he often wept over his past dissipations unit wondered how he could have lived acting without tasting the litterness of the dreps of the enchanted cup, he never allowed himself to be overwhelmed with vain regrets.

The poor had remained faithful to him. They gave him an admiration of which he knew humself to be unsworthy, yet which had for him an infinite aweelness. The future grow bright techine in the light of their gratitude, of the timid, trembling affection which they deared not after last which his heart revealed to him; this worship which had does not deserve to day he will deserve to marrow, at least he promises himself to do all he can to deserve it.

To understand these feelings one must understand the combition of the poor of a place like Assisi. In an agricultural country presents does not, as describer, almost inevitably involve moral destriction, that degeneration of the entire human being which remotes claimly condificult. Most of the poor persons whom Francis knew were in straits because of war, of had harvests, or of illemose. In such cases underial oneser is but a mostly part. By mpathy is the thing meeted above all. Francis had treasure of it to havious upon them.

¹⁴ Mars . 7: 1 Col . 7: 22 Col . 1. 11; 13 Mars . 10.

He was well required. All servows are sistere; a secret intelligence establishes itself between troubled hearts, however diverse their griefs. The poor people felt that their friend also suffered; they did not precisely know with what, but they forgot their own secretors in pilying their benefactor. Suffering is the true concent of love. For men to love can't other truly, they must have shed tears together.

As yet no influence strictly exclusive to be been felt by Francis. Doubtless there was in his beaut that leaves of Christian faith which enters one's being without his being aware; but the interior transformation which was going on in him was us yet the finit of his own instnition. This period was drawing to a close. His thought was soon to find expression, and by that very not to receive the stump of external circumstances. Christian instruction will give a precise form to ideas of which are yet he has but vague glimpoes, but he will find in this form a frame in which his thought will perhaps bear somesthing of its originality and vigor; the new wine will be put into old wine-skins.

By degrees he was becoming calm, was faciling in the contemplation of nature joys which up to this time he had sipped but has filly dissect unconsciously, and of which his was now learning to relish the flavor. The draw from them not simply anothing; in his locart for felt new compassions springing into life, and with these the decays to not, to give himself, to cry aloud to them sities perched upon the hill-tops, threatening as waxious where ye one another before the fray, that they should be recorded and love one mather.

Cortainly, at this time Francis had not glimped of what he was sometime to become; but these house we perhaps the most important in the evolution of his thought, it is to them that his life ower that air of liberty, that perfumo of the fields which make it as different from the piety of the sacristy as from that of the drawing room.

About this time be much a pilgrimage to Rome, whether to ask counset of his biends, whether as a pennenci imposed by his confessor, or from a mero impulse, accome knows. Perhaps he thought that in a visit to the Holy Apactles, as people said then, he should find the answers to all the questions which he was asking himself.

At any rate he went. It is hardly probable that he reretived from the year any religious influence, for his bingimplies relate the prined surprise which he experienced when he saw in Saint Peter's how meagur were the offerings of pilgrims. The wanted to give everything to the prince of the aposities, and surplying his purse he throw its entire contents upon the tends.

This journey was marked by a more important incident. Many a time when succerning the paor he had asked himself it be himself was able to endure poverty; no one knows the weight of a burden until he has carried it, at least to a moment, upon his sawn shoulders. He desired to know what it is like to have nothing, and to depend for bread upon the electry or the caption of the power by.

There were swarms of hopgone crowding the Piezza Inforcethe great besilies. He horrowed the rage of one of them, lending had his garment in exchange, and a whole day to stend them, facting, with outetrached land. The set was a great victory, the triumph of compression over natural pude. Returning to Arobi, he doubled his kindnesses to the set when he had truly the right to call himself the lumber. With such sentiments he could not long compact the influence of the Clauch.

On all the readsules in the environe of the city them were then, as more conservation chapels. Year after his must have heard mass in these rustic sanctuaries, alone with the celebrant. Recognizing the tendency of simple natures to bring heme to themselves everything that they hear, it is easy to understand his emotion and agitation when the priest, turning toward him, would read the gespel for the day. The Christian ideal was revealed to him, bringing an answer to his secret anxieties. And when, a few mements later, he would plunge into the ferest, all his thoughts would be with the poer carpenter of Nazareth, who placed himself in his path, saying to him, even to him, "Follew thou me."

Nearly two years had passed since the day when he felt the first shock; a life of renunciation appeared to him as the goal of his efferts, but he felt that his spiritual novitiate was not yet ended. He suddenly experienced a bitter assurance of the fact.

Ho was riding on herseback one day, his mind more than over possessed with the desire to lead a life of absolute devotion, when at a turn of the read he feund himself face to face with a leper. The frightful malady had always inspired in him an invincible repulsion. Ha, could not control a movement of herror, and by instinct he turned his horse in another direction.

If the shock had been severe, the defeat was complete. He repreached himself bitterly. To cherish such fine projects and show himself se cowardly! Was the knight of Christ then going to give up his arms? He retraced his steps and springing from his herse he gave to the astounded sufferer all the mency that he had; then kissed his hand as he would have done to a priest. This new victory, as he himself saw, marked an era in his spiritual life.

¹ To this day in the centre and south of Italy they kiss the hand of priests and monks.

² See the Will. Cf. 3 Soc., 11; 1 Cel., 17; Bon., 11; A. SS., p. 566.

It is far indeed from hatred of evil to love of good. Those are more numerous than wo think who, after severe experience, have reneunced what the ancient liturgies call the world, with its pomps and lusts; but the greater number of them have not at the bottom of their hearts the smallest grain of pure love. In vulgar souls disillusion leaves only a frightful egoism.

This victory of Francis had been so sudden that he desired to complete it; a few days later he went to the lazaretto. One can imagine the stupefaction of these wretches at the entrance of the brilliant cavalier. If in our days a visit to the sick in our hospitals is a real event awaited with feverish impatience, what must not have been the appearance of Francis among these poor recluses? One must have seen sufferers thus abandened, to understand what jey may be given by an affectionate word, sometimes even a simple glance.

Moved and transported, Francis folt his whele being vibrate with unfamiliar sensations. For the first time he heard the unspeakable accounts of a gratitude which cannot find werds burning enough to express itself, which admires and adores the benefactor almost like an angel frem heaven.

¹ 8 Soc., 11; Bon., 18.

OHAPPER HE

THE CHURCH ABOUT 1209

Sr. Francis was impired as much as any men may be, but it would be a pulpable error to study him equal from his ago and from the combitions in which he lived.

We know that he desired and believed his life to be an initation of desire, but what we know about the Christ is in fact so little, that St. Francis's life lower none of its strangeness for that. His conviction that he was but an imitator preserved him from all temptation to pride, and enabled him to preclaim his views with incomparable vigor, without seeming in the least to be presching himself.

We must therefore neither holder him from external influences nor show him ton dependent on them. Thining the period of his life at which we are new arrived, 1905, 1206, the religious situation of Haly must more than at any other time have influenced him thought and myod him into the pull which he fluidly entered.

The mards of the chrgy were accomplished according any serious reform impossible. If some aroung the heresics of the time were pure and without represent, many were trivial and impure. Here and there is few voices were raised in protest, but the prophesyings of Gloscohino di Piere had no more power than the coof St. Hildegards to put a stop to wickedness. Take Weebling, the pious Franciscan annalist, begins tin chronicle with this appalling picture. The advance in historic research permits us to retouch it somowhat mere in detail, but the conclusion remains the same; without Francis of Assisi the Church would perhaps have foundered and the Cathari would have wen the day. The little poor man, driven away, cast out of doors by the creatures of Innocent III., saved Christianity.

We cannot here make a thorough study of the state of the Church at the beginning of the thirteeuth century; it will suffice to trace some of its most prominent features.

The first glance at the secular clergy brings out into startling prominence the ravages of simony; the traffic in ecclesiastical places was carried on with boundless audacity; benefices were put up to the highest bidder, and Innocent III. admitted that fire and sword alone could heal this plague. Prolates who declined to be bought by propine, foes, were held up as astounding exceptions!

"Thoy are stones for understanding," it was said of the officers of the Roman curia, "wood for justice, fire for wrath, iron for forgiveness; deceitful as foxes, proud as bulls, greedy and insatiate as the minotaur." The praises showered upon Pope Eugenius III. for robuffing a priest who, at the beginning of a lawsuit, offered him a golden mark, speak only too plainly as to the morals of Rome in this respect.

The bishops, on their part, found a thousand methods, often most cut of keeping with their calling, for exterting

¹ Bull of June 8, 1198, Quamvis. Migne, 1., col. 220; Potthast, 265.

² For example, Pierre, Cardinal of St. Chryzogone and former Bishop of Meaux, who in a single election refused the dazzling offer of five hundred silver marks. Alexander III., Migne's edition, epist. 895.

² Fasciculus rerum expetend. et fugiend., t. ii., 7, pp. 254, 255 (Brown, 1690).

John of Salisbury, Policrat. Migne, v. 15.

violations, incosts, minitories, recur on almost every page. It is easy to see that even un tancconf III, might feel himself helphas and tempfed to yield to discouragement, in the face of so many illa.

The best spirits were turning feward the Ocient, asking themselves if perchauce the Greek Church might not suddenly come forward to parify all these abuses, and receive for hercelf the inheritance of her sister.

The clergy, though no longer respected, still everawed the people through their superstitions ferror of their power. Here and there might have been perceived many a foromarning of direful revolts; the reach to Rome were crowded with member factoring to claim the protection of the Holy Soc against the people uniong whom they lived. The Pope would promptly declare an interdict, but it was not to be expected that such a resource would avail forever.

To maintain the privileges of the Church the papary was often obliged to apread the mainter of its protection over those who abserved it lead. Its clients were not always as interesting as the unfortunate Ingelburge. It would be easier to give unreserved admiration to the conduct of Innovent III, if in this matter one could feel cortain that his only interest was to maintain the cause of a poor abandoned woman. But it is only for existent that he desired above all to keep up the exclusionical

¹ Vide Bull Pertquam results Domins of July 11, 1200 - Pottlessi 284C.

⁹ V. Annales Studenses [Monumento Germanic Listeries. No rigidarum, 4, 10], ad ann. 1287. Amont the comprehensive plotures of the situation of the Church in the thirteenth contains, there is no ne to ore interesting than that left us by the Cardinal Jacques do Vitry in his Histories doubtlist Libri due quorum prior to leat-tile, after the identitis histories nomine insachitur Duaci, 1597, 10ma, pp. 250–150.

V. Honorlos III., Horoy's collibor, 136 (L. ep. 105, 195, 455, 265, 273)
 B., 128, 104 (195, 120, etc.

immunities. This is very evident in his intervention in favor of Waldemur, Bishop of Schleawig.

Yot we must not assume that all was corrupt in the bosom of the Church; then, as always, the evil made more acise than the good, and the voices of those who desired a reformation aroused only passing interest.

Among the populace there was superstition unimaginal do; the pulpit, which ought to have shed shroad some fille light, was as yet open outy to the bishops, and the few pushors who did not neglect their duty in this regard accomplished very little, being too much absorbed in other duties. It was the birth of the menticant orders which obliged the entire body of secular elergy to take up the practice of presching.

Public worship, reduced to liturgical coronomies, no longer preserved anything which appealed to the intelligence; it was more and more becoming a sort of self-seting magic formula. Once upon this read, the absurd was not far distant. These who deemed themselves pions told of mirroles performed by relies with me need of aid from the moral set of faith.

In one rase a parrot, being enried away by a lite, attored the invocation door to like mistress, "Starte Thoma adjust me," and was mineculcously rescued. In another, a morelant of Groningen, baving particulation arm of St. John the Daptist, grow rich as if by enclantment as long as he kept it concealed in his longe, but was reduced to beggany so soon us, his secret being discrevered, the relie was taken away from him and placed in a church."

There stories, we must almorre, to not come from hyper-

I Dialogus infrasularum of Cesar of Halsterby, h fotenaço's edition, Calogue, 1954, 2 vots , 1956, t if , pp. 1750 and 125 (This book with the Oablen lagard of Giacema di Varagala, gives the less blea of the state of religious throught in the thirteenth existing.

rant enthusiasts, hidden away in obscure country places; they are given us by one of the most learned monks of his time, who relates them to a nevice by way of forming his mind!

Relics, then, were held to be neither more nor less than talismans. Not alone did they perform miracles upon those who were in no special state of faith or devotion, the more potent among them healed the sick in spite of themselves. A chronicler relates that the body of Saint Martin of Tours had in 887 been secretly transported to some remote hiding place for fear of the Danish invasion. When the time came for bringing it home again, there were in Tournine two impotent men who, thanks to their infirmity, gained large sums by begging. They were thrown into great terror by the tidings that the relies were being brought back: Saint Martin would cortainly heal them and take away their means of livelihood. Their fears were only too well founded. They had taken to flight, but being too lamo to walk fast they had not yet crossed the frentier of Touraine when the saint arrived and healed them!

Hundreds of similar stories might be collected, statistics might be made up to show, at the accession of Innocent III., the greater number of opiscopal thrones occupied by unworthy bishops, the religious houses peopled with idle and debauched monks; but would this give a truly accurate picture of the Church at this epoch? I do not think so. In the first place, we must recken with the choice spirits, who were without doubt more numerous than is generally supposed. Five righteeus men would have saved Sodom; the Almighty did not find them there, but he perhaps might have found them had He Himself made search for them instead of trusting to Let. The Church of the thirteenth contury had them, and it was for their sakes that the whirlwind of heresy did not sweep it away.

But this is net all: the Church of that time effered a neble spectacle of meral grandenr. We must learn to lift eur eyes from the wretched state of things which has just been pointed eut and fix them on the pentifical threne and recognize the beauty of the struggle there geing en: a pewer wholly spiritual undortaking to cemmand the rulers of the world, as the soul masters the bedy, and triumphing in the end. It is true that beth soldiers and generals of this army were often little better than ruffians, but here again, in order to be just, we must understand the end they aimed at.

In that ireu age, when brute force was the only force, the Church, notwithstanding its wounds, effered to the world the spectacle of peasants and labering men receiving the humble homage of the highest petentates of earth, simply because, seated on the throne of Saint Peter, they represented the moral law. This is why Alighieri and many others before and after him, though they might heap curses on wicked ministers, yet in the depths of their heart were never without an immonse eempassion and an ardent love for the Church which they never ceased to call their mother.

Still, everybedy was not like them, and the vices of the elergy explain the innumerable herosics of that day. All of them had a certain success, from those which were simply the outery of an entraged conscience, like that of the Waldenses, to the most absurd of them all, like that of Ecu de l'Éteile. Some of these mevements were for great and sacred eauses; but we must not let our sympathies be so moved by the persecutions suffered by hereties as to cloud our judgment. It would have been better had Reme triumphed by gentleness, by education and heliness, but unhappily a soldier may not always choose his weapons, and when life is at stake he seizes the first he finds within his reach. The papacy has not always been reactionary and obscurantist; when it overthrew the Cathari, for example, its victory was that of reason and good sense.

The list of the heresies of the thirtoenth century is already long, but it is increasing every day, to the great joy of those erudite ones who are making strennous efforts to classify everything in that tohu-bohn of mysticism and folly. In that day heresy was very much alive: it was consequently very complex and its powers of transformation infinite. One may indicate its currents, mark its direction, but to go farther is to condemn oneself to utter confusion in this medley of impulsive, passionate, fantastic movements which were born, shot upward, and fell to earth again, at the caprice of a thousand in comprehensible circumstances. In certain counties of England there are at the present day villages having as many as eight and ten places of worship for a fow hundreds of inhabitants. Many of those poorle change their denomination every three or four years, returning to that they first quitted, leaving it again only to enter it anew, and so on as long as they live. Their leaders set the example, throwing themselves onthusiastically into each new movement only to leave it before long. would all alike find it difficult to give an intelligible reason for these changes. They say that the Spirit guides them, and it would be unfair to disbelieve them. but the historian who should investigate conditions like these would lose his head in the labyrinth unless he made a separate study of each of these Protean movements. They are surely not worth the trouble.

In a somewhat similar condition was a great part of Christendom under Innocent III.; but while the sects of which I have just spoken move in a very narrow circle of dogmas and ideas, in the thirteenth contury every sort of excess followed in rapid succession. Without the

A CONTRACTOR OF STATE slightest pause of transition men passed through the most contradictory systems of belief Still, a few general characteristics may be observed; in the first place, heresies are no longer metaphysical subtleties as in earlier days; Arius and Priscillian, Nestorius and Entyclus are dead indeed. In the second place, they no longer arise in the upper and governing class, but proceed especially from the inferior clergy and the common people. The blows which actually threatened the Church of the Middle Ages were struck by obscure laboring men, by the poor and the oppressed, who in their wretchedness and degradation folt that sho had failed in her mission.

No sooner was a voice uplifted, preaching austerity and simplicity, than it drew togethor not the laity only, but members of the clergy as well. Toward the close of the twelfth century we find a certain Pons rousing all Porigord, proaching ovangelical poverty before the coming of St. Francis.1

Two great currents are apparent; on one side the Cathari, on the othor, immmorable sects revolting from the Church by vory fidelity to Christianity and the desire to roturn to the primitive Church.

Among the sects of the second category the close of the twelfth century saw in Italy the rise of the Poor Men, who without doubt were a part of the movement of Arnold of Brescia; they donied the efficacy of sacramonts administered by unworthy hands.2

A true attempt at reform was made by the Waldenses. Their history, although better known, still romains obscure on certain sides; their name, Poor Men of Lyons, recalls the former movement, with which they were in elose agreement, as also with the Humiliants. All these names involuntarily suggest that by which St. Francis afterward called his Order. The analogy between the inspiration of Peter Waldo and that of St. Francis was so close that one might be tempted to believe the latter a sort of imitation of the former. It would be a mistake: the same causes produced in all quarters the same effects; ideas of reform, of a return to gospel poverty, were in the air, and this holps us to nuderstand how it was that before many yoars the Franciscan preaching reverberated through the entire world. If at the outset the careers of these two mon were alike, their later livos were very different. Walde, driven into hercsy almost in spite of himself, was obliged to accept the consequences of the promises which he himself had laid down; while Francis, remaining the obediont son of the Church, hent all his offorts to devolop the inner life in himself and his disciples. It is indeed most likely that through his father Francis had become acquainted with the movement of the Poor Men of Lyons. Hence his oft-repeated counsels to his friars of the duty of submission to the clergy. When he went to seek tho approbation of Innocent III., it is evident that the prelates with whom he had relations warned him, by the vory example of Waldo, of the dangers inherent in his OWII movement.2

¹ Recueil des historiens de France. Bouquet, t. xii., pp. 550, 551.

² Bonacorsi: Vita hareticorum [d'Achery, Spicliegium, t. i., p. 215]. Cf. Lucius III., epist. 171, Migne.

The latter had gone to Romo in 1179, accompanied by a few followers, to ask at the same time the approbation of their translation of the Scriptures into the vulgar

¹ Vide Bernard Gul, Practica inquisitionis, Donal edition, 4to, Paris, 1886 p. 244 ff., and especially the Vatican MS., 2548, felic 71.

A chronicle of St. Francis's time makes this same comparison: Burchard, Abbot of Urspurg (4. 1226) [Burchard! et Cuonradi chronicon. Monum. Germ. hist. Script., t. 28], has left us an account of the approbation of Francis by the Pope, all the more precious for being that of a contemporary. Loc. cit., p. 376.

tongue and the permission to preach. They were granted both requests on condition of gaining for their preaching the authorization of their local clergy. Walter Map (*1210), who was charged with their examination, was constrained, while ridiculing their simplicity, to admire their poverty and zeal for the apestolic life.1 Two or three years later they met a very different reception at Rome, and in 1184 they were anathematized by the Couneil of Verona. From that day nothing could stop them, even to the forming of a new Church. They multiplied with a rapidity hardly exceeded afterward by the Franeiscans. By the end of the twelfth century we find them spread abread from Hungary to Spain; the first attempts to hunt them down were made in the latter country. Other countries were at first satisfied with treating them as excemmunicated persons.

Obliged to hide themselves, reduced to the impossibility of helding their chapters, which ought to have come together once or twice a year, and which, had they done so, might have maintained among them a certain unity of dectrine, the Waldenses rapidly underwent a change according to their environment; some obstinately insisting upon calling themselves good Catholics, others going so far as to preach the everthrow of the hierarchy and the uselessness of sacraments.² Honce that multiplicity of differing and even hostile branches which seemed to develop almost hourly.

A common persecution brought them nearer to the

¹ De nugis Ourialium, Dist. 1, cap. 31, p. 64, Wright's edition. Of. Chronique de Laon, Bouquet xiil., p. 680.

² See, for example, the letter of the Italian branch of the Poor Mon of Lyons [Pauperos Lombardi] to their brethron of Oermany, there called Leonistes. In it they show the points in which they are not in harmony with the French Waldenses. Published by Preger: Abhandlungen der K. bayer. Akademie der Wiss. Hitt. Ch., t. xiii., 1875, p. 19 ff.

Cathari and favored the fusion of their ideas. Their activity was inconceivable. Under pretext of pilgrimages to Rome they were always on the road, simple and insinuating. The mothods of travel of that day were peculiarly favorable to the diffusion of ideas. While retailing news to those whose hospitality they received, they would speak of the unhappy state of the Church and the reforms that were needed. Such conversations were a means of apostleship much more officacious than those of the present day, the book and the newspaper; there is nothing like the viva vox for spreading thought.

Many vile stories have been told of the Waldenses; calumny is far too facile a weapon not to tempt an adversary at bay. Thus they have been charged with the same indecent promiscuities of which the early Christians were accused. In reality their true strength was in their virtues, which strength contrasted with the vices of the clergy.

The most powerful and determined enomies of the Church were the Cathari. Sincere, audacious, often learned and keen in argument, having among them some choice spirits and men of great intellectual powers, they were pre-eminently the heretics of the thirteenth century. Their revolt did not bear upon points of detail and questions of discipline, like that of the early Waldenses; it had a definite dectrinal basis, taking issue with the whole body of Catholic dogma. But, although this heresy flourished in Italy and under the very eyes of St. Francis, there is

These continual journeyings sometimes gained for them the name of Passagieni, as in the south of France the preachers of certain sects are to day called Courriers. The term, however, specially designates a Judaizing sect who returned to the literal observation of the Mosaio law: Döllinger, Beiträge, t. ii., pp. 327 and 375. They should therefore be identified with the Circonsisi of the constitution of Frederic II. (Huillard-Bréholtes, t. v., p. 280). See especially the fine monograph of M. C. Molinier: Mémoires de l'Académie de Toulouse, 1888.

need only to indicate it briefly. His work may have received many infiltrations from the Waldensian movement, but Catharism was whelly foreign to it.

This is naturally explained by the fact that St. Francis never consented to occupy himself with questions of doctrine. For him faith was not of the intellectual but the moral domain; it is the consecration of the heart. Time spent in dogmatizing appeared to him time lost.

An incident in the life of Brether Egidio well brings out the slight esteem in which theology was held by the early Brothers Minor. One day, in the presence of St. Bonaventura, he eried, perhaps not without a teach of irony, "Alas! what shall we ignorant and simple ones do to merit the favor of God?" "My brother," replied the famous divine, "you knew very well that it suffices to love the Lord." "Are you very sure of that?" replied Egidio; "do you believe that a simple woman might please Him as well as a master in theology?" Upon the affirmative response of his interlocutor, he ran out into the street and calling to a beggar woman with all his might, "Poor old creature," he exclaimed, "rejoice, for if you love God, you may have a higher place in the kingdom of heaven than Brother Benaventura!"

The Cathari, then, had no direct influence upon St. Francis,² but nothing could better prove the disturbance of thenght at this epoch than that resurrection of Manicheism. To what a depth of lassitude and folly must religious Italy have fallen for this mixture of Buddhism, Mazdeism, and gnosticism to have taken such hold upon it! The Catharist doctrine rested upon the antagonism of two principles, one bad, the other good. The first had created matter; the second, the soul, which, for generation after generation passes from one body to another until it achieves salvation. Matter is the cause and the soat of evil; all contact with it constitutes a blemish, consequently the Cathari renounced marriage and property and advocated suicide. All this was mixed up with most complicated cosmogonical myths.

¹ A. SS., Aprilis, t. iii., p. 238d.

² I would say that between the inspiration of Francis and the Catharian doctrines there is an irreconcilable opposition; but it would not be difficult to find acts and words of his which recall the contempt for matter of the Cathari; for example, his way of treating his body. Some of his counsels to the friars: Unuquisque habet in potestate sua inimicum suum videlicit corpus, per quod peccat. Assist MS. 338, folio 20b. Conform. 138, b. 2.—Cum majorem inimicum corpore non habeam. 2 Cel., 8, 63. These are momentary but inevitable obscurations, moments of forgetfulness, of discouragement, when a man is not himself, and repeats mechanically what he hears said around him. The real St. Francis is, on the contrary, the lever of nature, he who sees in the

Their adherents were divided into two classes—the pure or perfect, and the believers, who were preselytes in the second degree, and whose obligations were very simple. The adepts, properly se called, were initiated by the coroneny of the conselamentum or imposition of hands, which induced the descent upon them of the Consoling Spirit. Among them were enthusiasts who after this coremeny placed themselves in endura—that is to say they starved themselves to death in order not to descend from this state of grace.

In Languedec, whore this sect went by the name of Albigenses, they had an organization which embraced all Central Europe, and overywhere supported flourishing schools attended by the children of the nobles. In Italy they were hardly less powerful; Concorrezo, near whole creation the work of divine goodness, the radiance of the eterna beauty, he who, in the Canticle of the Creatures, sees in the body no the Enemy but a brother: Capit hilariter loqui ad corpus; Gaude, frate corpus, 2 Cel., 3, 187.

'Quodam die, dieta fabrissa dixit ipsi testi prægnanti, quod rogar Deum, ut liberaret eam a Damono, quem habebat in ventre . . . Gulielmus dixit quod ita magnum peccatum erat jacere cum uvore su quam cum concubina. Döllinger. loc. cit., pp. 24, 35. Monza in Lombardy, and Bagnolo, gave their names to two congregations slightly different from those in Languedoc.¹

But it was especially from Milan² that they spread abroad over all the Peninsula, making proselytes even in the most remote districts of Calabria. The state of anarchy prevailing in the country was very favorable to them. The papacy was too much occupied in baffling the spasmodie efforts of the Hohenstaufen, to put the necessary persoverance and system into its struggles against hereay. Thus the new ideas were preached under the very shadow of the Lateran; in 1209, Otho IV., coming to Rome to be crowned, found there a school in which Manicheism was publicly taught.³

With all his energy Innocont III. had not been able to check this evil in the States of the Church. The case of Viterbo tells much of the difficulty of repressing it; in March, 1199, the pope wrote to the clergy and people of this town to recall to their minds, and at the same time to increase, the penalties pronounced against heresy. For all that, the Patarini had the majority in 1205, and succeeded in naming one of themselves consul.

¹ Those of the Concorrezenses and Bajolenses. In Italy Cathari becomes Gazzari; for that matter, each country had its special appellatives; one of the most general in the north was that of the Bulgari, which marks the oriental origin of the sect, whence the slang term Boulgres and its derivatives (vide Matthew Paris, ann. 1238). Cf. Solimit, Histoire des Cathares, 8vo. 2 vols, Paris, 1849.

The most current name in Italy was that of the Patarint, given them no doubt from their inhabiting the quarter of second-hand doalers in Milan: la contrada dei Patari, found in many cities. Patari/ is still the cry of the ragpickers in the small towns of Provence. In the thirteenth century Patarine and Cathare were synonyms. But before that the term Patarini had an entirely different sense. See the very remarkable study of M. Felico Tocco on this subject in his Eresia net medic evo, 12mo. Florence, 1884.

² Casar von Heisterbach, Dial. mirac., t. 1., p. 800, Strange's adition.

^{*} Innocentii opera, Migno, t. i., col. 587; t. fi., 654.

The wrath of the pontiff at this event was unbounded; he fulminated a bull menacing the city with fire and sword, and commanding the neighboring towns to throw themselves upon her if within a fortnight she had not given satisfaction.¹ It was all in vain: the Patarini were dealt with only as a matter of form; it needed the presence of the pope himself to assure the execution of his orders and obtain the demolition of the houses of the heretics and their ahetters (autumn of 1207).²

But stifled at one point the revolt burst out at a hundred others; at this moment it was triumphant on all sides; at Ferrara, Verona, Rimini, Florenco, Prato, Faenza, Treviso, Piacenza. The clergy were expelled from this last town, which remained more than three years without a priest.³

Vitorbo is twenty leagues from Assisi, Orvieto only ten, and disturbances in this town were equally grave. A noble Roman, Pietro Parentio, the doputy of the Holy See in this place, endeavored to exterminate the Patarini. Ho was assassinated.⁴

But Francis needed not to go even so far as Orvicto to become acquainted with heretics. In Assisi the same things were going on as in the neighboring cities. In 1203 this town had elected for podesta a heretic named Giraldo di Gilherte, and in spite of warnings from Rome had persisted in keeping him at the head of affairs until the expiration of his term of office (1204). Innocent III., who had not yet been obliged to use vigor with Viterho, resorted to persuasion and despatched to Umbria the Cardinal Lee di Santa Croce, who will appear more than once in this lustory. The successor of Giraldo and fifty of the principal citizens made the amende honorable and swore fidelity to the Church.

¹ Computruistis in peccatis sicut jumenta in storcore suo ut fumus ao fimus putrefactionis vestræ jam fero circumadjacentes regionis infecerit, ao spsum Dominum ut credimus ad nanseam provocuverit. Loc. cit., col. 654. Cf. 678; Potthast, 2532, 2530.

² Gesta Innocentii, Migne, t. i., col. clxil. Cf. epist. viii., 85 and 105. ³ Campi, Historia Ecclesiastica di Piacenza, parte ii., p. 92 ff. Cf. Innoc., epist. ix., 181, 166-169; x., 54, 64, 222.

⁴ A. SS., Mail, t. v., p. 81.

It is easy to perceive in what a state of ferment Italy was during these early years of the thirteenth century. The moral discredit of the clergy must have been deep indeed for souls to have turned toward Manicheism with such arder.

Italy may well be grateful to St. Francis; it was as much infected with Catharism as Languedoc, and it was he who wrought its purification. He did not pause to demonstrate by syllogisms or theological theses the vanity of the Catharist dectrines; but searing as on wings to the religious life, he suddenly made a new ideal to shine out before the eyes of his contemporaries, an ideal before which all these fantastic sects vanished as birds of the night take flight at the first rays of the sun.

A great part of St. Francis's power came to him thus through his systematic avoidance of polemics. The latter is always more or less a form of spiritual pride; it only deepens the chasm which it undertakes to fill up. Truth needs not to be proved; it is its own witness.

The only weapon which he would use against the wicked was the holiness of a life so full of love as to enlighten and revive those about him, and compel them to love. The disappearaneous Pubbarism in Haly, without an upheaval, and above all without the Inquisition, is thus an indirect result of the Franciscan movement, and not the least important among them.

¹ Bull of June 6, 1205, Potthast, 2237; Migne, vii., 83. This Cardinal Leo (of the presbyterial title of Holy Cross of Jernsalem) was one most valued by Innocent III. To him and Ugolini, the future Gregory IX., he at this epoch confided the most delicate missions (for example, in 1209, they were named legates to Otho IV.). This embassy shows in what importance the pope held the affairs of Assisi, though it was a very small city.

At the voice of the Underen reference Italy consed herself, resovered her good sense and time temper; she east out those destrines of pessimism and death, as a resound organism costs out merbid subdences.

There already endervoired to alread the strong analogy between the initial effects of Francis and those of the Poor Man of Lyons. His thought riperced in an atmosphere thoroughly saturated with their ident; unconsciously to himself they entered into his being.

The prophesica of the Calabrian abbet exceled upon him an influence quibe no difficult to appreciate, but no loss profonul.

Standing on the confiner of Italy and us it were at the threshold of Greece, Giosechino di Fiore I was the had link in a chain of moundie prophets, who during nearly four hundred years succeeded one mother in the mountainess and hermitagen of Southern Italy. The most famous among them had been St. Nilo, a scot of untained John the Baptint, living in denort places, but suddenly emerging from them when his duties of maintaining the right called him chawhers. We see him on one or easien appearing in Rome itself, to americance to pape and emporer the unlessing of the divine weath."

[•] Unit onno do we find blue lighting horothem. The early Deadedwine, on the contrary, are increasedly templed with arguin. — In a 2 Pal., 3. [1].

It must not be such that I do not assort that too two social feets be found after the initiality of 24. Francis, but it was no longer a following industry and the very existence of the Charch.

² This strange personality will charter bistorians and philosophers for a long while to come. I know authing more heartest or transclutional than M. Follow Theorem into study in the Engineeral artely end, Piercene, 1884, I vol., 12 ma, pp. 281–498.

⁴ A 88., Sept., t. vii., p. 290 ff.

Scattered in the Alpine solitudes of Basilicata these Calabrian hermits were continually obliged to retreat higher and higher into the mountain fastnesses to escape the populace, who, pursued by pirates, were taking refuge in these mountains. They thus passed their lives between heaven and earth, with two seas for their horizon. Disquieted by fear of the eorsairs, and by the war-cries whose echoes reached even to them, they turned their thoughts toward the future. The ages of great terror are also the ages of great hope; it is to the captivity of Babylon that we owe, with the second part of Isaiah, those pietures of the future which have not yet eeased to charm the soul of man; Nero's persecutions gave us the Apocalypse of St. John, and the paroxysms of the twolfth century the eternal Gospel.

Convorted after a life of dissipation, Gioacchino di Fiore travelled extensively in the Holy Land, Greece, and Constantinoplo. Returning to Italy he began, though a layman, to preach in the outskirts of Rende and Cosenza. Later on he joined the Cistercians of Cortale, near Catanzaro, and there took vows. Shortly after elected abbot of the monastory in spite of refusal and even flight, he was soized after a fow years with the nostalgia of solitudo, and sought from Popo Lucius III. a discharge from his functions (1181), that he might conse! crate all his time to the works which he had in mind. The pope granted his request, and even permitted him to go wherever he might deem best in the interest of his work. Then began for Gioacchine a life of wandering from convent to convent, which carried him even as far as Lombardy, to Vorona, where we find him with Pope Urban III.

When he returned to the sonth, a group of disciples gathered around him to hear his explanations of the most obscure passages of the Bible. Whother he would or no he was obliged to receive them, to talk with them, to give them a rule, and, finally, to instal them in the very heart of the Sila, the Black Forest of Haly, over against the highest peak, in gorges where the silence is interrupted only by the marmars of the Arvo and the Neto, which have their source not far from there. The new Athes received the mane of Fiore (flower), transpared synchol of the hopes of its founder.3 It was there that he put the finishing tauch to writings which, after fifty years of neglect, were to become the starting-point of all heresies, and the aliment of all souls burdened with the salvation of Christendom. The men of the first half of the thirtoonth contary, too much occupied with other things, did not perceive that the spiritual stroums at which they were drinking descended from the snowy mountain-tops of Calabria.

It is always thus with mystical influences. There is in them semething vague, tenuous, and penetrating which escapes an exact estimation. Let two choice sents meet, and they will find it a difficult thing to analyze and name the impressions which each has received from the other. It is so with an epoch; it is not always those who speak to her the oftenest and loudest whom she test understands; nor even those at whose feet she sits, a faithful pupil, day after day. Sometimes, while on the way to her accustomed musters, she suddenly meets a stranger; she harely eatelies a few words of what he says; she knows not whence he cames nor whither he goes; she never sees him again, but those few words of his go on surging in the depths of her soul, agitating and disquicting her.

⁽A. 88., Mail, vil.; Vincent do Beauvale, Speculum historiale, lib. 29, cap. 40. In Sila la a wooded mountain, situated eastward from Cosmus, which the peasants call Monte Nero. The summits are nearly 2,000 moires above the sea.

² Toward 1195. Gloscohino died there, March 30, 1202.

Thus it was for a long while with Giorechino di Fiore. His teachings, scattered here and there by enthusiastic disciples, were germinating sitently in many hearts. Giving tack hope to men, they restored to them strongthalse. To think is atready to act; alone under the shadow of the heavy pines which surrounded his cell, the conclute of Fiore was laboring for the renovation of the Church with as much vigor as the references who came after hise.

To was, however, far from altaining the height of the prophets of Taraol; instead of nearing like them to the very heavens, he always remained riveted to the text, upon which he commented in the allegorism method, and whence by this method he brought out the most funtastic improbabilities. A low pages of his books would wear out the most patient reader, but in these fields, turnt over by the desiral arguments more drying than the winds of the desert, fields where one at first perceives only stones and thistles, one comes at last to the charming easis, with repose and drems in its abode.

The exegoris of Climeelana di Fiero in fact led up to a surb of philosophy of hidory; its grand lines were rulenlated to make a striking appeal to the imagination. The life of lumanity is stivided into three periods: in the lirst, under the reign of the Father, near fived under the rigor of the law; in the second, reigned over by the San,

A whole upochyphal Herature has been med out around Bloscehlus; cartain hypererities have tried to prove that he never wrote anything. These are exaggerations. Three large works are containly authentic: The Agreement of the Old and New Testaments, The Communitary on the Apocatypes, and The Proferry of Ten Strings, published in Venton, the first in 1517, the two others in 1527. His prophecies were so well known, agen in the lifetime, that an English Chierchan, Rudolph, Abbet of Coggodiali (Ar 1923), couning in Rome in 1435, couple a conference with this and has left as an interesting account of R. Martène, Amplissima Vollectio, U. 1, p. 839.

men live under the rule of grace; in the third, the Spirit shall reign and men shall live in the plenitude of love. The first is the period of servite obedience; the second, that of filial obedience; the third, that of liberty. In the first, men lived in fear; in the second, they rest in faith; in the third, they shall burn with love. The first saw the shining of the stars; the second seem the whitening of the day. The first produced nottles, the second gives roses, the third will be the age of lities.

If now we consider that in the throught of Giorcelian the third period, the Age of the Spirit, was about to open, we shall understand with what enthusiasm men haited the words which restored joy to hearle still disturbed with millemerian fours.

It is evident that St. Francis know these radiant hopes. Who knows even that it was not the Calabrian Seer who awake his heart to its transports of love? If this be so, Gioacchino was not merely his precursor; he was his true spiritual father. However this may be, St. Francis found in Gioacchino's thought many of the elements which, miconsciously to himself, were to become the foundation of his institute.

The noble disdrin which he shows for all men of learning, and which he sought to inculente upon his Order, was for Gioucchino one of the characteristics of the new era. "The truth which remains hidden to the wise," he says, "is revealed to balica; dishectics closes that which is open, obscures that which is clear; it is the mother of useless talk, of rividries and ldusquency. Tourning does not adify, and it may destroy, as is proved by the scribes of the Church, swellen with pride and arrogance, who by dist of reasoning fall into heresy."

We have seen that the return to averagelical simplicity

¹ Comm. in apoc., follo 78, h. 9,

had become a necessity; all the heretical sects were on this point in accord with piens Catholics, but no one spoke in a manner so Franciscan as Gioacchino di Fiore. Not only did he make voluntary poverty one of the characteristics of the age of lilics, but he speaks of it in his pages with so profound, so living an emotion, that St. Francis could do little more than repeat his words. The ideal monk whom he describes, whose only property is a lyre, is a true Franciscan before the letter, him of whom the Poverello of Assisi always dreamed.

The feeling for nature also birsts forth in him with incomparable vigor. One day he was preaching in a chapel which was plunged in almost total darkness, the sky being quite everast with clouds. Suddenly the clouds broke away, the sun shone, the church was flooded with light. Gioacchine paused, saluted the sun, intened the Veni Creator, and led his congregation out to gaze upon the landscape.

It would be by no means surprising if toward 1205 Francis should have heard of this prophet, toward whom so many hearts were turning, this anchorite who, gazing up into heaven, spoke with Jesus as a friend talks with his friend, yet knew also how to come down to consolo men and warm the faces of the dying at his own broast.

At the other end of Europe, in the heart of Germany, the same causes had preduced the same offects. From the excess of the people's sufferings and the despair of religious souls was being bern a movement of apocalyptic mysticism which seemed to have secret communication with that which was reusing the Poninsula. They had the same views of the future, the same anxious expectation of new cataclysms, joined with a prospect of a reviving of the Church.

¹ Qui vere monachus est nihit reputat esse suum nisi citharam: Apoo., ib., folio 188, a 2.

"Cry with a land voice," said her guardian angel la St. Elizabeth of Schoon (4 1164), "cry to all nations; Wool for the whole world has become durkness. Lord's vine has withered, there is no one to lead it. The Taril has sent latiovers, but they have all been found The head of the Church is ill and her members are . . . Shopherds of my Church, you are sleeping, link I shall awaken you! Kings of the earth, the cry of your iniquity has risen even to me."

"Divine justice," said St. Hilderande (2-1478), " shall have its hour; the had of the seven epochs symbolized by the seven days of creation has arrived, the judgmonts of God are about to be accomplished; the empire and the papacy, sank indo impicts, chall crumble away together. . . But upon their rains whall appear a new untion of Cod, a untion of prophete illuminated from an high, living in poverly and solitable. Then the divino mysteries abutt to revealed, and the saying of Tool shall be fulfilled; the Hely Spirit aball alast abroad upon the people the dow of his prophesics, of his wisdom and holiness; the heathen, the dows, the worldly and the unbolinging shall be converted together, oping time and peace shall reign over a regenerated world, and the angols will return with condidence to dwell among men."

These hopen were not wholly confounded. In the evening of his days the prophet of Piece was able, like a now Simeon, to ulter his Nanc dimittie, and for a few yours Christendom runtil turn in amazement to Assisi as to a new Bethlehem.

¹ M. Roth, The Visionen ster heiligin Elisabeth von Sichenson e Briton, 1884, pp. 116-117.

CHAPTER IV

STRUGGLES AND TRIUMPH

Spring of 1206-February 24, 1209

The biographies of St. Francis have preserved to us an incident which shows how great was the religious ferment even in the little city of Assisi. A stranger was seen to go up and down the streets saying to every one he met, "Peace and welfare!" (Pax et bonum.) He thus expressed in his own way the disquictude of those hearts which could neither resign themselves to perpetual warfare nor to the disappearance of faith and love; artless cello, vibrating in response to the hopes and fears that were shaking all Europe!

"Vox clamantis in descrio!" it will be said. No, for every heart-cry leaves its trace even when it seems to be uttered in empty air, and that of the Unknown of Assisi may have contributed in some measure to Francis's dofinitivo call.

Since his abrupt return from Spoleto, life in his father's house had become daily more difficult. Bernardone's self-love had received from his son's discomfiture such a wound as with commonplace men is never healed. He might provide, without counting it, money to be swallowed up in dissipation, that so his son might stand on an equal footing with the young nobles; he could never resign himself to see him giving with lavish hands to every beggar in the streets.

Francis, continually plunged in reverte and spending his days in lonely wanderings in the fields, was no longer of the least use to his father. Months present, and the distance between the two men grew ever wider; and the gentle and loving Pica could do nothing to prevent a rupture which from this time appeared to be inevitable. Francis soon rame to feel only one desire, to the from the abode where, in the place of love, be found only no proaches, upbraidings, anguish.

The faithful confident of his earlier struggles had been obliged to been him, and this absolute solutude weighed heavily upon his warm and loving heart. He did what he could to example from it, but no sure analysational him. The ideas which he was beginning timidly to express evoked from those to whom he squake only mocking smiles or the hend-shukings which then but a that they are right bestow upon bim who is unarching straught to madness. Hencen went to open his mind to the high. op, but the latter understood no more than others his vegue, incoherent plane, tilled with ideas inspessible to realize and possibly antiversive. It was thus that in spite of himself Prancia was led to ask nothing of men, but to raise himself by prayer to intuitive knowledge of the divine will. The doors of homors and of hearts were alike closing upon him, but the interior voice was adount to speak out with irrobitible force and make itself for over obeyed.

Among the numerous chapels in the suburber of Assisithere was our which he particularly level, that of lit-Damian. It was reached by a few minutes' walk ever a stony path, almost trackless, under class trees, smill odors of levender and resonary. Standing on the top of a hillock, the entire plain is visible from it, through a curtain of cypresses and pines which seem to be trying to hido the humble hermitage and set up an ideal barrier between it and the world.

Served by a poor priest who had scarely the where-withal for necessary food, the sanctuary was falling into rnin. There was nothing in the interior but a simple altar of masonry, and by way of reredos one of those byzantino crucifixes still so numerous in Italy, where through the work of the artists of the time has come down to us something of the terrors which agitated the twelfth century. In general the Crucificd One, frightfully lacerated, with bleeding wounds, appears to seek to inspire only grief and compunction; that of St. Damian, on the centrary, has an expression of inexpressible calm and gentleness; instead of closing the cyclids in eternal surrender to the weight of suffering, it looks down in self-forgotfulness, and its pure, clear gaze says, not "I suffer," but, "Come unto me."

One day Francis was praying before the poor altar: "Great and glorious God, and thou, Lord Jesus, I pray yo, shed abroad your light in the darkness of my mind... Be found of me, Lord, so that in all things I may act only in accordance with thy hely will." 2

Thus he prayed in his heart, and behold, little by little it seemed to him that his gaze could not detach itself from that of Jesus; he folt something marvellous taking place in and around him. The sacred victim took on life, and in the outward silence he was aware of a voice which softly stole into the very depths of his heart, speaking to him an ineffable language. Jesus accepted his oblation. Jesus desired his labor, his life, all his being, and the heart of the poor solitary was already bathed in light and strength.

¹ This crucifix is preserved in the sacristy of Santa Chiara, whither the sisters carried it when they left St. Damian.

² Opuscula B. Francisci, Oratio I.

^{8 8} Soc., 18; 2 Cel., 1, 6; Bon., 12; 15; 16.

This vision marks the final triumph of Frances. His union with Christ is consummed; from this time he can exclaim with the mystica of every age, "My beloved is mine, and I am his."

But instead of giving himself up to transports of contemplation he at once aske himself how he may copuly to Josus lave for love, in what action he stead coupley this life which he has just offered to him. He had not long to seek. We have seen that the chapel where his spicitual esponsals had just been celebrated was threatened with ruin. He believed that to repair it was the work assigned to him.

From Blat day the remembrance of the Concilied One, the thought of the love which had trinsophed in imme lating itself, became the very centre of his religious life and as it were the and of his soul. For the first time, no doubt, Francia had been brought into direct, personal, intimute centuck with Jesus Christ; from Testiof he had passed to faith, to that living faith which a dia thiguished thinker has so well defined. "To believe is to look; it is a perions, affective, and probanged look; a look more simple then that of observation, a book which looks, and nothing more; nothers, infanting, it has ull the soul in it, it is a look of the soul and not the mind, a look which does not seek to analyze its object, but which received it was whole into the sord through the eyes." In these words Vinet unconsciously has user vollously characterized the religious temperature of of St. Bransia.

This lock of learness upon the reneitix, this revoterious collectry with the compassionate victim, was rever more to couse. At St. Damian, St. Frencis's picty took on its outward appearance and its originality. From this time his soul learn the sligmata, and as his biographers have said in words univershubble, At the hour videoratum of Superfections of our spin of memoritum December

paradouris.3

Prome that time his way was plain before him. Coming and from the same turny, he gave the priest all the money he had about him to keep a long always burning and with invested heart be returned to Assisi. He find decided to quit his father's house and undertake the restoration of the claspel, after haring broken the hist tion that bound him to the past. A house and a few places of gayly colored static were all that he progressed, Arrived at humo be made a parket of the stuffs, and mounting his house he set out for Foligue. This city was then as now the most important commercial lown of all the region. He have attracted the whole population of Unitaria and the Sabara a. It residence had often take on his son there, and France speechly succeeded in selling all be laid brought. He even parted with his harar, and full of joy act out upon the read to Amount?

This not was to him most important; it marked him limit inpline with the past, from this day on his life was to be in all points the exposite of what it had been; the Cucified had given branch to him; be on his side had given himself to the Crambed without recovered return. To investinity, disquietide of soul, inquish, longing for an anknessin good, latter request, had exceeded a delicione calm, the exclosive of the last child who timbe his mother, and largets in a moment the teature of his heart.

Press. Pedigue he intrinced direct to M. Damien, it was not necessary to pure through the city, and lesses in lands to pure through the city.

^{1 31 11} m. 14

Making the highest had been a few the a areather of 1 Pale for Mil an increase condition [&]quot;I find the Assist, 25 to 18 to 18 The Redigion to a three forms with finite Assist.

Ho roturned straight to St. Damian.

Bernardone, on his return, went so fer as to strike Pica in punishment for her weakness. Then, unable to telerate the thought of seeing his son the jest of the whole city, he tried to preenre his expubiton from the territory of Assisi. Going to St. Doming he sunnamed him to lenve the country. This time Francis did not try to tiide, Boldly presenting himself before his father, he dechred to him that not only would nothing induce him to abandon his resolutions, but that, moreover, heving become the servant of Christ, he had no tenger to receive orders from him.2 As Bernardone launched out into invective, ropropoling him with the enormous same which he had cost him Francis showed him by a gesture the memoy which he had brought buck from the sate at Poligno lying on the window-ledge. The fidther greedity poized it and wont away, resolving to appeal to the ungistrates.

The consuls summoned Francisco appear before them, but he replied simply that as servand of the Charch he did not come under their jurisdiction. Glad of this response, which relieved them of a delicate dilemma, they referred the complainant to the discover authorities.

The matter took on another aspect before the ecclesiustical tribunal; it was idle to dream of asking the bidicop to pronounce a sentence of lumishment, times it was his part to preserve the liberty of the clovies. Bernardone could do no more than disinherit his son, or at least induce him of his own accord to renounce all claim upon his inheritance. This was not difficult.

When called upon to appear before the epiecopal tri-

¹⁴ Col., 184 8 Sec., 18.

^{9.1} Gel., 13. It is possible that at this epock he had received the lessor order, and that thus localists in adject to the jurisdiction of the Ohurch.

^{5 8 800., 18} and 10; I Col., 14; How, 12.

bunal¹ Francis experienced a lively joy; his mystical espansals to the Crucified One were now to receive a sort of efficial consecration. To this Jesus, whom he had so often blasphomed and betrayed by word and conduct, he would now to able with equal publicity to promise obedience and fidelity.

It is easy to imagino the sensation which all this caused in a small town like Assisi, and the growd that on the appointed day pressed toward the Pinzza of Santa Maria Maggiore, where the bishop pronounced sentence. Every one held Francis to be assuredly mad, but they anticipated with relish the stame and rage of Bernardone, when every one detested, and whose pride was so well panished by all this.

The bishop first set forth the case, and advised Francis to simply give up all his property. To the great surprise of the crowd the latter, instead of replying, retired to a room in the bishop's palace, and immediately respensed absolutely maked, holding in his hand the packet into which he had rathed his abothes; these he laid down before the hishop with the little amney that he still had kept, saying: "Listen, all of you, and understand it well; until this time I have called Pintro Bernardone my father, but new I desire to serve God. This is why I return to him this money, for which he has given himself accumed treatde, as well as my clothing, and all that I have land from him, for from homeoforth I desire to say nothing obe than "Our Father, who art in heaven."

A long murmur aroos from the crowd when Bernardone was seen to gather up and carry off the ricting without the least evidence of compassion, while the history was ¹ From 1204 until after the death of St. Franch the upbecopal throne of Assist was ecoupled by Guldo II. Vide Cristofano, 1, 180 ff.

^{*} Playes di Santa Maria Maggiore o del regeorado. Everything has remained protty nearly in the same state as in the thirteenth century.

fain to take under his mantle the peer Francis, whe was trembling with emetion and cold.

The scene of the judgment hall made an immense impression; the arder, simplicity, and indignation of Francis had been so profound and sincere that sceffers were disconcerted. On that day he wen for himself a secret sympathy in many souls. The pepulace loves such abrupt conversions, or these which it considers such. Francis ence again ferced himself upon the attention of his fellew-citizens with a pewor all the greater for the centrast between his fermer and his new life.

There are pieus folk whose modesty is snocked by the nudity of Francis; but Italy is net Germany ner England, and the thirteenth century would have been astenished indeed at the prindery of the Bellandists. The incident is simply a new manifestation of Francis's character, with its ingenuousness, its exaggerations, its longing to establish a complete harmony, a literal correspondence, between words and actions.

After emotions such as he had just experienced he felt the need of being alone, of realizing his joy, of singing the liberty he had finally achieved along all the lines where ence he had so deeply suffered, so ardently struggled. He would not, therefore, return immediately to St. Damian. Leaving the city by the nearest gate, he plunged into the deserted paths which climb the sides of Mount Subasie.

It was the early spring. Here and there were still great drifts of snow, but under the arder of the March sun winter seemed to ewn itself vanquished. In the midst of this mysterious and bewildering harmony the hoart of Francis felt a delicious thrill, all his being was ealmed and uplifted, the seul of things caressed him gently and shed upon him peace. An unwonted happiness swept over him; he made the forest to resound with his hymns of praise.

¹ Col., 15; 8 Sec., 20; Bon. 20.

Mon utter in song emotions too sweet or too deep to be expressed in ordinary language, but unworded music is in this respect superior to song, it is above all things the language of the ineffable. Song gains almost the same value when the words are only there as a support for the voice. The great beauty of the pseudes and hymns of the Church lies in the fact that being sung in an unknown tongue they make no appeal to the intelligence; they say nothing, but they express everything with murvellous modulations like a celential accompanionet, which follows the believer's emotions from the most agentzing struggles to the most imposition estasies.

So Prancis went on hin way, deeply inhaling the adors of apring, dinging at the top of los voice one of those songs of Prench chivalry which be had learned in days gone by.

The forest in which he was walking was the usual retroit of mich people of Assisi and its cuvirous as had any reason for hiding. Some raffinus, aroused by his voice, suddenly fell upon him. "Who are you?" they asked. "I am the herald of the great King," he are swered; "but what is that to you?"

This only garment was an old moutle which the bishop's gardener had lent him at his master's request. They stripped it from him, and throwing him into a ditch full of anow, "There is your place, poor herald of God," they said.

"The robberngone, he shook off the snew which covered him, and after may efforts meeceded in extricting himself from the ditch. Stiff with cold, with no other covering than a worn-out whirt, he none the less resumed his singing, happy to suffer and thus to accustom himself the helter to understand the words of the Gravified One. Not far away was a monastery. He entered and offered his services. In those solitudes, peopled often by such undesirable neighbors, people were suspicious. The monks permitted him to make himself useful in the kitchen, but they gave him nothing to cover himself with and hardly anything to eat. There was nothing for it but to go away; he directed his steps toward Gubbio, where he know that he should find a friend. Perhaps this was he who had been his confidant on his return from Spoleto. However this may be, he received from him a tunic, and a few days after set out to return to his dear St. Damian.¹

He did not, however, go directly thither; before beginning to restore the little sanctuary, he desired to see again his friends, the lepors, to promise them that he would love them even better than in the past.

Since his first visit to the loper-house the brilliant cavalier had become a poor beggar; he came with empty hands but with heart overflowing with tenderness and compassion. Taking up his abode in the midst of these afflicted ones he lavished upon them the most touching eare, washing and wiping their seres, all the more gentle and radiant as their seres were more repulsive. The neglected sufferer is as much blinded by love of him who comes to visit him as the child by its love for its methor. He believes him to be all powerful; at his approach the most painful sufferings are eased or disappear.

¹ 1 Col., 16; Ben. 21. The curious will read with interest an article by M. Mezzatinti upon the journey to Gubbio entitled S. Francesco o Frederico Spadalunga da Gubbio. [Miscellanea, t. v., pp. 76-78.] This Spadalunga da Gubbio was well able to give a garment to Francis, but it is very possible that the glft was made much later and that this solemn date in the saint's life has been fixed by an optical Illusion, almost inevitable because of the identity of the fact with the name of the locality.

² 1 Cel., 17; Bon., 11; 13; 21; 22; 8 Sec., 11; A. SS., p. 575.

This love impired by the sympathy of an affectionate heat may become an deep as to appear at times supernatural; the dying have been known to recover consciousness in order to look for the last time into the face, not of some member of the family, but of the friend who has tried to be the sunshine of their last days. The ties of pure love are stronger than the bonds of the shand blood. Francis had many a time sweet experience of this; from the time of his actival at the lepth homes he felt that if he had best his life he was about to find it again.

Encounaged by his resionen among the lopers, he refinued to M Danian and went forwork, filled with joy and arder, his local as much in the emobine as the Padrian plain in this beautiful month of May. After having behinded for himself a hermit's dress, he began to go into the equation and open places of the city. There having oneg a few hyanes, he would unusumed to those who gathered around him bis project of restoring the chapet. "These who will give me one stone," he would add with a smale, "chall have a reward; those who give me two shall have two rewards, and those who give me three shall have three."

Mony decreed him mad, but otherwrent deeply moved by the remembrance of the post. As for Francis, dead to modern, carrying upon his about social titled for severe toil, the stem s which were given him.

During this time the poor priest of St. Damian felt him heart conding with love for this companion who had at first came of him such contentationers, and he strove to prepare for him his favorite diches. Francis cause per reived it. This delicacy took alarm at the expense which he cannot his friend, and, thanking him, he resolved to log his food from them to door. It was not an easy task. The first time, when at the end of his round he glanced at the broken feed in his wallet, he felt his courage fail him. But the thought of being so soon unfaithful to the spouse to whom be had plighted his faith made his blood run cold with about and gave him strength to cut revenously.

Each hour, so to speak, brought to him a new ofraggle, One day he was going through the fown begging for oil for the lamps of St. Damian, when he arrived at a house where a lamped was going on; the greater number of his former companions were there, singing and dameing. At the sound of those well-known voices he felt as if he could not enter; he even turned away, but very soon, filled with confusion by his own cowardice, he returned quickly upon his alogs, made his way into the binquek-hall, and after confessing his shame, put so much carnestness and fire into his request that every one desired to ensoperate in this pionn work.

This hittorisk trial however was his faller's anger, which remained as violent as ever. Although he had renounced Francia, Hernardone's pride authored more the less at seeing his mode of life, and whenever he met his son he overwhelmed him with repronches and makedletions. The fender heart of Francis was no wrong with sorrow that he resorted to a sort of stratagem for charming away the spell of the paternal improvations, "Come with me," he usual to a beggar; "be to me as a father, and I will give you a part of the shus which I receive. When you see Bernardone came me, if I say, "Bless me, my father," you much sign me with the cross and bless me in his stead," "I his brether was prominent in the front rank of these who harassed him with their mockeries. One winter marning they met in a clurch; when all the nation seems to collect itself to listen to the chime of the distant church bells. Doubtless it was Francis's plan to settle there as a berrait. He dreamed of passing his life there in meditation and sitence, keeping up the little church and from time to time inviting a priest there to say mass. Nothing as yet suggested to him that he was in the end to become a religious founder. One of the most interesting aspects of his tife is in fact the continual development revealing itself in that, he is of the small number to whom to live is to be active, and to be active to make progress. There is hardly anyone, except St. Paul, in whom is found to the same degree the devening need of being always something more, always something better, and it is so beautiful in both of them only because it is absolutely instinctive.

¹⁸ Sun, 22 ; 2 Cel., 1, 6. — 7 2 Geo., 24 ; 2 Cel., 6 ; 2 Spec., 24. * 4 Box., 23 ; 2 Cel., 7.

When he began to restore the Portinnents his projects furdly went beyond a very narrow horizon; he was proparing himself for a life of penitonec rather than a life of activity. But these works once finished it was impossible that this somewhat actish and passive manner of achieving his own salvation should satisfy him long. At the memory of the appearance of the Crucified One his heart would swell with overpowering conctions, and he would melt into them without knowing whether they were of admiration, pity, or desire.

When the repairs were finished meditation occupied the greater part of his days. A. Benedictine of the Abbey of Mont Subasic 2 came from time to time to say mass at Santa Mariu; these were the bright hours of St. Francis's life. One can imagine with what pious care he prepared himself and with what faith he listened to the divine teachings.

One day, it was probably February 24, 1209, the festival of St. Matthias, mass was being celebrated at the Portionenla. When the priest turned toward him to read the words of Jesus, Francis felt binself overpowered with a profound agitation. He no longer saw the priest; it was Jesus, the Crueified One of St. Dandan, who was speaking: "Wherever ye ge, preach, saying, 'The kingdom of heaven is at hand. Heal the sick, cleanse the lepers, cast out devils. Freely ye have received, freely give. Provide neither silver nor gold nor brass in your purses, neither scrip nor two coats, nor shoes nor staff, for the laborer is worthy of his ment.'"

CH 800., FC; 2 Col., L, 6,

Porthmenta was a dependence of this abboy.

These words burst upon him like a revolation, like the answer of Heaven to his sighs and auxieties.

"This is what I want," he cried, "this is what I was seeking; from this day forth I shall set myself with all my strongth to put it in practice." Immediately throwing uside his stick, his scrip, his purse, his shoes, he determined immediately to obey, observing to the letter the precents of the apostolic life.

It is quite possible that some allegerizing tendencies have had some influence upon this narrative. The long struggle through which Francis passed before becoming the apostle of the new times assuredly came to a crisis in the scene at Portinnenta; but we have already seen how slow was the interior travail which prepared for it.

The revolution of Francis was in his heart; the sacred fire which he was to communicate to the souls of others came from within his own, but the best causes need a standard. Before the shabby alter of the Portioneula he had perceived the banner of poverty, sucrifice, and love, he would earry it to the assault of every fortress of sin; under its shadow, a true knight of Christ, he would marshal all the valiant warriers of a spiritual strife.

This is the date adopted by the Bollandists, because the ancient missals mark the perhaps, Matt. x., for the gospel of this day. This entails no difficulty and in any case it cannot be very far distant from the truth. A. 88., p. 574.

² See in particular Bon., 25 and 26. Of. A. SS., p. 577d.

CHAPPER V

PIRST YEAR OF APOSTOLATE

Spring of 1200 Summer of 1210

IF very next incruing Francia word up to Assist and a to proach. The words were simple, but they came traight from the heart that all who heard him were hed.

is not easy to hear and apply to ano's solf the exations of prenchers who, aloft in the pulpit, seem a carrying out a more formality; it is just as difficult superfrom the appeals of a layoun who walks at our. The unazing multitude of Protestant seets is due great degree to this superiority of lay preaching electical. The most trilliant orators of the Christian it are laid converters; their elequent appeals may ivate the inagination and lead a few men of the ld to the fact of the altar, but these results are not a brilliant than ophenoral. But let a peasant or a kingman speak to these when he needs a few simple dis going directly to the conscience, and the man is ays inquessed, often won.

Thus the words of Francia accured to his hearers like aming award penetrating to the very depths of their science. His first attempts were the simplest passing general they were morely a few words addressed men when he knew well enough to recognize their weak ints and strike at these with the lady boldness of love

His person, his example, were themselves a securon, and he spoke only of that which he had timed experienced, prochaining repentance, the abortness of life, a future retribution, the necessity of arriving at gospel perfection. It is not easy to realize how many waiting souls there are in this world. The greater number of men pass through life with scale asteop. They are like virgins of the sanctuary who councilness feet a vague agilation; their hearts throb with an infinitely sweet and subtile thrill, but their cyclibs droop; again they feel the damp cold of the cloister creeping over them; the delicious but baneful dream vanisher; and this is all they ever know of that love which in atronger than death.

It is thus with many men for all that belongs to the higher life. Sometimes, alone in the wide plain at the hour of twilight, they fix their eyes on the fading lights of the larizon, and on the evening breeze comes to them musther breath, more distant, fainter, and almost heavenly, awaking in them a negatification for the world beyond and for holiness. But the darkness fath, they must great to their homes; they shake off their reveries and it often happens that to the very east of the this is then only glimpse of the Divine; a few sights, a few thrills, a few inarticulate narranges this name up all our efforts to attain to the severeign good.

Yet the instinct for love and for the divine it only slumbering. At the night of beauty love always awakes at the appeal of holiness the divine witness within us a once responds; and no we see, atreaming from all point of the horizon to gather around these who preach in the name of the inward voice, long processions of soul athirst for the ideal. The human heart so naturally yearms to offer itself up, that we have only to meet along our puthway some one who, doubting neither himself nor us, demands it without reserve, and we yield it to him at once. Reason may understand a partial gift, a transient devotion; the heart knows only the entire sacrifice, and like the tover to his beloved, it says to its vanquisher, "Thine alone and forever."

² I. Coll., 23 ; 3 Sun., 25 and 20 ; Boar, 27. Of. Auct. Vit. Sec. ap., b 88., p. 679.

That which has enused the miserable failure of all the offerts of natural religion is that its founders have not mud the courage to by lodd upon the hearts of men, consenting to no partition. They have not understood the imperious desire for immolation which lies in the depths of every soul, and souls have taken their revenge in not heeding these too lukewarm levers.

Prancis had given himself up too completely not to chain from others an absolute self-renunciation. In the two years and more since to had quitted the world, the reality and depth of his conversion had shone out in the sight of all; to the scoffings of the early days had gradually succeeded in the minds of many a feeling closely akin to admiration.

This feeling inevitably provokes imitation. A man of Assisi, hardly mentioned by the biographers, had attached himself to Francia. He was one of those simple-hearted men who find life heartful enough so long as they can be with him who has kindled the divine spark.

11 Gd., 24. We rough correct the Bollandist text: Inter quest quidam do Assisio puer de simplicem unimum gerens, by; quidam de Assisio pium ao simplicem, etc. The period at which we have arrived is very clear as a whole; the pletace which the Three Companions give as is true with a truth which forces emviethen at first sight; but neither they not Colane are giving an aibidal report. Index on men desired to know precisedy in what order the nexty disciples came, and they tertured the texts to find an answer. The same marse was followed with regard to the first adictionary journage. That an light sides they came up against impossibilities and materialisticas. What does it matter whether there were two, three, or four missions before the papal approbation? Of what consequence are the names of those early disciples who are in their hearts. His arrival at Portiumenta gave Francis a suggestion; from that time be drowned of the possibility of bringing together a few rompanions with whom he could carry on his apostolic mission in the neighborhood.

At Assisi he had often enjoyed the hospitality of a rich and promined nonconnect Bernardicali Quindavalle, who took him to sleep in his own chamber; it is easy to see how such an intimmy would favor confidential outpourings. When in the intence of the early night an ardent and publicable nool pours out to you its disappointments, wounds, drenne, hopes, faith, it is difficult indeed not to be carried along, especially when the apose to has a secret ally in your seal, and unconsciously mosts your most secret aspirations.

One day Bornarda begged Francis to pass the following night with him, at the same time giving him to understand that he was about to make a grave residution upon which he disired to consult him. The joy of Francis was great indeed as he divised his intentions. They passed the night without thicking of sleepe; it was a long communion of souls. Bermirdo had decided technicibute his goods to the poor and east in his lot with Francis. The latter desired his friend to pass through a sort of initiation, pointing out to him that what he himself outledly secondary la the lastery of the Franciscae acceptant ? All these things took place with much more charactery and speciality than is generally suppassed. There is a wide difference between the plan of a house drawn up by an architect and a view of the same loose palated by an artist. The second, though about allog to inexactionless given a more just action of the reality than the plane. The second is true of the Franciscan biographics.

11 Oct., 24. Hermical de Heese la tire flui to cuil tain West (galactic valle). De landibus, for 155 b.; ef. ayea later Mark of Liebour, t. 1, second part, pp. 68-70; Conform., 47; Floc., t. 2, 2, 4, 4, 6, 13, 20; 1 Sion., 27, 30, 39; 2 Col., 1, 10; 2, 10; 100., 20; 1 Uct., 30; 2 diagrams, and 329, and Tribul, Arch., 11, p. 378, etc.

practiced, what by preached, was not his own invention, but that desus himself had expressly ordained it in his word.

At early dawn they bent their steps to the St. Niellolas Church, accompanied by another neighbyte named Pietro, and there, after passing and hearing mass, Papacis opened the Gospelo fluid bay on the alter and read to his companions the portion which last decided his own yeartion; the words of drame conding forth his disciples on their mission.

"Brethren," he related, "This is one life and our Bule, and that of all who may jour us. Go then and do no you have heard."

The presistence with which the Three Companions relate that Francis remails of the least there is never home of the Trinety, and that it opened of its own accord at the voices describing the apentalic life, leads to the helief that these pressures located the Rule of the new monoriation, if not that very day at least very noon afterward.

If there will be purfer to any will that there have, and give to the poor, and their shall have the source for heavens, and to me, but I below me.

Inside that his control of a bit is the force of a sace the magnetic and another fly many all devides in Colorest diseases. Another exist diseases the parable than hingdome of the both to be all the selfs. And he exist materal exist parable them. Take nothing for point for passes, so like a strong attack a right control exists a limit from Land, neither money, neither frame from a strong and the form a fixed and father a land, and the there are not the analysis of the same distribution of the same and the selfs of the same distribution from four for a letting one angle of the grade many distribution for a letting one angle of the grade many through the toronal passes in grade grade grade and beating analyzed are ¹¹ Cal, "4, A Shoo, "2, Da, Da, Da Band, A, Ban, A Da; hour, The, A.

His, p. ferti. It is a richtest about about because in the Boar Boar works A most hote. It seems various be Boar derive about the seems because in the Alexandra board to the which bears is boar a bloom, a steem and a seems bing. A board board board town in hote langua bis maintenance, so are a fingure about place of ground by one even plot by the bases. Let 8 the generalized passes on a securities bear a right.

Then said Jesus unto this disciples, if any main with come after magnet him dany himself, and take up his grees and fullow una. For whosever will save his life shall less R, and whosever with less him life for my sake shall find R. For what is a man profited if he shall gain the whole world and less his own soul?

At first these verses were landly more than the official Rule of the Order; the true Rule was Prancis himself; but they had the great merit of being short, absolute, of promising perfection, and of being taken from the Gospel,

Bermado immediately set to work to distribute his fortune among the poor. Full of joy, his friend was looking on at this act, which had drawn together a crowd, when a priest against Sylvester, who had formerly sold him some stones for the repairs of St. Danning sceing so much mency given away to everyone who applied for it, drow near and said:

"Brother, you did not pay me very well for the atomes which you bought of me."

Francis had too thoroughly killed every gorm of avarice in himself not to be moved to indignation by hearing a priest speak thus. "Here," he said, helding out to him a double handful of coins which he took from Bernarde's rahe, "here; are you sufficiently paid now?"

"Quito so," raplied Sylvestor, somewhal abustiod by the maranes of the hystanders."

This picture, in which the characteric stand out so strongly, must have taken strong bold upon the nemory of the bystamlers: the Halians only thereughly understand things which they make a picture of. It taught them, better than all Francis's preachings, what manner of men these new friars would be.

⁹ 8 Sac., 80. Of. Anon. Perus., A. SS., p. lists. Thin we no be co-ported neither by Gelsno mer by St. Bingwenthers.

¹ Matt., xix., M; Luku, ix., i 6; Matt., xvi., 24-28. The agreement of tendition upon these passages is complete. B Flor., 20; 2 Col., i, io; Bon., 28; Spec., 5b.; Conform., 47b 2, 475, 2; Fror., 2; (Hassberger and the Chresdele of the xxiv. generals reversing the order (Analosta, fr., t. H., p. 5) as well as the Conformities to another place, 87b, 3.

The distribution finished, they went at once to Perlinnata, where Becharde and Pietro built for themselves eabins of Loughs, and made themselves funier like that of Francis. They did not differ much from the garment worn by the persents, and were of that brown, with its infinite variety of shades, which the Italians call legatedor. One finds similar garments to day among this shepherds of the most remote parts of the Apennings.

A week later, Thursday, April 23, 1309, a new disceptor of the manor of Egidio presented himself before Francis. Of a gentle and submissive nature, he was of those who need to lean on someone, but who, the needed support laving been found and tested, lift themselves sometimes even above it. The pure seal of brother Egidio, supported by that of Francis, came to enjoy the interient delights of contemplation with an unheard-of urder.

Here we must be in our guard against forcing the authorities, and asking of them more than they can give. Inder, when the Order was definitely constituted and its convents arguinged, men fancied that the past had been like the present, and this error still weighs upon the picture of the origins of the Franciscan movement. The first brothers lived as did the prove people among whem they so willingly moved; Portimenta was their favorite church, but it would be a mistake tempose that they sojourned there for any long periods. It was their place of meeting, nothing more. When they set forth they simply knew that they should meet again in the neighborhood of the modest chapet. Their life was that of the Umbrian beggan of the present day, going hern and there as funcy dictated, sleeping in lacy lofts, in leper hospitals, or under the peach of some church. So little had they any fixed domicile that Egidio, having decided to join them, was at comiderable fromble to learn where to find Francis, and accidentally meeting him in the neighborhood of Rive Terto hersew in the fact a proveidental leading.

This date is given in the life of Brother Egidie, A 221, Oct., t. U., p. 572; Aprilio, t. U., p. 220; it its well with the accounts. Through it we obtain the approximate date of the definitive conversion of Francis we full years earlier.

^{*}I Col., 25; 3 Saic, 24; How 20. Cf. About Perm, A 105, p. 583, and A, 38;, Aportis, 1 10; p. 259 ff.

They went up and down the country, joyfully newing their seed. It was the beginning of summer, the time when everybody in Undain is out of doors moving or turning the grass. The ensteam of the country have changed but little. Walking in the end of May in the fields about Florence, Perugia, or Ricti, one will seem at nightfall, the baggipers entering the fields as the mowers sent themselves upon the boy coeks for their evening meal; they play a few pieces, and when the train of large unkers returns to the village, followed by the harvest-baden earts, it is they who head the procession, reading the air with their playrest atrains.

The joyout Penitenta whic layed to call themselved Joudiatores Domini, God'n jougleurs, no death effect this the same.\ They did even better, for not willing to be a charge to anyone, they passed a part of the day in aiding the persants in their field work.\ The inhaldfants of these districts are for the most part kindly and so-dute; the friars some gained their confidence by relating to them first their history and then their hopes. They worked undate together; field hands and friars often slept in the same bern, and when with the morrow's dawn the friars went on their way, the hearts of those they left he-hind had been touched. They were not yet converted, but they knew that not far away, over toward Assisi, were living men who had renumeed all worldly goods, and who consumed with zeid, were poing up and down preaching positions and peace.

¹ Spec, The Qualiter divit fratri Kyhlis prinspries on terreptus at daret mantellam vimbur paupeci. In prinsordia velopisus venes maneret apud liegum Tortum can duchas fratribus guertus, terrium Labeliat M we uniform that the necessary is not the connelmian that the necessary is not the diposition between extistactors. It is in finit very easy to understand the optical filusion to which below on the Purlimonla were made the scene of the greater number of the events of St. Franchis IIIa, while it would be difficult to seen why there should have been my attempt to currently Rive Torto without contools. The Prototti Boy: Ando increase of speciale distribute, which continue the inclication of Rivo Torto. Pilet if Egidio, § 1.

Their reception was very different in the cities. If the possint of Central Haly is mild and kindly fluctownsfolk are on a first nequaintance scotling and ill disposed. We shall shortly see the frima who went to Florence the laft of all norts of perseentions.

Only a few weeks had passed since Francis lagan to preach, and already his words and nets were nounding an irresistible appeal in the depths of many a heart. We have arrived at the most unique and interesting period in the history of the Franciscene. These first mouths are for their institution what the first days of spring are for nature, days when the almond-tree blessoms, learing witness to the mysterious latter going on in the womb of the earth, and heralding the flowers that will suddenly enamed the fields. At the sight of these men—bare footed, scantily clothed, without money, and yet so happy much minds were much divided. Some held them to be mad, others admired them, finding them winely

¹ An. Peron, A. 1991, p. 609. Ct. Elser., Ulto di Egidio, 14 Spec., 124, 1904, 9 Co., 9, 4094, A. 1981, Aportis, C. III., p. 227.

¹ Spec., 0484 Conform, 210b, 1; And fra p. 10b

different from the vagrant member. That plugate of Christandons

Sametimes, however, the friend found aneces and responding to their efforts, the conversion of souds not takeing form with enough rapidity and vagor. To encourage them, Francia would then confide to them his visions and ais lapes. "I saw a multitude of men coming foward as, asking that they might receive the leafest of our holy religion, and lo, the sound of their foot to prestill echoes in my cars. I saw them coming from every direction, filling all the reads."

Windover the hiegraphics may may, Universe was far from foresceing the sorrow, that were to follow this rapid increase of his Order. The masiden learning with from bling rapture on her lover's minimum or more discusses of the jumper of motherhood than he throught of the drope he must drain after quarting jeyfully the generator with of the challes."

Every prosperous movement provoke supposition by the very fact of its prosperity. The herbe of the field have their own language for entering the leager lived plants that smaller them out, one can hardly live without arousing jealousy; in vain the new fixteriarty showed itself humble, it rould not escape this law.

When the brethren went up to Assau to beg from door to door, many refused to give be the m, representing them with deniring to live on the grade of others refer being aquandered their nwn. Many a time the school barely enough not to drarve to death. It would even accountful the clargy were not entirely without part methin equacition. The Biology of Assioi will to Transin consider "Your way of living without against mything accounts in your lural and difficult." "My least," replied by "if

Pffm Gyroand - Tv Pffm Gyroand - Tv

If the hishop's perplexities were great, those of Francis were hardly loss so. He was too neute not to foresea the conflict that threatened to break out between the frings and the clergy. He saw that the enemies of the priests praised him and his companions beyond measure simply to set off their poverty against the avarice and wealth of the occlosinstics, yet he felt himself urged on from within to continue bis work, and could well lave exclaimed with the apostle, " Woe is me if I preach not the gospel L" On the other hand, the families of the Penitents could not forgive them for having distributed their goods among the poor, and altacks came from this direction with all the bitter language and the deep hatred natural to disappointed hoirs. From this point of view the hyotherhood appeared as a monace to families, and many parents trembled lest their sons should join it. Whether the friers would or no, they were an unending subject of interest to the whole city. Evil runors, pleatifully shroud abroad against thom, simply defeated themselves; tlying from month to month they speedily found contradictors who had no difficulty in showing their absurdity. All this indirectly served their cause and guined to their side these burrls, more minierous than is generally believed, who find the defence of the persoouted a necessity.

As to the clergy, they could not but feel a profound dis-quadem cini quantitate fuerat per cumiom episcopum spatiatum. Honorit opara, Harny's oddion, t. t., col. 200 K.—Of. Potthaut, 77-II.—The mentan of the kospitul de Kiricte proven beyond question that the Bishop of Assisi in bera comormed and not the Walcop of Oslano, as some critics have suggested.

Another document shows him abstrift with the Renedicthes of Maint Subside (the very ones who afterward gave Porthecona to Francis), and Hanarius III. found the bishop in the wrong: Bull Conquerente accumum manusterii ap. Richter, Corpus juris cammici. Laipzig, 1830, 4to, Haray, loc. cit., t. 1., col. 163; Potthest, 7728.

trust of these by convertors, who, though they aroused the latered of some interested persons, awakened in more pions souls first astericliment and then ulmiration. Suddenly to see men without title or diploma ancewed brilliantly in the mission which has been ufficially routided to ourselves, and in which we have made piliful shipwreek, is ernel torture. Have we not som generals whee preferred to lose a battle rather than gain it with the aid of guerrillas?

This covert opposition has left mechanicleristic braces in blo Idographies of St. Francis. It is not to be wondered at; Thomas of Celano, even if he had had information of this patter, would have been wanting in tact to make use of it. The clergy, for that matter, possess a thousand means of working upon public opinion without consing to show a religious interest in those whom bloy detects.

But the more St. Francis shall find himself in contrastiction with the clergy of his time, the more he will he lieve himself the elections son of the Church. Confounding the geopel with the teaching of the Church, he will for a good while border upon hereby, but without ever falling into it. Happy simplicity, thanks to which he had never to take the attitude of revolt!

It was five yours since, a convulement learning upon his staff, he had felt himself taken possession of by a leathing of uniterial pleasures. From that time every one of his days had been marked by a step in advance.

It was again the spring-time. Perfectly looply, he fold-himself more and more impelled to bring others to share his happiness and to proclaim in the four corners of the world how he had attained it. He resolved, therefore, to undertake a new mission. A few days were spent in preparing for it. The Three Companions have preserved for us the directions which he gave to his disciples:

O hat no consider that that in his goodness has not eathed as merely for our own salvation, initials for fluid of many onen, that we may go through all this world exhauting mea, more by our example than by our words, to report of their sion and bear the communication of anied. Be not fourful in the ground that we appear little and ignorant, but simply and without disquintable preach reportance. Have faith in God, who has avarious the world, floid his Spirit will speak in you and by you, exhorting man to be more red and leep his communication.

You will find man full of faith, gentlemes, and condiness, who will recolve you and your words with joy: but you will find others, and in greater numbers, faithless, proud, bloophemers, who will speak ovil of you, resisting you and your words. He resolute, then, to embure erecteding with patigues and humility."

Mearing this, the fredheen began to be eighted. (3) Prancis sold to them: O Rave on fear, for very soon many neither and learned men will mone to you; they will be with you promoting to kings and princes and to a multituin of peoples. Many will be convented to the Lord, all over the world, who will multiply and because his tomaly."

After his had thus spoken he blossed them, saying to each one the word which was in the future to be his suppreme consolution:

"My brother, commit yourself be God with all your cares, and he will gone for your"

Then the mon of that departed, faithfully observing his testimetions, and when they found websiek or a cross they sowed in adviation, verying with deviation, "We adoration theo. O Endst, and no bless thee hope and in discretize in the whole would, for by thy hely cross their hast ransmord the world." In fact they believed that they had found a huly phase wherever they found a church as a cross

Summ listened willingly, others seaffert. The greater correlate overwhilmed them with quantition. "Whence come you't "Tiff what order arrayou?" And they, though semethmen it was meanly one to answer, add shuply, "We are pedicula, natives of the city of Assist,"

This freshness and poetry will not be found in the later missions. Here the river is still itself, and if it known toward what see it is hostering, it known nothing of the stronges, more or less turbid, which shall disturb its limpidity, nor the dykes and the straightenings to which it will have to submit.

^{. 18 800., 86} and 37. Of. Anon. Perus. op., A. 193., p. 696.; Test. B. Wranelsch

A long account by the Three Companions gives us a picture from life of these first essays at preaching:

Many mon took the frints for known or malmen and refused to receive them into their houses for fear of being redshed. So in many places, after having radionate utless that he may, they could find menther refuse for the night than the portion of churches or houses. There were no that their two backtion who went to Florence. They logged all through the city but could find no shelter. Forming too house which had a postion and under the portion a bench, they will be one unother, 9 Wa shall be very consertable hare for the wich." As the mistress of the house refused to be them enter, they hundry wheel her paramison to about upon the lower.

The was about to givent them periods for whom her hindered appeared, "Alby have you permitted those level fell as bridge imple our pertion?" he ushed. The worden replied that the had refused hirrordyn thou into the house, but led given them periods for to shop imple the matter where there was nothing for them to stead but the longth.

The cold was year along; but taking them for this continuous gave thou may sovering.

As for Houn, after leaving enjoyed on their teach memors steep than were necessary, warried only by divine warmth, and having for povering only their lasty Poverty, in the early dawn they would to the physical to local mass.

The lady would also on her part, and seeing the friend deviatily praying the suid to be self; "If these men were rose the suid things as my himbard suid, they would not remote there in prayer." And while she was making the se subsections behold a man of the mann of their was giving alms to the poor in the chirch. Forting to the friends he would have given a piece of meany to them as to the others but they refused his many and could not receive it. "Why," he select "state poor," not, will you not accept the the others ?" "It is true that we are poor," righted Brother Bornards. "but powerly does not redship upon to a reput office poor people; for by the green of their whose will no are accomplishing, no have volunts the bornar poor."

Much amused, he eshed them if they had ever had mything, and hearned that they had possessed much, but that for the love of Gold truy had given everything away. . . . The lady, seeing that the file had refused the sime, drow near to them and said that she would placely resolve them into her house if they would be pleased to helpe there. "May the land recomposes to you your good will," replied the friend, humbly.

But Guldo, harming that they lind not been able to find a cholter, took them to his own house, saying, "Here is a refuge prepared for you by the Lord; remain in R as long as you desire."

As for them, they gave thanks to God and spent several days with him, promising the fear of the Lord by word and example, so that in the end he made large distributions to the paor.

Well treated by him, they were desided by others. Many men, great and small, attacked and insulted them, nonethers going so for as to tree off their shelding; but though despelled of their only limb, they would not ask for its restitution. If, moved to plty, mon gave back to them what they had taken owny, they accepted it observiting.

There were those who threw need upon them, others who put diented that hands and invited them to play, and others clutching them by the need made them drag them along them. But moving that the friers were always full of joy in the milds of their iribulations, that they miltime construct more carried means, and that by their layer for one amount they made themselves known as true disciples of the fourd, many of them full themselves reproved to their hearts and came esting pardon for the offences which they had seconditial. They, pardoning them with all their heart, said, "The bord forgive you," and gave them plans goods for the salvation of their souls.

A translation can but imporfeelly give all the represend emotion, the candid simplicity, the modest joy, the fervent love which breatle in the faulty latin of the Three Companions. Yet these scattered friers sighed after the home-coming and the long conversations with their apiritial father in the branquil ferests of the saturds of Assisi. Priendship among men, when it everywhere a cortain limit, has something deep, high, ideal, intinitely sweet, to which no other friendship attains. There was no woman in the Upper Chamber when, on the last evening of his life, Jesus communed with his diaciples and invited the world to the eternal contringe supper.

Francis, above all, was impalient to soo his young family once more. They all arrived at Portinmenta almost at the same time, having already, before reaching it, forgotten the terments they had endured, thinking only of the joy of the meeting.)

18 Soc., 38-41.

· iac

OHAPTER VI

ST. FRANCIS AND INNOGENT III

Summar 1210 1

Skeing the number of his friers daily increasing, Francis decided to write the Rule of the Order and go to Rome to procure its approval by the Pope.

This resolution was not lightly taken. It would be a mistake in fact to take Francis for our of those inspired ones who rush into action upon the strongth of unexpected revolutions, and, thanks to their faith

1 The date usually fixed for the approval of the Rule by Interested III. is the mouth of August, 1200. The Bollandish had thought blomeolyen able to infer It from the account where Thomas of Colore (1 Col., 48) reform to the passage through Umbria of the Emperor Other IV., on his way to be arowned at Ruma (Ontabar 4, 1200). Upon this Journey won Bübmer Flokur, Regesta Imperii. Dei Regesten des Kaiserreichs unter Philipp, Otto IV., ato., Instruct, 1870, 4to, pp. 100 and 197. As this account follows that of the approval, they conclude that the butter was earlier. But Thamas of Colone puts this account there because the context but up to it, and not in order to fix its date. Everything leads to the hellef that the Brothern retired (recalligebat, 1 Col., 42) to Mive-Porte before and after their journey to Ramu. Busides, the Ham between April 25d and the mbbile of August, 1209, lamuch tuesteer for all that the biographers toll as about the life of the Druthers before their yield to Lanescott III. The infesion to Pierenea took place in whiter, or at least in a very cold But the deshive argument is that Innovent III. quitted Rome toward the end of May, 1268, and went in Vitorio, returning only to prown Otho, October 4th (Pottinst, 1727-1884). It is therefore absolutery necessary to postpone to the sommer of 1210 the vidt of the Petilionis " The poper. This is also the date wideh Wielding arrives at in their own infullibility, overnwe the multitude. the contrary, he was filled with a real lumility, and if he believed that God reveals himself in prayer, he never for that absolved himself from the duty of reflection nor oven from reconsidering his decisions. St. Bonnventura does him great wrong in picturing the greater number of his important resolutions as taken in consequence of drennes; this is to rob his life of its profound originality, his samelity of its choicest blossom. He was of those who struggle, and, to use one of the notdest expressions of the Bible, of those who by their perseverance conquer their souls. Those we shall are him continually reforching the Rule of his institute, uncomingly sovising it down to the but moment, according as the grow?? of the Order and experience of the human heart suggested to him modifications of it.

The first Rule which he submitted to Rome less not come down to us; we only know that it was extremely simple, and composed especially of passages from the Gospeta. It was doubtless only the repetition of Hossi verses which Francis and read to his first companions, with a few precepts about manual labor and the occupations of the new brethron.

¹³¹ Sec., 195,

^{*} I Col., 32; 3 Soo., 54; Bon., 34. Cf. Test. B. Fr. M. K. Matter of Hallo, in his Anfinge, has reads a very remarkable cludy of the Ride of 1221, whence he deduces an earlier Rule, which he believes to be that of 1221, whence he deduces an earlier Rule, which he believes to be that of 1221 r1210. For once I find myself entirely in accord with him, except that the Rule than account noted (Vhio Anfinge, pp. 14-25, 184-188) appears to me to be not that of 1210, which was very about, but mother, drawn up believes 1210 and 1221. The place exception first of he if Soc., 35, authorizes us to believe that he made perhaps as many as law. Ast, 6210, very short, containing little more than the three passages of the vocalion; 24, 3217 Cf., substantially that proposed by M. Muler; 361, 1221, that of which we shall speak at length facilier on; 4th, 1225, the tof which we shall speak at length facilier on; 4th, 1226, the Will, which if not a Rule is at least an appendix to the Rule. If from 1221-1226 he had that to make two Rules and the Will, as is

It will be well to pause here and consider the brothren who are about to set out for Rome. The biographics are in agreement as to their number; they were twelve, including Francis; but the mament they undertake to give a mane to each one of them difficulties begin to arise, and it is only by some exceptical ateight of hand that they can claim to have reconcibed the various documents. The question below briefly shown them difficulties. The question look on some importance when in the four-teenth contary men undertook to show an exact conformity between the life of St. Francis and that of Jeans, It is without interest to us. The profiber of two or three of these brothren stand out very clearly in the picture of the origins of the Order; others remind one of the picture of Midvarsally adialitial, there to nothing emprioding to the laying made two from 1310-1221. Perhaps we have a fingment of that of 1217 in the regulation of hermitages. While below, p. 100.

CPhanne of Calmon list. 1. Quidan pinor green animum (2. Reynardus; A. Vir alter; 4, Eddins; 5, Paus olius appositus; 6, Philippus: 7, Alius bonus vir / 8, 9, 10, 11, Quatuur berei et blonel viel. 1 Col., 24, 25, 39, 31. The Rhold-Amont text way a not blog of the last four, Three Companions; 1, Bernardon; 2, Petrus; 3, Rabbins; 4, Subbutinus : 5, Maritus : Jolotones Capello : 7, 8, 9, 40, 14, Dimelphores erived by the brothcon in their primitions - 3 Sme, 331, 85, 44, 46, 73. Rapayout aca (A. Harmardus (2, 3, . Pyhtias (A. B. 8, Elleratro) 7. Alius bonus virl. (28, 9, 40, 44, Quatuor viri bonesti. - 150x (28, 29, 30, B1, B3. The Floretti, while including on the importance of the isolve Pranchencing without only vix by their that: Giovan of Hitapollo, Egiflo, Phillip, Silvestro, Bernaphy, and Rutho. For., 1. We must go to the Canformities to find the traditional Dat, PADD 1: 1, Reconcides de Quintavallo (2), Petrus Chatanii (3), Egidias (4), Sahatinus (4), Movieus (4), Johannes de Otpella ; I, Philippus Longus ; 3, Johannes de Sancto Canstantio ; 0, Torbaras ; 10, Termirdus de Cheleblante (Sot) ; 11, Augelos Topografi; 12, Sylvester. As will be soon, in the last two discriminates twilve disdplor are in question, while in the preceding once there are andy obeyon. This is smough to show a dogmatio purpose. This list reappears exactly to the Speculica, with the sole difference that Franols ladog there included Augelo dl Tanarelo la the twelfth brather and Silventro dioappours. Spec. Kin.

ures of primitive Umbrian masters, where the figures of the background lawe a modest and tender grace, but no shadow of personality. The first Franciscans had all the virtues, including the one which is nearly always wanting, willingness to remain unknown.

In the Lower Climeh of Assisi there is an ancient fresco representing five of the companions of St. Prancis. Above them is a Madoum by Cimabuo, upon which they are gazing with all Heir soul. It would be more true if St. Francis were there in the place of the Madouna; one is always changed into the image of what one admires, and they resemble their unster and one mother. Ca attempt to give them a mane is to make a sort of psychological error and become guilty of infidelity to their memory; the only mone they would have desired is that of their father. His love changed their hearts and shed over their whole persons a radiance of light and joy. These are the true personners of the Pioretti, the mon who brought peace to cities, awakened consciences, changed hearts, conversed with birds, tuned welves. Of them one rany brily say: "Having nothing, yet possessing all things " (Nihit habentes, omnia possidentes).

They quitted Portimenta full of joy and contidence, Francis was too much absorbed in thought not to desire to place in other hands the direction of the little company.

"Latine diamen," for whit, "one from among cursolves to guide us, and let lefe he to us as the view of Jeans Christ. Wherever it may please blue to go we will go, and when he may wish to stop naywhere to sleep there we will stop." They chose Brother Bernards and did as Francis had said. They wouldoo fidled joy, and all their conversations bial for their object only the glory of that and the advention of their souls.

According to tradition, the five compagned del Santo buried there be side their nesser are Hericardo, Elivestro, William (an Englisheam), Elutio, and Volcatine (?)

Their journey was happily accomplished. Everywhere they found kindly some who sheltered them, and they felt beyond a doubt that God was taking earn of them.

Trancis's thoughts were all fixed upon the purpose of their journey; he thought of it day and night, and unhandly interpreted his dreams with reference to it. One time, in his dream, he saw himself watking along a read boside which was a gigantic and wonderfully beautiful troe. And, behold, while he looked upon it, filled with wonder, he fett himself become so hall that he could touch the houghs, and at the same time the tree bent down its branches to him." He awoke full of joy, sure of a gracious reception by the recovering pondiff.

This hopes were to be somewhat blighted. Innecent III, had now for twelve years occupied the throne of St. Potor. Still young energetic, resolute, he enjoyed that superfluity of authority given by success. Coming after thin feeble Colestine 111., he had been able in a few years to reconquer the temporal domain of the Church, and so to imprave the pupil influence as almost to realize the therecratic drowns of Gregory VII. He had been King Pedro of Aragon declaring himself his vosud and laying his grown upon the tomb of the apostler, that he might lake it back at his hands. At the other end of Europe, John Luckhuid had been oldlyod to receive his crown from a logate after having sween homage, fealty, and an annual tribute to the Holy Sec. Preaching union to the cities and republies of Haly, easing the cry trans t trans ! to resonnt like the shout of a trumpel, he was the natural ropresentative of the national awakening and appeared to he in some sort the suzernin of the emperor, as he was already that of other kings. Finally, by his efforts to purify the Church, by his indenihable firmness in defend-doubts on this point, but he draw his religion rather from the Old Testament than from the New, and if he often thought of Moses, the leader of his people, nething reminded him of Jesus, the shepherd of souls. One cannot be overything; a choice intelligence, an iron will are a sufficient partian even for a priest god; he lacked love. The death of this poutiff, great among the great enes, was destined to be sainted with sough of joy.

¹³ Suc., 46; 1 Col., 33; Ron., 34.

^{9 1} Col., 33 ; 3 Boo., 53 ; Bon., 35.

His reception of Francia furnished to Giotto, the friend of Dante, one of his most striking freezen; the pope, scaked on his throne, turns abruptly toward Francia. He frowns, for hydres not understand, and yet he feels a strange power in this mean and despised man, vitis of despectus; he makes a real but futile effect to comprehend, and now free in this pope, who lived upon lemons, something that really another choice mind, theoretic like his own, sacrificed like him to his work: Calvin, One might think that the painter had teached his lips to the Calabrian Seer's cup, and that in the attitude of these two men he saught to symbolize a meeting of representatives of the two ages of humanity, that of Law and that of Love.

A surprise awaited the pilgrims on their arrival in

³ Vie cheri ingenii, magnor probitalis et explortie, cui multus escundus tempora mus. Rhuedum, do gentis Philippi Ampuste in Unobosum. Historie Princerum meriphores contami, 1 v., p. 101. Nec signalem subminitia, facundid, decedorum et legum peratum, strengitate, puda temm une udhuo visum est habero sequentem. Of Monokom, Societ et i. Sec, bulgely, VIII, t. III, p. 202. Innocentius, pro vere stru or avande erat et immutator meati. Conton, Ilos, Angleston, Interes, 1902, p. 404.

² Cufus fluis latition potos quan trivitados senerario subsecto - Als herio della Tra Pantano. Aedibits. Accordense histories, 3-41. p. 409.

Decidit in acutam (febrem) quant cans continue decide formet accuration quibus in magna quantitate et er consuctablico econol dans a minime abolineral accuration ad altimate to bething a partiquent substitutification. Alburh dollo Teo Frantano, he said.

^{*} Frome in the great mere of the Upper Church of Assist.

Rome: they met the Bishop of Assisi,! quite as much to his autonislament as to their own. This detail is precious because it proves that Francis had not confided his plans to Guido. Notwithstanding this the bishop, it is said, affered to make interest for them with the princes of the Church. We may suspect that his commendations were not very worm. At all events they did not avail to save Franciscand his company either from nonarching inquiry or from the extended fatherly commens of Cardinal Giavanni di San Pache? apon the difficulties of the Rule, commels which strongly resemble these of Guido himself.

What Prancis asked for was simple enough; he claimed no privilege of any work but endy that the pape would approve of his undertaking to lead a life of absolute constantity to the precepts of the grapel. There is a delicate point here which it is quite worth while to see clearly. The pape was not called upon to approve the Rule, since that came from shows himself; at the very worst all that he could she would be to by an exclusionic ^{14 (5}d), 32 , 3 (6oc), 42.

FOR the Colombia faintly (be shed in 1910 - 17 Albert, M. Vide Cardella, Mound in at a light of Paristicals, I radio, 680, Romo, Pill II., & L. y. 173. He was at Romo in the squares of 1910, for on the 11th of August he ramater signal the built Esta ferrer rather. Porthart, 1991. Augula Clarenn relative the appropriation with more presidencial certain respects. Congen Burner Bustell's or good total if it (Pronvious) and a calde of quark purpose that enterestive righ estate homeons and temporis, relationalist ring, qual allogices ender a salve, along the appeal the wearing of all appe to a Charsto micros and talver chains of man aliana portal and an constant of affleonaux, then in any postations in someous . These decidents decidences the paneta Pard og overen Beliannis et stendens Hoga gårispus Holl nels His splette web assistance dance Proper wet son his give se total consen Amongo Printeger of Cardinalistics pland group on rand rational Class rifl of Toplet Limitarities Mil. P. da. This intervention of Rigidial is anonthoped for no other decisions. It is, histories, by the Monte ency in Rosso in the counter of 1996 - 4 Vida prosto lago ellde Post Briest, p., 460, 6 and observe evaugelical perfection in all things. I believe that by him the Lord intends to refere the faith of the Holy Church throughout the whole world."

¹¹ Tel., 32 and 33. 11 Thee, 42 and 49. 11 Am. Peri, A. 53., p. 390.

On the narrow he presented Francis and his companions to Timocont III. Naturally, the pope was not sparing of expressions of sympathy, but he also repeated to them the remarks and compels which they had already heard so often. "My dear children," he said, "your life appears to me too severe; I see indeed that your ferver is loo great for any doubt of you to be possible, but I ought be consider those who shall come after you, lest your mode of life should be beyond their strength."

Adding a few kind words, he dismissed them without coming to any definite conclusion, promising to consult the eardinals, and advising Transis in particular to address himself to God, to the end that he might manifest his will.

^{1.3} Sec., 48.

^{2 3} Sec., 49; I Cel., 33; Bon., 35 and 36. All tide has been appele worked over by tradition and given acoust an only of the reality. It would cortainly have needed very little for the Papifouts to meat the nama late belara Indocent III, mathe Waldenses before Loreina III. Trancs of this bilarylew are found in two texts which appear to me to be too suspictions to warrant their insertion in the body of the moralive. three to a fragment of Mutthew Parts: Papa itague in frates memarato habitane deforment, rultum despicabilem, barkam pralixum, capittos for oulten, unpercitia predentia et nigra diligenter epusiderans : enus petitionom clus titus arduam et executione impussibilem recitaro fecisset, desposit ona et disit: Unde frater, et quara garens, quibus patius debes quam hominibus computeari, et involva le cam eis in valutalea, et regulam illis a to commentatum tradens, officiam two granticationis impende, Qual amilieus Franciscus inclinato capits exicit et saccis tandem inventis, in lata se enu cis landin inedvit quomque a planta pedis usque ad varticear, corpus sanut tatum oum ipsa haláta pollaisset. Siegas ad cansistarina reverteus Papar se conspectibus prasentarit dicens: Damina feci sicut procepisti exaudi unue obsecro petitionem mean. Ed. Wats, p. 340. The Incident has a real Franciscan color, and should have some historic lasta. Corloady, it in some surt mosts a passage in the legend at Banaventura which is an interpolation of the end of the thirteenth contury. Son A. SS., p. 501.

Francis's anxiety must have been great; he could not understand these dilatory measures, these expressions of affection which never led to a categorical approbation. It seemed to him that he had said all that he had to say, For now arguments he had only one resource—prayer.

He fell his prayer answered when in his conversation with Jesus the parable of poverly came to him; he returned to by it before the pope.

There was by the desort a woman who was very poor, but bountiful. A grant king, nowing her bounty, desired to take her for his wife, for the thought that by his in should have bountiful children. The marriaga contracted and amaginated, mony mans were been to blue. When they were grown up, their methor upoke to them thou; "My mans, you have no mans to ideal, for you are the man of the king; go, therefore, to his most, and he will give you everything you need."

When they errived at the mourt the king admired their beauty, and linding in them his own likeness he neked, "Whose some are you? And when they rapided that they were the some of a poor wronen who lived in the desert, the king chaqued them to bic beart with juy, saying "Have no four, for you are not nema; if strangers out at my table, ranch more shall you who are my lawful some." Then the king some word to the woman is ment to bic court all the some which she had beene, that they might be marriabled there.

"Vary buly fidher," added Franch, "I am this pow woman whom dail in the hose has deigned to make beautiful, and of whem he has been pleased in have lawful man. The King of Kings has teld not that ha will provide for all the was which he may have of ran, for If he manlains hastards, how much more his legitimate man," 13 Son., 50 and 51; Rom., 37; 2 Cal., 1, 11; Burnned do Bossa, Turla MS., 5 (1016). Obsertint dl Casall (Arbor vita enriques, Venlea, 1185, 16, v., cap. III.) (ells a curbone story in which has depicte the healtgundled of the problem gadnet Franche. Quernom have est doctrona norm quain infers annihus matris?—Quis potest vivers sinc temporalism possessione?—Wanapuid to author es quain patres matri qui dederunt nobis temporalis et in temporalibus abundantes rechsias ressidenant?—Then follows the flue paryor handled by Wadding in Franchia works.—The central idea in the mann as in the parallel of poverty.—This story, though and informible to any source, loss nevertheless to be apparatus, since it shows how in the year 1800 a none who had all the dearments before his nyea, represented to bineself Franchia and stop stops.

So much simplicity, joined with such pions obstimely, that conquered tonocent. In the humble mendicant operacived an apostle and prophet whose mouth no ower could close. Successor of St. Peter and vicar forms Christ that he felt himself, he saw in the mean addespised man before him one who with the anthority for absolute faith proclaimed himself the root of a new nearo of most legitimate Christians.

The biographers have held that by this parable Francis ought above all things to tranquillize the pope as to the dare of the brethren; they find in it a reply to ble uxieties of the pontiff, who feared to see them starve to eath. There can be no doubt that its original meaning as totally different. It shows that with all his bumility rancis knew how to speak out toddly, and that all his speek for the Church could not hinder his seeing, and, then necessary, saying, that he and his brethren were to lawful some of the gospel, of which the members of to clergy were only extraori. We shall find in the ourse of his life more than one example of this indomable holdness, which disarmed Innocent AT, as well as to future Gregory IX.

In a consistory which doubtless was held between the verification of the cardinals expressed the opinion that the initiative of the Penitents of Assisi was an movation, and that their mode of life was entirely besend human power. "But," replied Giovanni di San 'acile, "if we hold that to charve gospel perfection ad make profession of it is an irrational and impossible innovation, are we not convicted of blaspheny gainst Christ, the author of the gospel?"

These words struck Innocent III, with great force; he now better than any one that the possessions of the estastics were the great abductes to the reform of the Church, and that the threatened success of the Albiga sian heresy was especially due to the fact that it preach the destrine of poverty.

Two years before he had accorded his approbation a group of Waldensiaus, who under the name Poor Coolies had desired to remain faithful to the Clurch; therefore gave his approval to the Penifents of Assisi, I as a contemporary chronicler has well observed, it was the hope that they would wreat the banner from heres

Yot his doubta and heritations were not enlirely a sipaled. He reserved his definitive approbabion, the fore, while lavishing upon the brothers the most aftionate tokens of interest. He authorized them he a time their missions everywhere, after baving gained consent of their ardinaries. The required, however, they should give thouselves a responsible superior whom the exclusivation authorities could always add themselves. Naturally, Francia was chosen. This is a lumble in appearance, definitively constituted Franciscan family.

The attempt of Durant of Huenes to create a monolismi ordered yet been studied with mullelent inflationess. Chief of the denses of Aragon, he was present in 1297 at the conference of Parant decided to retorn to the Church. Recolved with kindmess is pape be at first led a great monors, and by 1209 bed colabilated munities in Aragon, at the convenient all the Huenmann's Michael Minon, Minos, Minos, Wallin. Walled in this neavement all the Huenmann's of the intense by the first in the first intense of the Albigonsian crosses. Incorrect 111., epistole, xi. 197, 198, xii., 17, 68; xiii., 183, 77, 78, 114; xv., 182, 183, 10, 114, 104, 96, 117, 146. The first of these bulls contains the very curbon of this ephemeral order. Hence the subsequent area vide Ripull, Hall Presidenterium, B. vole., follo, Henne, 1729–1740, 3, 4, 5, p. 106. C. Borger, Registres & Innevent 1 F., 2763.

Burehard, of the order of the Pronostruci, who died in 1926 below, p. 244.

^{¥8} Hoc., 52 ; Bon., 9€.

The mystics whom we saw going from village to vil-Ingo transported with love and liberty accepted the yoke almost without thinking about it. This yoke will preserve them from the disintegration of the heretics, but it will make itself sharply felt by those pure souls; they will one day look back to the onrly days of the Order as the only time when their life was truly conformed to the gospol.

When Francis heard the words of the supreme pontiff he prostrated bimself at his feet, promising the most porfect obedience with all his heart. The pope blessed thom, saying: "Go, my brothron, and may God be with you. Prouch positioned to overyone according as the Lord may deign to inspire you. Then when the Allpowerful shall have made you multiply and go forward, you will refer to us; we will concode what you ask, and we may then with greater security accord to you even more than you ask." 1

Francis and his companions were too little familiar with Roman phrasoology to perceive that after all the Holy See had simply consented to suspend judgment in view of the aprightness of their intentions and the purity of their faith "

The flowers of clorical rhetoric hid from them the shackles which had been laid upon them. The caria, in fact, was not satisfied with Francis's vow of fidelity, it desired in addition to stamp the Ponitents with the seal of the Church: the Cardinal of San Puolo was deputed to confer upon them the tensure. From this time they were all under the spiritual authority of the Roman Church.

13 800., 53 and 49.

^{*}St. Antonduo, Archbishop of Florence, saw very clearly that it was quadam concessio simplex habitus et modt illius vicendi et quasi permissio. A. SS., p. 830. The expression "approbation of the Rule" by which the act of innecent III, is usually designated is therefore erroneous,

The thoroughly lay creation of St. Francis had become, in spite of himself, an ecclesinstical institution: it must soon degenerate into a clerical institution. All unawares, the Franciscan movement had been unfaithful to its origin. The prophet had abdicated in favor of the priest, not indeed without possibility of return, for when a man has once reigned, I would say, thought, in liberty—what other kingdom is there on this earth? In makes but an indifferent slave; in vain he tries to submit; in spite of himself it happens at times that he lifts his head proudly, he rattles his chains, he remembers the struggles, sadness, anguish of the days of liberty, and weeps their loss. Among the sons of St. Francis many were destined to weep their lost liberty, many to did to conquer it again.

CHAPTER VII

RIVO-TORTO

1210-1211

THE Positionts of Assisi wore overflowing with joy. After so many mortally long days spent in that Rome, so different from the other cities that they knew, exposed to the ill-disguised suspicious of the prelates and the jeers of positifical lackeys, the day of departure seemed to them like a deliverance. At the thought of once more seeing their heloved mountains they were seized by that homesickness of the child for its native village which simple and kindly souls preserve till their latest breath.

Immediately after the coronony they prayed at the tomb of St. Peter, and then crossing the whole city they quitted Rome by the Porta Salara

Thomas of Celano, very brief as to all that concerns Francis's sojourn in the Eternal City, recounts at full length the light-heartedness of the little band on quitting it. Already it began to be transfigured in their memory; pains, fatigues, fears, disquietade, besitations were all forgotten; they thought only of the fatherly assurances of the supreme pontiff—the view of Christ, the lord and father of the Christian universe—and promised themselves to make over new efforts to follow the Rule with fidelity.

Full of these thoughts they had set out, without provisions, to cross the Campagua of Rome, whose few inhabitants never venture out in the heat of the day. The road stretches away northward, keeping at some distance from the Tiber; on the left the jugged crest of Soracte bathed in wists formed by the exhalations of the earth looms up disproportionately as it fades in the distance; o the right, the evertuating undedutions of the hillocks wit their wide pastares separated by thickets so parelied an ragged that they seemed to ery for mercy and pardor Between them the dusty road which goesestraight forward implicable, showing, as far as the eye can reach, nothin but the quivering of the fiery nir. Not a house, not true, not a pussiog breeze, nothing to sundain the travelle under the disquietade which creeps over him. Here an there are a few abundoned huts, their ruins looking like the corpses of departed civilizations, and on the edg of the horizon the falls rising up like gigantic and m surmountable wills.

Thoro are no words to describe the physical and mor sufferings to which he is exposed who undertakes wither proper properation to crose this inhospitable distric To the weakness caused by fack of air soon succeeds t insurmountable hesitude. The feet sink in a soft, tor ous dust which every step sends up in clouds; it cove you, penetrated your skin, and purches your mouth eye more than Birsk. Little by little all energy obba awa a damb dejection beizen you, sight mad thought become nlike confused, fover ensues, and you cast yourself doy by the read into, mubbe to take another step.

In their laste to leave Rome Francis and his compaions had forgotten all thin, and had imperdently set for They would have succumbed if a chance traveller la not brought them reneor. Ho was abliged to leave the before they had shaken off the last Indheinations of f yer, briving them amazed with the unexpeated succ which Providence and Bent them.

^{*1} Col., 34; B Boo., 53; Mon., 39.

They were so severely sluttered that on arriving at Orto they were obliged to stop awhile. In a desert spot not far from this city they found a shetter admirably adapted to serve them for refuge; it was one of those Etruscan tembs so common in that country, whose chambers serve to this day as a shelter for beggars and gypsics. While some of the brethren hastened to the city to beg for food, the others remained in this solitade enjoying the happiness of being together, forming a thousand plans, and more than ever delighting in the charm of freedom from care and remunciation of material goods.

This place had so strong an attraction for them that it required an effort of will to quit it at the end of a fortnight. The seduction of a life purely contemplative assailed Trancis, and he tasked binnelf if instead of preaching to the multitudes he would not do better to live in retreat, solely raindful of the inward dialogue between the sent and God.³

This aspiration for the solidal repose of the eleister came back to him several times in his life; but love always went he victory. He was too much the child of his time not to be at times tempted by that happiness which the Middle Agen regarded as the supreme bliss of the elect in paradise power. Beati mortal quia quiesanat! This distinguishing positiority is that he never gave way to it.

The reflections of Francia and his companions during their stay at Orto only made their apostolic mission more close and imporative to them. He, above all, seemed to be tilled with a new arder, and like a valinat knight he burned to throw himself into the thick of the fray.

Probably at Orriedi, which lies on the high-road between Rome and Spalate. Urbe is an least and a half further on. It is the ancient Ofricalium, where many antiquities have been found.

^{* 1} Col., 384 Boo., 40 nod 41.

Their way now led through the valley of the Nera. The contrast between these cool glens, awake with a thousand veices, and the desolation of the Roman Campagna, must have struck them vividly; the stream is only a swellen torrent, but it runs so noisily over pebbles and rocks that it seems to be conversing with them and with the trees of the neighboring forest. In proportion as they had folt themselves alone on the road from Rome to Otricoli, they now felt themselves compassed about with the life, the fecundity, the gayety of the country.

The account of Thomas of Celane becomes se animated as it describes the life of Francis at this opoch that one cannot help thinking that at this time he must have seen him, and that this first meeting remained always in his memory as the radiant dawn of his spiritual life.

The Brothers had taken to preaching in such places as they came upon along their route. Their words were always pretty much the same, they showed the blessedness of peace and exhorted to penitence. Emboldened by the welcome they had received at Reme, which in all innocence they might have taken to be more favorable than it really was, they told the story to overyone they met, and thus set all scriples at rest.

These exhertations, in which Francis spared net hie hearers, but in which the eternest reproaches were mingled with se much of love, produced an enermous effect. Man desires abeve all thinge to be loved, and when he meets one who leves him eineerely he very seldem refuses him either hie love or his admiration.

It is only a low understanding that confounds love with weakness and compliance. We semetimes see siek mon feverishly kissing the band of the surgeon who performs an operation upon them; we sometimes do the same for our spiritual surgeons, for we realize all that there is of vigor, pity, coropossion in the tortures which they inflict, and the cries which they force from us are quite as much of gratitude as of pain.

The only road connecting Colano with Rome, as well as with all Central and Northern Italy, passes by Aquila, Rieti, and Terni, where it joins the high-roads leading from the north toward Rome.

Men lastened from all parts to hear these proachers who were more severe upon themselves than on anyone else. Members of the secular elergy, monks, learned men, rich more even, often mingled in the impromptu andionees gathered in the streets nod public places. All were not converted, but it would have been very difficult for any of them to forget this stranger whom they met one day upon their way, and who in a few words had moved them to the very bottom of their tearts with anxiety and four.

Francis was in truth, as Cohmo says, the bright morning star. This simple preaching took hold on consciouces, smatched his hearers from the mire and blood in which they were painfully trudging, and in spike of themselves carried them to the very heavens, to those serone regions where all in silent save the voice of the heavenly Pather. "The whole country brembled, the barren had was already covered with a rich harvest, the withered vine began again to blosson."

Only a perofoundly religious and poelic soul (is not blo one the other?) can understand the transports of joy which overflowed the sents of St. Francis's spiritual sons.

The greatest crime of our industrial and commercial civilization is that it leaves us a taste only for that which may be bought with namely, and makes us everlook the purest and trucal joys which are all the time within our reach. The evil has reads far in the past. "Wherefore," said the God of old Isaint, "do you weigh money for that which is not meat? Why labor for that which satisfieth not? Hearken unto me, and ye shall cut that which is good, and your soul shull delight itself in futness."

⁽¹ Col., 36 and 37; 3 Soc., 54; Bon., 45-48.

Joys hought with money -- noisy, feverish pleusures are nothing compared with these sweet, quiet, modest but profound, lusting, and posseful joys, outseging, and weavying the heart, which we too often pass by on one side, liko those peasants whom we see going into cestasies over the fireworks of a fair, while they have not so much as a glanco for the glorions splanders of a summor night.

In the phin of Assiai, at an hour's walk from the city and near the highway between Perugia and Rome, was a ruinous cottago called Rivo-Torto. A torreut, almost always dry, but expuble of becoming ferrible in a storm, descends from Monut Salusio and passes beside it. Pho ruin had no owner; it had served us a loper hospital before the construction by the Creeigeri's of their hospital

Cimbdi, Iv., Ջ.

This Order deserves is be belier known; it was founded under Alexander III. and raddly opread all over Control Huly and the East, In Francish Mathine it land in thely and the Hidy laced about firty hunsen dulinated to the corn of lopers. It he very probable that it worsels San Salvatore della Pareti that Franche whitted thosa undappy antioreca. In there made the juriforder wequelationed of a Greeker named Marke. The latter afterward falling III, Franchescut libers comedy which would curn libra lufuraling leba at the assues that the wine to become him disolphic wildon directly afterward took phase. The hospital thin Saleis tors has disappeared. It stood in the place new united Ospedalette, where a small chaped now stands half way between Arabi med Santa Macia It was from there that this dying Francis Idensed Andal, For Morbin vido il Son, 36 ; Bon, 40; 2 thd., 3, 120; Conform, 60b. Fue the heaptal vide Rom, 49; Conform, 1864, 1; Henorii III. opera, Throy, t. 1, and 200. Of. Pottland, 7740; L. Auveny, Registres de Grégairs IX., Paris, 1880, sto, us. 209. For the Cruelged in the time of St. Franchi while the Interesting hull Cum to fill prior, of July B, 1991; Migne, Inn. op., t. B., col. 125 ff. 12f. Polthard, 116th, and Chine particle, April 6, 1204 · Migno, loc. cit., 419. - 13, Potthast, 2140 and 3474.

San Salvatore delle Pareti; but since that time it had been abandoned. Now came Crancis and his companions to seek shelter them.\ It is one of the quietest spots in the sularbs of Assist, and from thence they could easily go out into the neighborhood in all directions; it being about an equal distance from Portiments and St. Da-But the principal motive for the choice of the place seems to have been the preximity of the Carceri, as those shallow natural grottos are called which are found in the forests, half way up the side of Mount Sabasio. Pollowing up the hed of the torrent of Rive-Porto one reaches them in an hour by way of ragged and stippery pablic where the very goals do not willingly venture. Ones arrival, one might funcy onesolf a thomand laugues from any luminar being, so uninerona are the birds of prey which five here quite undisturbed.3

Francia loyed this solitude and often retired thither with a few companions. The brethren in that case shared letwoon them all care of their material wants, after which, each one reliving into one of these caves, they were also far a few days to listen only to the inner voice.

Those libble learnitages, sufficiently isolated to secure them from disturbance, but near enough to the cities to permit their going thither to preach, may be found wherever Prancis weak. They form, as it were, a series of decuments about his life quite as important as the written witnesses. Something of his soul may still be found in these caverus in the Apenniue forests. The never separated the contemplative from the active life. A precious witness to this fact is found in the regulations for the brethren during their sejourn in her-

^{&#}x27; II Sun, ₁ Mi.

All this yet remains to its primitive state. The road whick went from Assist to the new colored Abbay of Monte Subsair (almost on the Support of the nomentality passed the Careeri, where there was a little shaped built by the Benedlellacs.

mitage.1

The return of the Brothers to Rivo-Porto was unrked by a vast increase of popularity. The prejudiced attacks to which they had formerly been subjected were lost in a chorus of praises. Perlaps men suspected the ill-will of the hishop and were happy to see him checked. Howover this may be, a lively feeling of sympathy and admiration was awakoned; the people resulted to mind the indifference manifested by the non-of Hermirdone a few months before with regard to Othe IV going to be orowned at Rome. The emperor had made a progress through Italy with a munerous suite and a pomp designed to produce an offect on the minds of the populace; but not only had Francis not interrupted his work to go and see him, he had enjoined upon his friare also to abstain from going, and had merely relected one of them to carry to the monarch a reminder of the ephemeral unture of worldly glory. Later on it was held that he had prodicted to the emperor his approaching excommunication.

This spirited attitude made a vivid impression on the popular imagination.2 Perhaps it was of more nervice in forming general opinion then maything he had done thus far. The masses, who are not often alive to delicate sontinents, respond quickly to those who, whether rightly or wrongly, do not bow down before power. This time they perceived that where other men would see the poor, the rich, the nable, the common, the learned, Francis

Illi qui religiosa valunt stava in cremis sint tres mut qualmor ad plus. Due or lisis shit nectors, et habeant dues filler, cet moun ad nelwes, Illi duo tencant vitaus Macther et olii duo citero Mario Magdalene, Asabi MS., 398, 49a h; text given also in though, 149h, 1, from which Wadding borrows it for the califor of the Opinicales of St. Francis. Of, 2 Cal., B, 116. It be possible that we have here a fragment of the Unto, which must have been compresed toward 1217, saw only souls, which were to him the more precious us they were more neglected or despised.

^{1 1} Col., 49 and dil; A Son., 45; Bon., 41.

No biographer informs us how long the Ponitents remained at Rive-Turte. It became probable, however, that they apent there the latter part of 1210 and the early mention of 1211, evangelizing the towns and villages of the neighborhood.

They suffered much; this part of the plain of Assisi is immulated by forcents nearly every natural, and many times the poor frings, blockaded in the legaratte, were forced to satisfy their hunger with a few roots from the neighboring fields.

The barrack in which they lived was so narrow that, when they were all there at once, they find much difficulty not to erowd one another. To seems to each one his due quots of space, Prancis wrote the mame of each brother upon the column which supports the building. Int these miner disconforts in no sense disturbed their happiness. No apprehension had as yet come to cloud Prancia's hoper; he was evertlowing with joy and kind-limss; all the memories which Rive-Torte has left with the Order are fresh and owest pictures of him.

One night all the lacthren recined to be deeping, when he heard a mouning. It was one of his sheep, to speak after the mamer of the Franciscan Liegrapher, who had denied binaself for rigorously and was alying of langer. Francia immediately rose, called the brother to him, brought forth the messare reserve of food, and himself hegan to call to inspire the other with courage, explaining to him that if positones is good it is still necessary to temper it with discretion.

¹ I. Col., 49, 44.

²² Gol., 1, 16; Thor., 65. These two nuthers do not say where the event took place; but there appears to be no remon for suspecting the indication of Rive-Torto given by the Speculum, to, 218.

Francis had that tact of the heart which divines the secrets of others and anticipates their desires. At another time, still at Rivo-Torto, he took a sick brother by the hand, led him to a grape-vine, and, presenting him with a fine cluster, began himself to eat of it. It was nothing, but the simple act so beand to him the sick man's heart that many years after the brother could not speak of it without emotion.

But Francis was far from neglecting his mission. Ever growing more sure, not of himself but of his duty toward men, he took part in the pelitical and social affairs of his province with the confidence of an upright and pure heart, never able to understand how stupidity, perversoness, pride, and indolence, by leaguing themselves together, may check the finest and most righteous impulses. He had the faith which removes mountains, and was wholly free from that touch of scepticism, so common in our day, which points out that it is of no more use to move mountains than to change the place of difficulties.

When the people of Assisi learned that his Rule had been approved by the pope there was strong excitement; every one desired to hear him preach. The clorgy were ebliged to give way; they effered him the Church of St. George, but this church was manifestly insufficient for the crowds of hearers; it was necessary to open the eathedral to him.

St. Francis never said anything especially new; to win hearts he had that which is worth more than any arts of oratory—an ardent conviction; he spoke as compelled by the imperious need of kindling others with the flame that burned within himself. When they heard him recall the horrers of war, the crimes of the populace, the laxity of the great, the rapacity which dishenered the Church, notion of the conditions under which Prancis first endered the pulpit of San Rafine.

His success was startling. The poor felt that they buil found a friend, a brother, a champion, abnost are avenged The thoughts which they incelly direct tonvour beneath their breath Fraceis practained at the top of his voice, during to bid all, without distinction, to repeat and love one another. His words were a cry of the local, an appoul to the consciousm of all his fellow-citizens, almost recalling the passionate attenuess of the prophets of Israel. Take those witnesses for Jehovali the "little poor man" of Assisi land part on anekeloth and unloss to donounce the iniquities of his people, like theirs was his conrago and horoism, like theirs the divine tenderscess in his heart.

Theonucid as if Assisi were about to recover again the feeling of Israel for sin. The effect of these appoints was prodigious; the entire papabilica was thrilled, compacted, desiring in future to live only according to Francisch counsels; his very companions, who had remained behind at Rivo-Porto, hearing of these marvels, felt in theme solves an answering thrill, and their vocation took on a now strongth; during the night they accound to see their mustor in a chariot of tire, souring to heaven like a new Blijsh.^t

This almost delirious enthusieses of a whole people was not perhaps so difficult to around an oright be supposed: the constand power of the masses was at that time as great all over Europe as it was in Paris charing certain days of the Revolution. We all know the tragic and touching story of these companies of eloldren from the north of Europe who appeared in 1212 is trought of soverd thousands, hoys and girls neingled together pollmoll. Nothing could store them, a mania had overtaken thou, in all good faith they tolieved that they were to deliver the Holy Land, that the sea would be dried up to let them pass. They periabel, we hardly know how, perhaps being sold into shavery.\(^1\) They were accounted murtyra, and rightly; papaber devotion tikened them to the Holy Innocents, dying for a God whom they know not. These children of the crusade also perished for an anknown ideal, (also no doubt; but is it not holder to die for an unknown and even a falso ideal than to live for the vain realities of an atterly unpoetic existence? In the end of time we shall be judged neither by philosophera nor by theologiaus, and if we were, it is to be heped that even in this case love would cover a multitude of sins and pass by unity follies.

Cortainly if ever there was a time when religious affections of the nerves were to be dreaded, it was that which produced such inevenments as these. All Europa seemed to be beside itself; wereen appeared shark taked in the streets of towns and villages, abouty walking up and down, silent as phantous." We can understand now the

Figure Remodisting chrombder, Albert von Stude (Mag. they, hist. $Script_{\rm eq}$ t, $10_{\rm e}$ pp. 271–370, thus choses blu notion of the eldbirgers are

Diplore are few executeof the thirteenth century that offer much discu-The chemicles of the most յուղժումը առացայալ միջաբա Միոս Ֆիև այթ. different countries speak of it at length. There is one of the shortest but most esset of the methers, given by an eye-witness (Amade of Genus of the youth 1407-1910, apaid Mon. Grew. hist. Beript., 3, 48); 1919 in mensa Augusti, die Pablatti, octava Kalendarum Septembris, intravit ciritatem chimas quidam puer Tentaniaus nomina Nichelaus percyrimationis vanua, et enm ea multituda ma cima pelegrinorum defferentes e cues et hordanas alguv scavedlas, altra septem soillig arkitratu koni viri inter homines et feminas et puellos et puellos. Et stie slaminica sequenti de civitata exicrant. 13f. (Hacomo di Viraggio): Muratori, i 3x., col. 40 : Dicchant quad mare debebat apost diacram sice ari et sie ipsi debebaut in Hierasulem progleisei. Multi antem inter cos crant filit Nobilium, puos ipsi cliam cam meretricibus destinarunt (!). The most traple mecanit is that of Alberta, who rolates the fute of the company that embarked at Morseilles. Montter, list, Script, 1, 23, p. 1811.

accounts which have come down to us, so fantastic at the first glame, of certain popular centers of this time; of Berthold of Ratisbon, for example, who drow together crowds of sixteen thousand persons, or of that Fra Giovanni Schio di Vicenza, who for a time quieted all Northern Etaly and brought Guelphs and Chibellines into one another's arms.

That popular elequence which was to accomptish so many marvels in 1233 comes down in a straight line from the Eranciscan movement. It was St. Francis who set the example of these open-air sermons given in the vulgar tengue, at street corners, in public squares, in the fields.

To feel the change which he brought about we must read the sermone of this contemporaries; declaratory, scholastic, subtile, they delighted in the minutin of exegosis or dogma, serving my refined dissertations on the most obscure texts of the Old Testament, to heavers starying for a simple and wholesome diet.

With Francis, on the contrary, all in incisive, clear, practical. Ite pays no attention to the precepts of the rhetoricians, he forgets himself completely, thinking only of the end desired, the conversion of souls. And conversion was not in his view nonething vague and indistinct, which must take place only between God and the heaver. No, he will have immediate and practical proofs of conversion. Men must give up ill-gotten gains, remounce their emuities, he recrucibal with their adversaries.

mado: Adhan quo decenerint ignorantue sed plurimi redicenut, a quibus cum quoveretar vansa enramativerunt se nescire.—Nudo etiam mulices circa idem tempus nibil loguentes per rillas et vicitates cuvarrerant.—Loc. cit., p. 366.

Othern, Pecanese, ann. 1938 (Maratoti, Scripberes Rev. Hal., t. vill., p. 620). Of. Bacharano da' Miraul: Hint. Eccles. di Vicensa, t. H., pp. 79-84.

At Assisi he threw kinself valuatly into the thick of civil dissessions. The agreement of 1202 between the parties who divided the city tad been wholly aphenoral. The common people were continually domaiding new liberties, which the nobles and burghers would yield to them only under the pressure of fear. Francis took up the cause of the weak, the minors, and succeeded in reconciling them with the rick, the majores.

His spiritual family had not an yel, properly speaking, a mane, for, unlike those too lasty spirits who baptize their productions before they have come to fight, he was waiting for the occasion that should reveal the true name which he ought to give it. One day someone was reading the Rule in his presence. When he came to the passage, a betthe brethren, wherever they may find themselves called to labor or to serve, never lake an office which shall put them over others, but on the contrary, let them be always under (sint minures) all those who may be in that house, at these words sint minures of the Rule, in the circumstances then existing in the city, suddenly appeared to him as a providential indication. This institution should be called the Order of the Brothers Minor.

We may imagine the effect of this determination. The Saint, for already this rangic word had burst forth where he appeared," the Saint had spoken. It was he who was about to bring peace to the city, acting as arbiter between the two factions which root it.

We still possess the document of this pair civile, ex-

² The Brothers were at first relied Viri paralentiales de civitate Assisii (3800, 37); it appears that they had a momentary thought of calling thoundway Pauperes de Assisio, but they were doublines disconded from this at Rome, as too obserdy rescanding that of the Pauperes de Lagdano. Vide Barchard chronicon, p. 376; vide Introd., cap. 6.

² Vida Bide of 1221, cap. 7.—12. 1 Cel., 38, and Ron., 78.

^{4 1} Cal., 80.

humed, so to speak, from the communal archives of Assisi by the learned and pions Antonio Cristofani.\(^{1}\) The opining limes are as follows:

O In the mine of Gold

("Phin in the statute and perpotual agreement between the Majori and Minori of Assiel.

Without common comment there shall never be any part of alliance with the pape and the moneter or legales, or with the emperor, or with the king, or with their auncies or legales, or with any city or town, or with any important person, except with a comment accord they abail do all which there may be to do for the honor, safety, and advantage of the commutum of Austal."

What follows is worthy of the beginning. The lords, in consideration of a small periodical payment, should renounce all the feather rights; the inhabitants of the villages subject to Assiei were put on a par with those of the city, foreigners were profeshed, the assessment of taxes was fixed. On Wednesday, November 9, 1210, this agreement was signed and sworn to in the public place of Assisi; it was made in such good faith that exiles were able to return in peace, and from this day we find in the city registers the names of these imagrées who, in 1302, had betrayed their city and provoked the disastrons were with Perugia. Francia might well be happy. There had brimplied, and for several years there were at Assisi neither victors nor vanquished.

In the mystic marringes which here and there in history units a man to a people, nomething takes place of which the transports of sense, the delirium of love, seem to be the only symbol; a moment comes in which saints, or men of genius, feel unknown powers striving mightily within them; they strive, they seek, they struggle until, triumphing over all obstacles, they have forced trembling, swooning humanity to conceive by them.

OMay the supreme gram of the Holy Spirit scalar as I To the honor of our faced Jesus Christ, the Idescal Vigin Mary, the Emperor Other and Duke isospeld.

¹ Starla d'Andri, L. L. pp. 120-120.

This moment had come to St. Francis.

OFFAPPER VIII

PORTHINGULA

1211

Fr was doubtless toward the oping of 1211 that the Brothers quitted Rive-Porto. They were engaged in prayer one day, when a pensant appeared with an ana, which he neisily drove before him into the poor shelter.

"Clo in, go in!" he cried to his beast; "we shall be most comfortable here." Happeared that he was afraid that if the Brothers remained there much longer they would begin to think this descried place was their own. Such rudeness was very displending to Francis, who immediately arose and departed, followed by his compansions.

Now that they were so immercian the Brothera could no longer continue their wandering life in all respects nain the past; they had need of a permanent shelter and above all of a little chapet. They addressed themselves in vain first to the bishop and then to the canons of San Ratino for the loan of what they needed, but were nown fortunate with the abbot of the Benedictines of Mount Subusio, who could be those in perpetuity the use of a chapel already very dear to their hearts, Santa Maria degli Angeli or the Portiuments.

Francis was onehunted; he new a mystorious hurmo-

J. P. Cal., 44 ; B Soc., 55.

^{*8} Soc., 56; Spec., 82b; Conform., 217b, 1; From Rabl. Angel., Amont, p. 378.

pinet by God Finnelf, between the mine of the sunctiony and that of his Order. The leading full for themselves a few hote; a quicksof hedge parenclosing wall, and thus in three or four days quized the first Franciscan convent.

anyonus they were entistical with this. These for a the heroic period of the Order. St. Francis, in assistance of his ideal, will neek to inculed a if upon aples and will succeed concetimes; fulfulready the a multiplication of the brotherhood will provide applement of the assistance.

amoundanines of the beginning of this period has your the lipe of Thomes of Celano amorf of manpower of the member life. It is the forming and ability commentary of the Padmist's cry; " Beliefe at and pleasant it is to be leathern and to dwell toclaister was the forest which then extended on all Portiuments, occupying a large part of the plain. py gathered around their moder to receive his Leannests, and thather they refined to meditate s.1. If would be a gross middle, however, to any it contemplation alreaded them completely dupdave which we see not reconcerated to missionary court of their trine was opent in normal labor, identically of Mr. Prancis have been more misups ed on this point their or say other, but it may be I new horse in the mone close than when he cardains frime shall garn their twelihood by the work of tols. He never dreamed discosting a mendicant e mested a bilia ingradies. It is true we shall a him logging and majng his disciples to do as til the so iso iderate suggist und to minhed ass; they are meant to teach that when a friar arrived in any locality and there spent his strength for long days in dispensing spiritual bread to fandshed souls, he ought not to blush to receive material bread in exchange. To work was the rule, to beg the exception; but this exception was in newise dishonorable. Did not Jesus, the Virgin, the disciples live on bread bestewed? Was it not rendering a great service to those to when they reserted to teach them charity?

Out has disappears 1. Busin of Francis's councels have been

Francis in his pactic language gave the mane of measa Domini, the table of the Lord, la this table of lave around which gathered the little poor ones. The bread of charity is the bread of angels; and it is also that of the birds, which reap not nor gather into barns.

We are far enough, in this case, from that mendicity which is understood as a means of existence and the essential condition of a life of idleness. It is the opposite extreme, and we are true and just to St. Francis and to the origin of the mendicant orders only when we do not separate the obligation of labor from the praise of mendicity.

No doubt this zeal did not last long, and Thomas of Colano already outities his chapters, "Lancat before God over the idleness and gluttony of the friers;" but we must not permit this speedy and inevitable decadence to veil from our sight the hely and muly beauty of the origin.

With all his goutloness Prancis know how to show an inflexible severity toward the idle; he even went so far us to dismiss a friar who refusual to work. Nothing in Vide Augelo Clareno, Tribut, cod. Lane., lib.

^{ 2} Col., 8, 97 and 48. The Conformation, 142a, 1, elte textually 97 as coming from the Legenda Antiqua. Cf. Spec., 81b. 2 Col., 8, 21. Cf. Conform., 171a, 1; Spec., 16b. See expectally Role of 1921, cap. 7; Rule of 1928, cap. 5; the Will wal 3 Sec. 41. The phecago, liceater's habern for amenta at instrumenta suis artibus necessaria, multifently proves that certain friends and real trades.

this unifer better shows the intentions of the Poverello than the life of Brother Egidia, one of his degrest companions, him of whom he said with a smile: "He is one of the paladian of my Round Table."

Brother Egidio had a teste for great adventures, and is a living example of a Franciscan of the carliest days; he survived his muster twenty five years, and nover ceased to obey the letter and spirit of the Rule with freedom and simplicity.

We find him one day setting out on a pilgrinunge to the Holy Lacid. Arrived at Brindisi, he borrowed a water jug that he might carry water while he was awaiting the departure of the ship, and passed a park of every day in crying through the alreets of the city: "Ather fresca! Alla fresca!" like other water carriers. But he would change his trade according to the country and the circumstances; on his way back, at Ancom, he procured willow for making baskets, which he afterward sold, not for money but for his foud. It even happened to him to be employed in langing the dead.

Sent to Rome, every morning after finishing his religious duties, he would take a walk of several leagues, to a certain forcid, whence he brought a load of would Coming lack one day be met a hely who wanted to lary they agreed on a price, and Egidia carried it to her humse. But when he arrived at the house she perceived him to be a frint, and would have given him more than the price agreed upon. "My good lady," he replied, "I will not permit myself to be everyone by avariee," and he deported without accepting anything at all.

In the olive season be helped in the galliering; in grapo season he offered binaself servintages. One day on the Piazza di Roma, where men are hired for day's work, he saw a pulvose who could not find a man to throsh his walnut tree; it was so high that no one dared risk himself in it. "If you will give me part of the nuts," said Egidio, "I will do it willingly." The bargain struck and the tree thrushed, there proved to be so namy unts that he did not know where to put his share. Cuthering up his timic he made a bag of it and full of joy returned to Rome, where he distributed them among all the pearwhom he met.

Is not this a charming incident? Does it not by it self alone reveal the freshness, the youth, the kindness of heart of the first Pranciscans? There is no end t the stories of the ingennesses of Brother Egidic. A kinds of work seemed good to him provided he had tim onough in the morning for hieroligions duties. Naw ! is in the service of the Colherer of the Four Crowns : Rome, sifting flour and carrying water to the conver from the well of San Siste. Now he is at Ricti, who he consents to remain with Cardinal Nicholas, bringit to every meal the bread which he had carned, notwit standing the entreaties of the muster of the house, wh would gladly have provided for his wants. One day rained so hard that Brother Egidio could not thin of going out; the cardinal was already making mer over the thought that he would be forced to accord hee that he had not earned. But Egidia went to the kitche and finding that it needed elemning be persuaded t cook to lot him swrop it, and returned trimuplar with the broad he had our unit, which he also at the ca dinal's table.

From the very beginning Egidic's life commanded spect; it was at once so original, so gay, so spirita

¹ A. 88., Aprills, t. III., pp. 220-248; Pior. Vita d'Egidio; Sp. 158 0; Conform., 63-10.

POther examples will be found below; it may suffice to recall ! his sally: "The glorious Virgin Mother of that had shapers for pents, she never embered any religious order, and yet she is what is!" A. SS., loc. cit., p. 234.

and so mystical, that even in the least exact and most expanded accounts his legend has remained almost free from all addition. He is, after St. Francis, the finest incarnation of the Franciscan spirit

The incidents which are here cited are all, so to speak, illustrations of the Rule; in fact there is nothing more explicit than its commands with respect to work.

The Brothers, after outering upon the Order, were to continue to exercise the calling which they had when in the world, and if they had none they were to learn one. For payment they were to necept only the food that was necessary for them, but in case that was insufficient they might beg. In addition they were anturally permitted to own the instruments of their calling. Brother Ginopro, whose nequaintance we shall make further on, had an awl, and gained his bread wherever he went by mending shoen, and we nee St. Clara working even on her double-hed.

This obligation to work with the hands merits all the more to be brought into the light, because it was destined hardly to marrive St. Francis, and because to it is due in part the original character of the first generation of the Order. Yet this was not the real reason for the being of the Brothers Minor. Their mission consisted above all in being the apomeer of Poverty.

Torrified by the ecclesisedical disorders of the time, haunted by painful memories of his past life, Francis saw in money the special instrument of the devil; in moments of excitement he went so far meto excernts it, as if there had been in the motal itself a sort of ungical power and secret curse. Money was truly for him the sacrament of evil.

Pho passago of the Will, Hemiter edo quad omnes laborent, has a capital importance because it down Franch renowing in the most subsum manner injunctions already mode from the neight of the Greder, G. I. Col., 32 and 33; Conform., 21th. I: Ancabant Fratres purpers kominestic agrizorament ipsi dabant poster elected pure amore Dei. Spre., 31; 16. Vido also Archie, t. B., pp. 272 and 200; Eccloston, I. and 15; 2 Col., 4, 13.

This is not the place for asking if he was wrong; grave authors have demonstrated at tength the economic brombles which would have been let loose upon the world if men had followed him. Alas I his madness, if madness it were, is a kind of which one need not fear the contagion.

The felt that in this respect the Rule could not be too absolute, and that if unfortunately the door was opened to various interpretations of it, there would be no stapping-point. The course of events and the periodical convulsions which shock his Order show clearly enough how rightly be judged.

I do not know nor desire to know if theologians have yet come to a scientific condusion with regard to the poverty of Jesus, but it seems evident to me that poverty with the latter of the hands is the ideal held up by the Calibran to the efforts of his disciples.

Still it is easy to see that Prancisean poverty is neither to be confounded with the infeeling pride of the stoic, nor with the stapid horror of all joy felt by certain fleve-ties; St. Prancis renounced everything only that he might the better passons everything. The lives of the immense majority of our contemporaries are ruled by the fatal error that the more one passesses the more one enjoys. Our exterior, civil liberties continually increase, but at the same time our inward freedom is taking flight; how many are there among us who are literally pessessed by what they possess?

Poverty not only permitted the Brothers to mingle with the poor and speak to them with authority, but, removing from them all material auxiety, it left them free to onjoy without hindrance those hidden treasures which nature reserves for pure idealists.

Nihit relebut proprietatis habere ut omnia planius posset in Domine possidere. B. de Basse, 102c.

The over-thickening barriers which modern life, with its sickly search for uscless comfort, has set up between us and nature did ned exist for these men, so full of youbb and life, eager for wide spaces and the outer air. This is what gave St. Francis and his companions that quick susceptibility to Nature which made them thrill in mysterious larmony with her. Their communion with Nature was so intimate, so urdent, that Umbrin, with the harmonious packry of its skies, the joyful outburst of its spring-time, is still the best document from which to study them. The tie between the two is so indissoluble, that after leaving lived a cerbain lime in company with St. Francis, one can hurdly, on reading certain passages of his biographous, help seeing the spot where the incident took place, hearing the vague sounds of eventures and things, precisely as, when rending certain pages of a beloved author, one hears the sound of his voice,

The worship of Poverty of the early Franciscans land in it, then, nothing ascetic or barbarons, nothing which recalls the Stylites or the Nazirs. She was their bride, and like true lovers they felt no futigues which they might endure to find and remain near her.

> La for researdla a for their rembinith, Amor e maraviglia e didee ignardo Faccan esser ragloa do' pendor math '

To draw the partrait of an ideal knight at the beginning of the thirteenth century is to draw Francis's very pertrait, with this difference, that what the knight did for > Phote concord and their joyous souldsness. The love, the wonder and the owed regard. They made to be the cause of hely thought,

> > DANTE: Paradiso, condo xl., verses 70-78, Langfellow's translation, his lady, he did for Poverty. This comparison is not a more caprice; he himself profoundly felt it and expressed it with perfect clearness, and it is only by keeping it clearly present in the mind that we can see into the very depth of his heart.

To find any other sould of the same mature one must come down to Giovanni di Parnus and Jacoponi di Todi. The tife of St. Francis as troutadour has been written; it would have been teller to write it as knight, for this is the explanation of his whole life, and as it were the heart of leis heart. From the day when, forgetting the songs of his friends and auddenly stopped in the public place of Assisi, he met Poverty, his bride, and swore to her faith and love, down to that evening when, naked upon the maked earth of Portimenta, he breathed out his life, it may be said that all his thoughts went out to this hady of his classe loves. For twenty years he served her without faltering, sometimes with an arthosomess which would appear infantine, if acmething infinitely sincere and subline did not arrest the unite upon the most receptical lips.

Poverty agreed unrecliansly with that need which men had at that time, and which perhaps they have lost less than they suppose, the need of an ideal very high, very pure, mysterious, innecessible, which yet they may picture to themselves in concrete form. Sometimes a few privileged discipled as the levely and pure Endy descend from heaven to saluta her spease, but, whether visible as not, she always kept close beside her timbrian tover, as she kept close beside her timbrian tover, as she kept close beside the Cutilean; in the stable of the nativity, upon the cross at Golgoths, and even in the horrowed famb where his body by.

During several years this ideal was not alone that of St. Francis, but also of all the Bredhers. In povorty the gente poverelle had found safety, love, liberty; and all the efforts of the new apostles are directed to the keeping of this precime breasure.

Their worship sometimes might seem excessive. They showed their spouse those delicate attentions, those refinements of courtesy so frequent in the morning light of a betrethal, but which one gradually forgets till they become incomprehensible.

The number of disciples continually increased; almost every week brought new recruits; the year 1211 was without doubt devoted by Francis to a tour in Umbria and the neighboring provinces. His sermons were short appeals to conscience; his heart went out to his hearers in ineffable tones, so that when men tried to repeat what they had heard they found themselves incapable. The Rule of 1221 has preserved for as a snumary of those appeals:

O Hora is an exhaulation which all the Bridhers may make when they think heat; Four and hence God, gradue and Ideachin. Give thanks ante him. Adore the Lead, Almighty God, in Trinity and unity, the Pathar, the Son, and the Body Glock. Report and make fraits most for repentance, for you knew that we shall soon die. Give, and it shall be given unde you. Forgive, and you don't forgive ; for if you forgive not. God will not forgive you. Blessed ure they who die repenting, for they shall be in the kingdom of heaven. . . . Abstant enrefully from all cyll, and persovers in the good until the end."

We see how simple and purely ethical was the early Franciscan preaching. The complications of dogma and scholasticism are entirely absent from it. To materstand how now this was and how refreshing to the soul we must study the disciples that came after him.

¹ Rom., 93. Prohibnit frutrem qui fucichat coquinum no poneret legumina do sera in aqua calida quo delebat duro fratribus ud manducandum dio sequenti nt observarerint illud rerbum Erangelii: Nolito solliciti esso do orastino. Spec., 16. 22 Col., 3, 50.

^{*} Cup., 21. Of. Far., L. consid., 18; 301; Conform., 103a, 2; 2 Col., 8, 99; 300; 121. Vida Müller, Anfänge, p. 187.

With St. Anthony of Padua (*Juno 13, 1231; ennonized in 1233), the most illustrious of them all, the descent is immense. The distance between these two men is as great as that which separates Jesus from St. Paul.

I do not judge the disciple; he was of his time in not knowing law to say simply what he thought, in always desiring to subtitize it, to extract it from passages in the Bible turned from their indural meaning by efforts at once halarious and provide; what the idelegates did in their continual making of strange mixtures from which they functed that they should bring out gold, the preachers did to the texts, in order to bring out the fruth.

The originality of St. Trancis is only the norce brilliant and meritorious; with him gened nimplicity reappeared upon the earth. Take the bork with which he so much leved to compare himself, he was at his case only in the open sky. He remained thus until his death. The opisite to all Christians which he diclated in the hist weeks of his life repeats the same ideas in the same terms, perhaps with a little more feeling and a shade of sadness. The evening broeze which breathed upon his face and here away his words was their syncholical necompanionent.

Phila lds Opera omnia postillis illustrata, by Father do la Haya, 1709, ft. For his life, Sucho and Wudding accounted and mutilated the source to which they had unese; the Rollandinis had only a legend of the lifeteenth century. The batin manuscript 14,303 of the Hiblathicane Nationale gives one which dates from the Hilsteenth. Very Rev. Enther Hilbey, of Paris: Saint Antoine de Padone, so Egende primitiee, Muntanalisaar-Moc, Impelaerio Notre-Dame-hoe Prés, 1800, 1 vol., 8vo. Of. Legenda see vita et miracula S. Antonii seculo xiii concinuata ce cont. monto, antonine bibliothera a P. M. Antonia Maria Jose rale, actuv, Bologna, 1833, I vol., 8vo.

^{*} This avangelical character of his interior in herought cut in reliated in his biographers. I Get. 56; 84; 80; 3 Sec. 25; 34; 40; 48; 45; 45; 47; 2 Get. 8; 8; 50; 93.

^{, 104 ; 2} Oct., 8, 128.

at, Brother Francis, the least of your servants, pray and conjure you by that Love which is God himself, willing to throw myself at your feet and kiss them, to receive with humility and love these words and all others of our tand Jones Christ, to put them to profit and entry thmo out."

This was not a more or less oratorical formula. Honco conversions multiplied with an incredible rapidity. Often, us forcourly with Jesus, a look, a word unliked Francis to attach to himself com who would follow him nutil their double. It is impossible, alust to amply the bast of this elequence, all made of love, intimate apprehension, and tire. The written word can no more give up idea of ik thun it can give us an idea of a sonata of Boethoyen or a painting by Rombrandt. We are often amazed, on reading the memoirs of those who have been great conquerors of souls, to find ourselver remaining cold, finding in thom all no brien of animation or originality. It is bucause we have only a tifeless relie in the hand; the soul is gone. It is the white water of the energment, but how shall that cause in us the emotions of the beloved disciple lying on the Lard's breed on the night of the East Supper?

The class from which Francia recruited his disciples was addless the usane; they were nearly all young men of Assisi and its environs, some the sous of agriculturists, and others radden; the School and the Church was very little represented among them.

The Order was at the transminity by (at the present time it is, so for as I know, the only one is which there is no difference of contains instance by unou and pricate). This Elicle, Archiv., 16., p. 563. It is the influence of the frient from northern countries which has especially changed it in this matter. General Aymen, of Favorelana (1240-1243), doubled that beyone chantle be excluded from all charges; bives ad affekt inhability it, que usque tune at electic excrebant. (Chron. xxiv. gen. cod. Gadd. relig., 63, C 110a). Among the early Brathers who Everything still went on with an unheard-of simplicity. In theory, chedience to the superior was absolute; in practice, we can see Francis continually giving his companions complete literty of action.\(^1\) Men entered the Order without a nevitate of any sort; it sufficed to say to Francis that they wanted to lead with him a life of evangelical perfection, and to prove it by giving all that they passessed to the page. The more impretending were the neighbors, the more tenderness he had for them. Like his Muster, he had a partiality for those who were lost, for men whom regular society casts out of its limits, but who with all their crimes and seanchals are nearer to sainthurd than mediecrities and hypocrites.

Our day St. Franch, possing by the desert of Burge San Sepaloro ones to a place called Monto Casale," and behalf a milde and ratioal young near mans to like. "Futher," he said, "I would gladly be one of year disciples."

"My mit," and St. Franch, " you are young, reflied, and indidic you will not be adde to follow poverty and live wretched like us. "

"But, my father, are not you men tho one? What you do I one do with the grace of Jesus." This repty was well pleasing to St. Francis, who, giving him his bleasing, inconfinently received him into the Order under the name of Brother Augelo.

the mordinated idusoff so wall that a little while offer he was reade refused ordination there were enrely some who did in front leanility, but this centianal is not amongle to explain all the causes. There were show with certain of them revolutionary desires and so it were a vague manary of the prophecter of these dime di Flore apon the age succeeding that of the priorit: Fig., 27. Firsts Pellegrino non rolls may analyze conse chiecies, nor come bies, benche fassi molto litterato e grande decretalistic. (C. Conform., 716., 2. Fr. Thomas Hiberniens sibily pullecem anapularit ne not succeedation concreter. Conform., 1241, 2.

2 Soa, for example, the letter to Brother Lou. Of. Conform, 18th, 2, Pratri. Epidic delit licentium liberatus at iret grownman relief et sterret.

ubiomaque sibi placeert.

2 The hermitage of Monte-Cambe, at two hours wide northoust from Borgo Sun Supelere, ettli existe in its original state. It is our of the most significant and earloss of the Franciscan deserts. gaurdian inf Manta-Casala. Now, in those times there were three fanous radiocra who did much ovil in the country. They came to the hornitage one day to beg Brother Angelo to give them seemathing to ent; but he replied to them with severe representes: "What! radiocs, ovil-doors, assessing, have you not only no shaun for sleating the goods of others, but you would ferther deveur the almos of the servants of trad, you who are not worthy to live, and who have respect neither for man near for God your Creater. Depart, and let me never see you have again!"

They went away full of rage. But behold, the Saint returned, bring a wallet of brend and a leatile of wine which had been given blur, and the guardian lead blue leaw he had sent away the rolders; then St. Franchs represed him severely for chowing himself so ernel.

"I remained then by tidae electioner," and be, "to take at once this had and this wine and geneek the valders by little and dell until you have found them, to effect them this as from me, and to kneed there before them and handly sek their pardon, and pray them is my usuan me league to the wring last to fear God; and if they do it, I promise to provide for all their wants, to see that they always have mough to set and drink. After that you may boundly return hither."

Brother Angelo did all that look been commanded blin, while St. Francis on the part prayed God to convert the robbers. They returned with the brother, and whom St. Francic give them the magranes of the parish of God, they changed their fives and entered the Order, in which they lives and ded most helity?

What has sometimes been said of the voice of the blood is still more true of the voice of the soul. When a man truly wakens another to moral life, he gains for himself an unspeakable gratitude. The word master is often

* Flore, 281; Comforme, 1101c, 1. Of. Rule of 1221, mp. vit. Quienteque ad eas (fratres) venerint, umicus vel adversurius, fur vel latro benigns recipiatur.

The office of generalian (superior of a mount ory) naturally dates from the time when the Heather adultioned the unclean in small groups in the villages of Uniteria. that is to say, much probably from the year 1211. A few years later the mounteries were united to form is mustodia. Finally, ideast 1216, Control Huly was divided unite a certain number of provinces with provincial indictors at their bond. All this was thus little by little, for Francia mover permitted himself to regulate what did not yet exist.

profuned, but it can express the noblest and purest of ourthly ties.

Who are those among us, who in the hours of manly innocence when they examine their own consciences, do not see rising up before them from out of the past the ever beloved and loving face of one who, perhaps without knowing it, initiated them into spiritual things? At soch a time we would throw ourselves at the feet of this father, would tell him in burning words of our admiration and gratitude. We cannot do it, for the soul line its own bushfulness; but who knows that our disquietade and embarramement do not betray us, and unveil, better than words could do, the depths of our heart? The air they breathed at Portinnents was all impregnated with joy and gratitude like this.

To many of the Brothers, St. Francis was tenly a saviour; he tad delivered them from chains heavier than those of prisons. And therefore their greatest desire was in their turn to call others to this same liberty.

We have already acon Brother Bermurlo on a mission to Florence a few months after his entrance into the Order. Arrived at malarity when he put on the habit, he appears in some degree the senior of this apostolic college. He knew how to obey St. Francis and remain faithful to the very end to the ideal of the early days; but he had no longer that privilege of the young of Brother Lee, for example of being able to transform himself atmost entirely into the image of him whom he admired. His physiognomy has not that tonch of juvenite originality, of poetic fancy, which is so great a churm of the others.

Toward this epoch two Brothers entered the Order, men met an the successors of St. Francis never received, whose history throws a bright light on the simplicity of the early days. It will be remembered with what zeal Francis had repaired several churches; his solicitude went further; he saw a sort of profunction in the negligence with which most of them were kept; the want of cleanliness of the sacred objects, ill-concealed by tinset, gave him a sort of pain, and it often happened that when he was going to preach somewhere he secretly called together the priests of the locality and implored them to look after the decency of the service. But even in these cases he was not content to preach only in words; binding together some statks of heather he would make them into brooms for sweeping out the churches.

One day in the suburbs of Assisi he was performing this task when a peasant appeared, who had left his exen and east out in the fields while he came to gaze at him.

"Brather," add he on rotorleg, "give me the broom. I will help you," and he ewept out the rest of the charch.

When he had Rubbert, "Brother," he said to Francis, "for a long that I have disabled to serve Gol, especially when I heard men spank of you. But I never knew how to find you. Now it has pleased God that we dead direct, and herceforth I shall do whatever you may please to command her."

Francis sading ide forver fall a great joy; it seemed to him that with his simplicity and honesty in would become a good frier.

It appears indeed that he had only too much simplicity, for after his reception he fell himself bound to initate every motion of the muster, and when the latter coughed, spat, or sighed, he did ble some. At last Francis noticed it and gently reproved him. Tater he became so perfect that the other frima admired him greatly, and after his death, which took place not long after, St. Francis level to relate his conversion, calling him not Brother John, but Brother St. John.

Clinepro is still more calchinated for his holy follies, 19 001, 3, 190 3 Spec., 37; Conform., 53a, 1. See below, p. 385, n. 1.

One day he went to see a sick Brother and offered him his services. The putient confessed that he had a great longing to eat a pig'n foot; the visitor immediately rushed out, and armed with a knife ran to the neighboring forest, where, capying a troop of pigs, he cut off a foot of one of them, returning to the meanstery full of pride over his trophy.

The owner of the pigs shortly followed, howling like mad, but Ginepro went straight to him and pointed out with so much volubility that he had done him a great service, that the man, after overwhelming him with reproductes, suddenly begged pardon, killed the pig and invited all the Brothers to feast upon it. Ginepro was probably less used than the story would lead us to suppose; Franciscan hamility never bad a more sincere disciple; he could intendure the lokens of admiration which the populace very early havinged on the growing Order, and which by their extravagues contributed so much to its decadence.

One day, as he was entering Rome, the report of his arrival spread abroad, and a great crowd came out to meet him. To escape was impossible, but he suddenly laid an inspiration; near the gute of the city some children were playing at see-aw; to the great unascenced of the Romans Climpra joined them, and, without heeding the salutations addressed to him, remained so absorbed in his play that at had his indignant admirers departed.

It is clear that the life at Portimenta must have been very different from that of an ordinary convent. So much youth, simplicity, love, quickly drow the eyes of men toward it. From all aides they were turned to those thatched hals, where dwell a spiritual family whose members loved one mother more than men love on earth, leading a life of labor, mirth, and devotion. The humble chapet seemed a new Zian destined to entighten the world, and many in their dreams behold blind humanity coming to kneet there and recover sight.¹

¹ Flor., Vita di fra Gilnapra; Spec., 174-183; Conform. Oab.

^{*} A. 88., p. 600.

Among the first disciples who joined themselves to St. Francis we must mention Brother Silvestro, the first priest who entered the Order, the very same whom we have already seen the day that Bernardo di Quintevalle distributed his goods among the poor. Since then he had not had a moment's ponce, bilterly reproaching himself for his avariee; night and day he thought only of that, and in his dreams he saw Francis exercising a horrid menster which infested all the region.²

By his ago and the usture of the momory he has left behind him Silvestro resembles Brother Bernardo. Ito was what is usually understood by a holy priest, but nothing denotes that he had the truly Franciscan love of great enterprises, distant journeys, perilous missions. Withdrawn into one of the grottes of the Carceri, absorbed in the contemplative life, he gave spiritual comsels to his brothren as occasion served.

The typical Franciscan priest is Brother Lee. The date of his entrance into the Order is not exactly known, but we are probably not far from the truth in placing it about 1214. Of a charming simplicity, lender, affectionate, refined, he is, with Brother Elius, the one who plays the noddest part during the chacure years in which the new reform was being claborated. Becoming Francis's confessor and secretary, treated by him as his favorite son, he excited much opposition, and was to the and of his long life the houd of the strict observance.

⁷ H Sao, , 56 (2 Col., 1, 43) Bon., 24.

² Bun., 30 (3 800), 30, 31 (2 CM., 3, 52. Cf. Fior., 2. The dragon of this dragon perhaps symbolized herosy.

³ Bon., 83; 173; Flor., 1, 10; Conform., 49a, 1, and 110b, 1; 2 Col., 8, 51.

One whathe's day, St. Pranala was going with Brother Lan from Parugh to Saula Maria dogli Angoli, and the sold, being informs, made Moon shilver; ha milled Brother Lao, who was walking a little la advances, and sold; "O Brother law, may B plones God that the Brothers Minne all over the world may give a great example of believe and edification; write, lanwover, and note with earn, that not in thin is the perfect juy, to

St. Francis, going no a little farther, called blur a second than ; "O Bruther Law, if the Bruthers Minor gave alght to the blind, benied the Infloor, and not dission, give bearing to the deaf, or even what to namb more, If they extend the four days dead, write that not to tide is the partant joy."

Onling on a 11the forther to orbid: "O Brother Lam, if the Beather Minor Range all languages, all asbenes, and all aeriptures, if the model proplacy and ravial ant only falars things into ven the mearts of non-Bolumon and of souls, with that not in this mandata the perfect juy.

Bolug a little farilier St. Franch colled to hise egain: (10) Hridher Too, Billicaliegs of God, If the Brother Alliar rould speak the language of angels, if he knew the sources of the store and the virtues of plants, If all the transcens of earth were revented to idea and he know that qualifies of Ideds, delice, and all colonds, of more trees, rooter, reads, and waturn, write that not in these lettle parfect juy,"

And advanting still will the firther St. Franch called healty to libra; 30 Brother land If the Brother Miner would proud me well in to convariall indicate to the faith of Christ, write that not be tide to the profoot Joyan

Widh speaking thus they had already gone more than two miles, and Bruthne fam, full of merrion, said to bim : " Pathee, I pray you lis Chal's mann full marta what sombide the parfect jay."

And St. Francis rapilled: When we mrive at Bunta Maria dogli Augall, snaked with rain, frozen with cold, covered with mad, dying of hunger, and we knock and the perter comes in a rage, taying. Who arn you ?? and we answer, ! We ere two of your heethran, and he says, 'You lie, you are two lowd follows who go up and chose corrupting the world and steeling the abount the poor. To away from here P and ha dans nat upon to 100, but leaves us outable shivering in the snow wall ralu, frezen, starved, till right; then, if thus undispected and tarued away, we patheatly andure all without murrouring against blue, if we think with humility and charlty that this portor roally knows us truly and that God makes him speak thus to us, then, O Brother Lac, write that in this is the perfect juy. . . . Above all the grams and all the gifts which the Holy Spirit gives to bis friends is the grace to conquer encode, and willingly to suffer pain, outrages, disgram, and evil treatment, for the love of Christ I "1"

Burnard the Hosso, De landibus, Turin MS., C. 1626, and this. dlad November 16, 1271. A. 88., Augusti, t. il., p. 221.

Although by its slight and sumowhat playful character this story rocalls the insipid statues of the fourteenth century, it has justly become colobrated, its spirit is theoroughly Franciscan; that transcendent idealism, which sees in perfection and joy two equivalent terms, and places perfect joy in the pure and screen region of the perfecting of enceet; that sublime simplicity which so easily puts in their true place the miracle-worker and the scholar, those are perhaps not entirely new; hut St. Francis must have had singular moral strength to impose upon his contemporaries ideas in such absolute contrudiction to their hubits and their hopes; for the intellect-unitaristocracy of the thirteenth century with one accord found the perfect joy in knowledge, while the people found it in miracles.

Doubtless we must not forget those great mystical families, which, all through the Middle Ages, were the refuge of the noblest sends; but they never had this fine simplicity. The School is always more or less the guteway to mysticism; it is possible only to an elect of subtile minds; a pions peasant seldem understands the Imitation.

It may be said that all St. Francis's philosophy is contained in this chapter of the Pierotti.³ - From it we foresee what will be his attitude toward learning, and are helped

¹ Plan, 84 Spec., 890 304 Conform., 100, 9, and 140a, 9.

⁹ I need not have point out the analogy in form hetween this chapter and St. Paul's colebrated song of love, I Cor. xIII.

³ Wo find the same thoughts in nearly the same terms in eqp. v. of the Verbu sacra admonitionis, to understand how it happens that this famous saint was so poor a miruele-worker.

Twelve centaries before, Josus and said, "Blessed are the poor in spirit. Blessed are they who suffer." The words of St. Francis are only a commontary, but this commentary is worthy of the text.

It rounting to say a word concorning two disciplese who were always closely united with Brother Lee in the Franciscan memorials Rufuo and Masaco.

Born of a noble family connected with that of St. Charm, the former wascoom distinguished in the Order for his visious and realision, but his great timidity chucked him as soon as be trial to preach: for this reason he is always to be found in the most isolated hermitages. Curceri, Verm, Grecio.1

Masseo, of Mariganno, a until village in the environs of Assisi, was his very opposite; handsome, well made, wilty, he uttracted utlention by his time presence and his great facility of speech; he ecouples a special plane in papalar Franciscan tradition. He deserves it. St. Francis, to took his humility, made him the parter and cack of the hermitage,2 but in these functions Masses showed himself to be so perfectly a Minor that from that time the master particularly leved to lowe him for companion in his missionary journeys.

One day they were bravelling together, when they arrived at the interception of the reads to Signia, Arezzo, and Phorones.

- " Which and almit we lake?" wekert Massoc.
- "Whichever one God with."

3 Herbs three-soud of the Three Companions, B Mos., 14 of, 1 Cat., 95; Flow, 14 29, 30, 31; Embedou, 12; Spec., 140a (154c; Conform., 54b ff. ; of, 2 Cel., 2, 4.

Nocy probably that of the Careeri, though the using is not indicated, Vide S Sun, 1; Fior., 1; 10; 11; 12; 18; 10; 27; 32; Conform, 61b, iii ; Tribul. Archiv., t. H., p. 203.

"But how shall we know which one God wills?"

"You shall see. Go and stand at the crossing of the roads, turn round and round as the children do, and do not stop until t bid you."

Brother Musseo began to turn; soized with a vertigo, he was nearly falling, but caught himself up at ouce. Fimily Francis called out, "Stop1 which way are you facing?"

"Toward Siemm"

" Vory well; God wills that we go to Sienna." 1

Such a method of unking up one's mind is doubtless not for the daily needs of life, but Francis employed still others, like it, if not in form at least in fact.

Up to this time we have seen the brokhron living together in their hermitages or roving the highways, preacting repentance. It would, however, be a mistake to think that their whole lives were passed thus. To understand the first Franciscans we must absolutely forget what they may have been since that time, and what monks are in general; if Portiuncula was a monastery it was also a workshop, where each brother practised the trade which had been his before entering the Order; but what is stranger still to our ideas, the Brothers often went out as servants.

Brother Egidio's case was not an exception, it was the rule. This did not last long, for very soon the friers who entered a house as demestics earns to be treated as distinguished guests; but in the beginning they were literally servants, and took upon themselves the most mental labors. Among the works which they might undertake Francis recommended above all the care of lopers. We have already seen the important part which these unfortunates played in his conversion; he always retained for them a poculiar pity, which he sought to make his disaiples shure.

[!] Piar., 11; Conform., 50b, 2; Spec., 104a.

⁹ Rulo of 1991, ohap. 7. Onnes fratves, in quibusounquo locis fuerint apud aliquos ad servioudum, vel ad laboraudum, non sint vamerarii, neo cellarii, neo presint in domilias corum quibus serviunt. Gl. 1 Col., 88 and 40; A. SS., p. 806.

For several yours the Brothers Minor may be said to have gone from hizaretto to hizarette, preaching by day in the towns and villages, and retiring at night to there rofuges, where they rendered to these pedients of God the most repugnant pervises.

The Crimigeri, who took charge of the greater number of loper-houses, always welcomest those kinetly disposed nides, who, for from asking any nort of recompouse, were willing to out whitever the putients neight have left, 1. In fact, although preated realely for the care of lapers, the Brothers of this Order sometimes look patience when the sufferers were too exacting, and instead of being grateful had only numbers or even represented for their benefitetors. In these desperate suges the intervention of France eis and his disciples was especially precious. happened that a Brother was just in appealed charge of a single loper, whose companion and servant he continued to be, sometimes for a long period,

The following nurrative shows Francis's lave for these unfortamates, and his mother) with thous."

It happened one that the Brothers were serving the Jepons and thurslok in a hospital, near to the place where St. Franch was them was a loper who was so hapattent, so gross grained, so morning alth, that overyone bolloved that to be prepared by the dayll, and

Col., 103 (90); Spec., 28 (Trep. 1231) by a Whitele 99 and 99.

y Vida Spec, adh.; Fior, d

^{*} All the details of this story lead me to think that it refers to Perthousand and the hoopful San Selectors delle Pereti. The story in given by the Cauforne, 17th, 2, as taken from the Legenda Antique. Spec., 560; Far., 25.

rightly enough, for he heaped insults and blows upon those who waited upon him, and what was werse, he centinually insuited and blasphemed the blessed Christ and his most hely Mother the Virgin Mary, so that there was no longer anyone who could or would wait upon him. The Brothers would willingly have endured the insults and abuse which he invished upon them, in order to augment the merit of their patience, but their souls could not consent to hear those which he intered against Christ and his Mether. They therefore resolved to abandon this leper, but not without having told the whole story exactly to St. Francis, who at that time was dwelling not far away.

When they told him, St. Francis betook himself to the wicked leper; "May God give thee peace, my most dear brother," he said to him as he drew near.

"And what peace," asked the loper, "can I receive from God, who has taken away my peace and every good thing, and has made my bedy a mass of stinking and corruption?"

St. Francis said to him: "My brother, be patient, for God gives us diseases in this world for the salvation of our souls, and when we endure them patiently they are the fountain of great merit to us."

"Haw can I endure patiently continual pains which terture me day and night? And it is not only my disease that I suffer from, but the friars that you gave me to walt upon me are unendurable, and do not take eare of me as they ought."

Then St. Francis perceived that this loper was possessed by the spirit of evil, and he betook himself to his knees in order to pray for him. Then returning he said to him: "My son, since you are not satisfied with the others, I will wait upon you."

"That is all very well, but what can you do for me more than they?"

"I will do whatever you wish."

"Very woll; I wish you to wash me from head to foot, for I smell so hadly that I disgust myself."

Then St. Francis made haste to heat some water with many sweet-smelling herbs; next he took off the loper's clothes and began to bathe him, while a Brother poured out the water. And behold, by a divine miracle, wherever St. Francis touched him with his holy hands the leprosy disappeared and the flosh became perfectly sound. And in proportion as the flosh was healed the soul of the wretched man was also healed, and he bogan to fool a lively sorrow for his sins, and to weep bitterly. . . . And heing completely healed both in body and soul, he cried with all his might: "Woe unto me, for I have deserved hell for the abuses and entrages which I have said and done to the Brothers, for my impatience and my blasphemies."

One day, Brother Jahn, whose simplicity we have already seen, and who had been especially put in charge of a certain leper, took lein for a walk to Portinucula, as if he had not been the victim of a confagiona makely. Reproaches were not spared him; the leper heard them and could not hide his matress and distress; it seemed to him tike being a second time banished from the world. Francis was quick to remark all this and to feel idner remark for it; the thought of having maldened one of God's patients was unconducable; he not only legged his parion, but he caused food to be nerved, and sitting drawn beside him he decred his repust, enting from the same porringer. We see with what persevenues he pursued by every means the realization of his ideal.

The details just given show the Umbrian movement, as it appears to me, to be one of the most hundre and at the sum time the most discrete and practical allegates to realize the kingdom of Cod on curth. How far respoyed we are here from the superstitions vulgarity of the mechanical devotion, the descital miracle-working of certain Cathelies; how far also from the remaining placent, quidding, theorizing Christianity of certain Protestantel

Francia in of the race of mystica, for no intermediary cross between God and his neal; but his mystician is that of Jesus leading his disciplen to the Talor of contemplation; but when, excellended with joy, they long to build laborances that they may remain on the heights and satisfy thomselves with the raptures of century, "Frads," he mays to them, "yo know sat what yo ask," and directing their gaze to the crowds wandering like sheep having no shepherd, he leads them back to the Cra the Speculari, folds, this story ends with the pleases Qui vidit has sevipsit et testimonium perhibet de kiis. The brother is here ended Prater Jacobus simplex. Of Ganform, 174b.

I mean to remain here and live solitary, for in this way I shall be more surely saved than by submitting myself to this man and his nonsouse."

Young and enthusiastic for the most part, it was not always without difficulty that the Brothers formed the limbit of kooping their work in the background. ing with their master as to fundamentals, they would luve liked to make more of a stir, attract public attention by more obvious devotion; there were some manny them whom it did not satisfy to be saints, but who also wished to appear and.

CHAPTER IX

HANTA OBARA

Pormas picty in Undria never reparates the memory of St. Francia from that of Santa Chira. It is right.

Chara' was born at Assisi in 1194, and was consequently about twelve years younger than Francis. She belonged to the noble family of the Scitt. At the age when a little girl's imagination awakes and stirs, she heard the follies of the son of Bermardone recounted at tength. She was sixteen when the Saint preached for the tirat time in the cathedral, and dealy appearing like an angel of peace in a city torn by intestine dissensions.

Clearly not the for serize that have confiber of hor life, it is with diffionly that an makes a detailed and deconcedary study of the There is authing surprising in this, for the Phyloson felt the related of the straggles which divided and capitly tenselormed the Order of the Bruthurs Minor. The greater number of the decoments have discupourod; we give minimize indication of those which will most often be cited: I. lifte of Bi. Obera by an anonyment matter. A. 89., Aug., 1. H., 196, 739, 703. 2. Her. Will, given by Wachling (Annales, 1763, No. hat which chast not appear to be free from alternation. (Bourpare, for example, the opening of this will with Blueder VI of the Rule of the Daminution approved by Laurent IV., August 8, 1224.) 3. The half of commitsation, given Soptomber 20, 125%. That is to say, two years after Chara's death; it is much longer than these documents addisorly any and relates the principal incidents of for the . A. 383, be, etc. p. 740; Publical, III,025. 4. Her correspondence. Unhappily we have only fragments of 1() the Hellandiste, without eaying where they drew thora, have broaded four of her letters in the Arts of St. Agree of Bohes mis, to whom they were satisficiently. (A. 88., Mirth, t. 1., pp. 500-508.)

To her his appeals were like a revolution. It seemed as if Francis was speaking for her, that he divined her secret sorrows, her most personal mixieties, and all that was ardent and enthusiastic in the heart of this young girl rushed like a terrent that suddenly finds an outlet into the channel indicated by him. For saints as for herces the supreme stiendus is wearan's admiration.

But here, more than ever, we need put away the vulgar judgment which can understand no minimize between man and woomn where the sexual instinct has no part. That which makes the naion of the sexual something almost divine is that it is the prefiguration, the symbol, of the union of souls. Physical love is an ephemoral spark, designed to kindle in human hearts the flame of a moral lasting love; it is the outer court of the temple, but not the most hely place; its inectinable value is precisely that it leaves us alreaptly at the door of the holicat of all as if to invite us to step over the threshold.

The mysterious sigh of nature goes can for the union of souls. This is the unknown God to whom delangthess, those pagans of lave, offer their marrifeen, and thin swored imprint, even though efficied, flough soiled by all pollutions, often acres the man of the world from inspiring as much disgust as the drankard and the criminal.

But sometimes—muca often than we think—there are souls so pure, so little earthly, that on their first meeting they enter the must hely place, and once there the thought of may other union would be not merely a descent, but an impossibility. Such was the leve of St. Francis and St. Chara.

But these are exceptions. There is no mething mysterious in this supreme purity; it is so high that in holding it up to men and risks speaking to them in an unknown tengue, or even worse.

The biographors of St. Francis have clearly felt the danger of offering to the multitude the sight of certain bounties which are far beyond them, and this is for us the great fault of their works. They try to give us not so much the true portrait of Francis as that of the perfect minister-general of the Order such as they conceive it. such as it must needs be to serve as a model for his disciples; thus they love made this medel somewhat according to the measure of those whom it is to serve, by omitting here and there features which, stupidly intarprated, might have furnished undered for the nulevelence of unsernpulous adversaries, or from which disciples little versed in apiritual things could not have failed to draw support for permitting themselves dangarons intimucies. Thun the relations of St. Francis with woman in general and St. Chara in particular, luvo been completely travesticd by Thomas of Colona. It could not have been otherwise, and we must not hear him a gradge for it. The life of the founder of an Order, when written by a monk, in the very intere of things Imponentalways a sort of appendix to or illustration of the Rule. And the Rule, especially if the Order last its thousands of members is necessarily made not for the clock, but for the average, for the unijority of the flock.1

Honer this partrait, in which St. Francis is represented as a stora unsetir, to whom woman appears to be a sort of Cheading the Chronicle of Fra Salladoul, which represents the average Franchego character alone 1250, one now with what reason the Rule had antiliptied adoute precantions for keeping the Brothers from all relations with women.

The desire of Polane to present the facts in the His of Francis as the name of the acts of the friend appearential more in the chapters unisociating St. Clara than it all the others. While 2 Pol., 3, 132: Non-creduits, charissimi (divit Franciscus), quadrus perfecte non-difigum. Sed exemplum do vobis, at quemadmostum ego facio, ita et cos facialis. Of, 1514., 434.

incarnate devil! The biographers even go so far as to assure us that he knew only two women by sight. These are manifest exaggerations, or rather the opposite of the truth.

We are not reduced to conjecture to discover the true attitude of the Umbrian prophet in this matter. Without suspecting it, Celano himself gives details enough for the correction of his own errors, and there are besides a number of other documents whose scattered hints correspond and agree with one another in a manner all the more marvellous that it is entirely unintentional, giving, when they are brought together, almost all one could desire to know of the intercourse of these two beautiful souls.

After the sermons of Francis at St. Rufino, Clara's decision was speedily taken; she would break away from the trivialities of an idle and luxurious life and make herself the servant of the poor; all her efforts should be bent to make each day a new advance in the royal way of love and poverty; and for this she would have only to oliey him who had suddenly revealed it to her.

She sought him out and opened to him her heart. With that exaltation, a union of candor and delicacy, which is weman's fine endowment, and to which she would more readily give free course if she did not too often divine the pitfulls of base passion and incredulity, Clara offered herself to Francis.

¹² Cel., 3, 55. Fateor veritatem . . . nullam me si aspicerem recogniturum in facie nisi duas. This chapter and the two following give us a sort of caricature, in which Francis is represented as so little sure of himself that he casts down his eyes for fear of yielding to desire. The stories of Francis and Jacqueline of Settesoli give a very different picture of the relations between the Brothers and the women in the origin of the Order from that which was given later. Bernard de Besso (Turin MS., f°. 113) relates at length the coming of Jacqueline to Portiunonia to be present at St. Francis's death. Cf. Spec., 107; 138; Bon., 112. Also Clara's repast at Portiunouls. Fior., 15; Spec., 109 b.; A. SS. Ang. Vita Clar., No. 80 ff.

It is one of the privileges of saints to suffer more than other men, for they feel in their more loving hearts the echo of all the sorrows of the world; but they also know joys and delights of which condition men never basto. What an inexpressible song of joy must have burst ferth in Francis's heart when he saw Clara on her knees before him, awaiting, with his Idensing, the world which would consecrate her life to the gospel ideal.

Who knows if this interview did not inspire another saint, for Angelico, to introduce into his musterpiece those two elect souts who, already radiant with the light of the howenly decusalem, stop to exchange a kiss before crossing its threshold?

Souls, like flowers, have a perfume of their own which nover deceives. One look laid aufficed for Francis to go down into the depths of this heart; he was too kind to sulmil Cher to unclose tests, too ranch un idealist to prodently contine himself to enston or arbitrary decorua; us when he founded the Order of Friam, he took counsel only of himself and God. In this was his strongth; if he had hesitated, or even if he had shaply submitted himself to coolecinedical rules, he would have been stopped twenty times before he had done anything. Success is so powerful an argument that the biographers appear not to have perceived how determined Prancis was to ignore the ennemical laws. He, a simple descen, arrogated to himself the right to receive Chea's yows and admit her to the Order without the briefest novitinte. Such an nel ought to have drawn down upon its unthor all the consurer of the Church, but Francis was already one of those powers to when much is forgiven, even by these who speak in the name of the hely Roman Church.

Francis lad decided that on the night between Palm Sanday and Holy Monday (March 18 19, 1212) Glara should secretly quit the paternal rastle and come with two companions to Portimenta, where he would await her, and would give her the veil. She arrived just as the friars were singing matias. They went out, the story goes, carrying candles in their tends, to most the bride, while from the woods around Portimenta resounded songs of joy over this new bridat. Then Mass was begun at that same after where, three years before, Francis had heard the decidive call of Jeans; he was kneeling in the same place, but arrounded now with a whole spiritual family.

It is easy to imagine Chro's emotion. The step which she had just taken was simply heroic, for the knew to what persecutions from her bunity she was expensing herself, and what due had seen of the life of the Brothers Minor was a sufficient warning of the distresses to which she was exposing herself in expensing poverty. No doubt she interpreted the words of the rervice in harmony with her own thoughts;

of Surely they are my people," pablidelevale.

Onlibrou who will not be faithless?

And he was for them a sewhere.

To more of their affiletions were they without anceor.

And the angel that be before his fore sevent these.

Then Francis read again the words of Jesus to his after ciples; she vowed to conform her life to them; her hair was out off; all was finished. A few moments after, Francis conducted her to a hours of Benedictine name?

⁴ Isalah, 1xIII., 8 and B (SégonPa] French [translation) At the Muss on Holy Munday Isalah 1xIII. is read for the Epistic and Mark xlv, for the Cospei.

San Paolo on the Cleaser, near Bastla.

at an hour's distance, where she was to remain provisionally and await the progress of events.

The very next morning Pavorine, her faller, arrived with at few friends, inveighing, supplicating, abusing everybody. She was annovade, showing so much courage that at leat they gave up the thought of carrying her off by main force.

She was not, however, at the end of her tribulations. It at this means frightened the Benedictines? We cannot tell, but less than a fortnight after we find her in another convent, that of Sant-Angelo in Panso, at Assisi, A week after Paster, Agues, her younger sister, joined her there, decided in her turn to serve poverty. Francis received her into the Order. This time the father's fary was herrible. With a band of relatives he invaded the convent, but neither above nor blows could subdue this child of fourhoon. In spite of her cries they dragged her away. She fainfed, and the little inanimate body suddenly seemed to them as heavy that they abandoned it in the midst of the fields, some laborers looking with pity on the painful scene, until Chara, whose cry God had heard, husbaned to mean her sister.

Their sojean in this convent was of very short duration. It appears that they did not carry away a very pleasant impression of it.² Francis knew that several others were burning to join his two women friends; he therefore set himself to seek out a retreat where they

At the present day discound seminary of Assist, "Seminarian seraphicam." In the thirteenth century the north gate of the city was there. The houses which he between there and the Budden form the new fown, which is rapidly growing and will unite the city with Sacra Convento.

sould live under his direction and in all liberty practise die gospel rule.

Ho had not long to seek; the Benedictine menks of Mount Sulusio always seized every possible opportunity to make themselves popular. They belonged to that congregation of Camaldoli, whom the commen people appear to have particularly detested, and several of whose convents and lately been pillaged. The atdrey no longer counted more than eight monter, who were trying to save the wrock of their riches and privileges by partial secrifloor; on the 22d of April, 1212, they had given to the commune of Assisi for a communal house a monument which is standing this day, the lomple of Minerya?

Francis, who already was their deliter for Portioneula, onen more addressed himself to them. Happy in this now opportunity to render service to one who was the incurnation of popular chains, they gave him the chapel of St. Damian; perhaps they were well pleaned, by fuvoring the new Order, to inmoy Hishop Childe, of whom Clara doubless experienced that feeling, at once so sweet and so poignant, of the wife who for the first time enters her husband's bosse, trembling with emotion at the rudient and confused vision of the future.

If we are not entirely to misapprehend these loginnings, we must remember with what rapidity external influences transformed the first conception of St. Francis. At this manners to no more expected to found a second arder than he had desired to found the first one. In umbehing Chara from her family he had simply acted like a true knight who resence un oppressed weamen, and taken her under his protection. In installing her at St. Damiun he was proparing a refuge for those who desired to insitute for and apart from the world practice the gampel Rule. But he never thought that the perfection of which he and his disciples were the apostles and missionaries, and which Chara and her companions were lo realize in collecty, was not practicable in social positions also; thones comes what is wrongly called the Pertiori. or Third Order, and which in its primitive thought was not separated from the first. This Third Order had no need to be instituted in 1921, for it existed from the manient when a aingle conneigner resolved to practise his teachings, without hoing able to follow him to Portinneghet. The enemy of the word for him as for Jesus was a varies, understood in its largest some that is to our. that blindness which constrains men to consecrate their hearts to material premeripations, makes them the alaye of a few pieces of gold or a few acres of land, readers

An. Perus., A. Ett., p. 600. Of R Son., 600. The three Ciders are contemporary, one might even say, the four, including among them the con Out inherarched monage the socular private two belows.

In a fother B. Chair equals of her Order as madeing only a part with that of the Meethers: Sequence causilis Reserved's Patris metri feating Ein Ministel generalis tolias erdinis. A. 884, Marth, 1, 1, 4, 507.

them insensible to the beauties of mature, and deprives them of infinite joys which they alone can know who are the disciples of poverty and toyo.

Whoever was free at heart from all material servitude, whoever was decided to live without hearding, every rich man who was willing to labor with his hands and toyalty distribute all that he did not consume in order to constitute the common fund which St. Francisc called the Lord's table, every poor man who was willing to work, free to resort, in the strict measure of his wants, to this table of the Lord, there were at that time true franciscours.

It was a social revolution.

There was then at that time neither one Order nor several. The gospel of the Beatitudes had been found again, and, as twelve conturies before, it could accommodate itself to all situations.

Alast the Church, personified by Cardinal Ugalini, was about, if not to cause the Franciscan movement to miscourry, at least so well to hedge about it that a few years later it would have lost nearly its whole original character.

As has been seen, the word poverty expression only very importectly St. Francia's point of view, eince it contains an idea of renunciation, of abstractic, while in thought the vow of poverty in a vow of liberty. Property is the eage with gitded wires, to which the poor backs are sometimes so thereughly accustomed that they no longer oven think of getting away in order to som up into the blue.

This point of view belocaight interested by an accordate in the Do taudibus of Bernard of Bosse (Turin Mis., 118a). This is low he ends ohap, vii. one the blace Orderes. Not Santas his content as ordinitus saturable ominion generi solutis et penitonise viem dece. Unde percebbili outlion secondati dicenti sibi qual cellet saus, retente termen ectesia trater esse, doto rivendi et indusadi mado, dicitar indicisse ut accumulio, collectis Rockesta fructions duret pro Deo, quost de proteritis super esset.

From the beginning St. Damina was the extreme opposite to what a convent of Charisses of the strict observance is now; it is still to-day very much as Francis saw it. We owe thanks to the Brothers Minor for having preserved intact this venerable and charming hermitage, and not applify it with stupid embellishments. This little corner of Umbrian earth will be for our descendants like Jacob's well whereon Christ out lineself down for an instant, one of the favorite courts of the worship in spirit and in truth.

In installing Chara there Francis put into her han the Rule which he had propared for her, which no don resembled that of the Brothers may for the proceeds wi regard to the missionary life. He accompanied it wi the engagement taken by himself and his brothers supply by labor or almostle the moods of Chara and I future computions. In return they also were to we and render to the Brothers all the mervices of whi they might be capable. We have seen the zeal whi Francis had brought to the task of making the church worthy of the worship celebrated in them; he could need that the linear put to merced uses should be a than clean. Chara not herself to spinning thread for t

 $^{^{-1}}$ Saw the levely story. In the Fron., 13, Of. Spec., 05%; Confor. 1686, 1,

The text of it was doubtions formerly inserted in chapter vi. of a Rule granted to the Diarlesses of St. Damien, August 0, 1253, by the is Solet annuers. Potthest, 15,033. But this chapter has been complete charged in many editions. The text of the Speculum, Morin, Rul 1600, should be read. Tract iii, 220b. The critical study to be a upon this text by comparing the belleations given by the buil Any guadium of May 11, 1233, Starnbea, L., p.242, is too long to find a place.

^{§ 9} Cal., 0, 109 - Of. Test. B. Clar.

altar-cloths and corporals which the Brothers undertook to distribute among the poor churches of the district.\texts{\text{In addition, during the ourlier years, she also nursed the sick whom Francis sent to her, and St. Damian was for some time a sort of hospital.\texts{\text{2}}

One or two friars, who were rulled Zealots of the Poor Laties, were especially charged with the ence of the Sisters, making themselves buts beside the etapel, after the model of these of Portinneule. Francis was also near at hand; a seek of terrace four paces long everlooks the hormitage; Clara made there a tiny garden, and when, at twilight, she went thither to water her stewers, the could see, hardly half a longue distant, Portinneula standing out against the surreals of the western aky.

For several years the relationa between the two houses were continual, full of charm and freedom. The companions of Francis who received Brothers received Sisters also, at times returning from their preaching tours with a neophyte for St. Damian.

In illa gravi infirmitate . . . facichat se crigi et sciens flahat. A. 88., 700a. Sie rult eas (zerores) operare manibus suis. In, 702a.

² Plur, 33.

^{}Rula of 1231, chap xil. Rt wills positive modicy ab alique frater resignatur ad abedicatum, red date sibi consilie spirituali, whi voluerit agut penitentiam. Cf. below, p. 263, note 1, the remainder of this chapter and the indication of the sources. This proves, 1, that the friera had consided women late the Order; 2, that at the beginning they sald The Order in the alignate, and under this appellation included Sisters as well as firefloca. We see how for the alignation was, even at the end of 1331, from heliog what it because a few yours later. It is in his moted that to all the reference were observed united. (Vide Receivable chronical, Pertz. 1, 29, p. 370). Uf. Porthwst, 2611, ball Comments of Nov. 25, 1205.)

On the Micaf June, 1201 (bull Incornect nodes), Immount 111, had appeaved the Rule of the Humillonia. This was a religious rescolation whose mendana continued to live in their own bonnes, and who offer our

The intimacy of Francis and Chara, the familiarity of the merior friend and Sisters would not do as a model for the relations of the two Orders when each had some hundreds of members. Francis himself very soon perceived this, though not so clearly as his sister-friend. Chara survived him nearly twenty-seven years, and thus had time to see the shipwreek of the Franciscan ideal among the Brothers, as well as in almost every one of the houses which had at first followed the Rule of St. Damian. She herself was led by the pressure of events to bey down rules for her own convent, but to her very death-had she contended for the defence of the true Franciscan ideas, with a heroism, a boldness, at once intense and hely, by which she took a place in the first rank of witnesses for conscience.

Is it not one of the leveliest pictures in religious history, that of this woman who for more than half a century sustains moment by moment a struggle with all the pupes who succeed one mother in the pontifical throne, somaining always equally respectful and immovable, not consenting to die until she has gained her victory?

To rolate her life is to relate thicatraggle; the greater number of its viciositudes may be found in the disas-prising policia of contact with the Franchesia Order, though they took no vow of poverty. From them bound a near restricted accordation which founded convents where they worked in word; these convents resolved both men and women. Vide darques de Viry, Hist. Occidentales, aqu. 28. Do religious et regula Hamiliatorum (Danal, 1507, pp. 251-261). The time came when from these two Orders issued a third, composed adoly of priorie. These Hamiliati are not little known, though they lave had a historian whose book is one of the police works of the olghboutth contacy; Timbeschi, Vetera Hamiliatorum monumenta (Milan, 8 vola., 40, 1764–1768). Toward 1260 they had nonepolized barte della tona in all upper Italy as for no to Florence; it is a which, therefore, that Franche's father must have had relations with them.

¹ The bull approving the Rule of St. Damlan is of August 0, 1253 Chara died two days later.

ments of the Raman caria. Francis and warded off many a danger from his institution, but he had given himself guardians who were little disposed to yield any of their rights; Cardinal Ugolini in particular, the future Gregory IX., took a pact in these matters which is very difficult to understand. We see him continually tavishing upon Francis and Chara expressions of affection and admiration which appear to be absolutely sincere; and yet the Franciscan ideal regarded as the life of love at which one arrives by freeing himself from all servitude to material things—has burdly and a worsh adversary than be.

In the month of May, 1228, Gregory T.Y. went to Assisi for the preliminaries of the emonization of St. Francis. Before entering the city he turned out of his way to visit St. Damina and to see Chara, whom he had known for a long time, and to whom he had addressed letters burning with admiration and paternal affection.¹

How can we understand that at this time, the eve of the canonization (July 16, 1228), the postiff could have but the idea of arging her to be faithless to her yows?

To represented to her that the state of the times made life impossible to women who present nothing, and affored her certain proportion. As Chragazed at him in astanishment at this strange proposition, he used, "If it is your vows which prevent you, we will release you from them."

"Holy Puther," replied the Franciscan sinter, "absolve me from my sins, but I have no desire for a dispensation from following Christ."

Noble and pions alterance, arthresery of independence, in which the conscience proudly produints its autonomy!

¹⁴ Col., 192. Cf. Potthest, 8194 ff.; of, th., 700.

A. SE., Vita Ct., p. 758. Uf. bull of canordzathon.

In these words is mirrored at full length the spiritual daughter of the Poverello.

By one of these intuitions which often some to very enthusiastic and very jure women, also but penatrated to the innest depths of Francis's heart, and felt herself inflamed with the same passion which burned in him. She remained faithful to him to the end, but we perceive that it was not without difficulty.

This is not ble place in which to usk whether Gregory IX, was right in desdring that religious communities should hold endales; he look a right to his own views on the subject; but there is nonething shocking, to say no more, in sceing him placing Francis among the saints at the very manneal when he was betraying his descretions, and seeking to induce these who had remained faithful to belong them.

The Chara and Francis forceout the difficulties which they would meet? We may suppose so, for already under the postificate of Innocent 111, she had obtained a grant of the privilege of poverty. The pope was so much surprised at such a request that he desired to write with his own bands the opening lines of this patent, the like of which had never been asked for at the court of Rome.

Under his accessor, Henorius III., the most important personage of the caria was this very Cardinal Ugolini Almost a septragenerian in 1916 be impired awe at first CFR. S. Clar., A. 88., p. 768. This petition was savely made by the modifica of Francis; and there are several indications of his presence in Periglic in the latter part of the fifty of Liansout III. In obitic suc [Alexandri paper] courses familiares sui describerant cum proter fratres Minares. Et similiare Papum Gregorium et Homrium et Innoventium in aujus obita fuit prosentialiter S. Franciscus, Eccl. xv. Mon. Germ. hist. Script., t. 28 p. 668. Blacabes puts forth doubts as to the authoritality of this privilege, the text of which he givet; wrough, I think, for Clara alludes to it in for will, A. 88., p. 747.

sight by the espect of his person. He had that singular beauty which distinguishes the old who have escaped the usury of life; pions, endightened, energelic, he fett himself made for great undertakings. There is something in him which recalls Cardinal Lavigeric and all the prelates whose red robes cover a soldier or a dequal rather than a pricet.1

The Franciscus movement was attacked with vialouce in various quarters; he undertook to defend it, and a very long time before the charge of protector of the Order was officially confided to him, he exercised it with devouring zeal. To felt an automated admiration for Francis and Clara, and often unniferted it in a touching manner. If he lead been a minute mun to might have leved them and followed them. Perhaps he even had thought of doing so. Aheal he was a prince of the Church; he could not help thinking of what he would do in case he should he called to guide the ship of St. Peter.

If a unted accordingly; was it calculation on his part or simply one of those states of conscience in which a man absorbed in the end to be altained headly discusses the ways and means? I do not know, but we see him inner-diately on the distill of Innocent 111., under protext of protecting the Charisses, take their direction in hand, give

^{*}He was been about 1447, orouted eardinal to 1408. Vide Reynabl, ann., 4247, § 88, the earlogy made open limitly Honorine 141. Forma decorns et venustus aspecta... schotor file i, disciplina circuit, castitatis amater et latius sanctitatis eccuplus: Mucuted, Scriptores ver. Ital., 11, 675.

²¹ Od., 74.

The ball Littern tan of August 27, 1918, shown Join already favoring the Charleson. Shardes, L. p. 1. Vide 3 Sec., 113. Offers me ipsam, dicit Hapolium, volis, auxilium et consilium, atque protectionem paradus impondere.

In the Conformition, 167a, 2, there has enclose story which shows Ugolini going to the Careeri to find Francis, and asking thin if he ought to enter his Order.—Of. Spec., 217.

them a Rule, and substitute his own ideas for those of St. Francis.

In the privilege which as legate he gave in favor of Monticelli, July 27, 1219, neither Chra nor Francis is named, and the Damianites become as a congregation of Benedictines.

We shall see farther on the wrath of Francis against Brother Philip, a Zealot of the Poor Ladies, who had accepted this privilege in his absence. His attitude was so firm that other documents of the same mature granted by Ugodini at the same open were not imborsed by the pope until three years later.

The cardinal's arder to profit by the cuthusissis which the transissan ideas everywhere excited was so great that we find, in the register of his tegation of 1221, a sort of formula all propared for those who would found convents like those of the Sisters of St. Damian; but even there we search in vain for the name of transis or there.

This old men had, however, a truly mystical passion for the young alderer; he wrote to her, huncating the measure of being far from her, in words which are the hungange of love, respect, and admiration. There were at *11. Lovd, Registré dei Cardinali, no. 125. Vide below, p. 400. Of. Campl, Hist, cut, di Piacenza, W. 300.

^{} The approached an well that Theorem of Celuno blacked second to forget that, at least at 61. Dandau, the Clarieses followed the Rake given by 84. Pranche blacked: Ipsecular vita mirifica et institutio glariesa a domino Popul Gregorio, tune Hesticusi episcope. I Cel. 29. Cf. Henerii Opera Haray, t. 18., vol. 360; t. tv., cal. 240; Pottheet, 9730 and 6979 ff.

² This privilege is fuserful in the full Secrements of December 9, 1210. Honorit opera, Harey, b. 111., eal. 2021 17.

See, for example, the latter given by Wadding: Annala, B., p. 10 (Rumo, 1762). Tente on marricula cordis, abundantic largementar et immenites addores invasit, quad nisi at poles desu, consolationem solitar pictatia invenireno, spiritus mens forte deflevel et penitus anima liquificeet, Wadding's text should be corrected by that of the Riccard MS., 279, f. 80s and b. Cf. Mack of Islam, b. L. p. 185; Bhardin, b., p. 37.

loast two men in Ugalini: the Christian, who felt himself subdued before Chern and Francia; the prelate, that is, a man whom the glory of the Church semetimes caused to forget the glory of God.

Francis, though almost always resisting him, appoars to have kept a feeling of ingennous gratitude toward him to the very end. Chars, on the contrary, had too long a struggle to be able to keep my illusions as to the attitude of her protector. After 220 there is no trace of any relations between them.

All the effects of the pops to miligate the rigor of Chara's vow of poverly find remained vain. Many oblice muns desired to practise strictly the thule of St. Francis. Among them was the daughter of the King of Bahernia. Oltokur L, who was in continual relations with Chura. But Gregory IX., to whom she addressed herself, was infloxible. While pouring enlegies upon her he onjoined upon her to follow the Rule which he sent to herthat is, the one which he lad compened while he was yet cardinal. The Rule of the Poverella was put among the utopius, not ta say heresien. He mover, however, corald induce St. Clara to completely colouit herself. One day, indood, she rehelled against his orders, and it was the popo who was ubliged to yield: he had desired to bring about a wider suparation between the friers and the Sistors thun had farmerly provailed; for a long time after the death of Francis a certain familiarity had continued botwoon St. Daminn and Portinnents; Clara especially loved these neighborty relations, and often begged one or another Brother to come and preach. The pope thought ill of this, and forbude, under the accorded ponalty, that any friar of Portiuncula should go to St. Damian without express permission of the Haly Sco.

Bull Angelic quadrum of May 11, 1298; it may to found in Sharalon, A., p. 249. Of. Palacky, Literacische Reise wich Raben, Prague, 1888; 4te, no. 147. Potthust, 10,696; cf. 11,175.

This time Chara became indigment. She went to the few friers attached to her monastery, and thanking them for their services, "Go," she said; "since they deprive us of those who dispense to us spiritual bread, we will not have those who precure for us our material bread." Its who wrote that "the neeks of kings and princes are bowed at the feet of the priests" was addiged to be before this woman and raise his prohibition."

St. Damian had too often echoed with St. Francis's hynna of love and tilerty to forget him so noon and become an ordinary convous. Chura commined surrounded with the master's verty companions; Egidic, Lan, Augolo, Clinepro inver caused to be useddness visitors. These true lovers of poverty felt themselves at home there, and leak liberties which would elsewhere lave given surprise. One day an English frier, a cadebrated theologian, came according to the minister's orders to preach at St. Damian. Suddenly Egidic, though a simple layman, interrupted him: "Stop, leading, let me speak," In said to him. And the emster in theology, bowing his head, envered himself with his cowl as a sign of obedience, and est down to listen to Egidic.

Chara felt a great jey in thin; it neemed to her that she was once ugain living in St. Francis's days. The little reterie wer kept up until her death; she expired in the arms of Brothers Leo, Angelo, and Ginepro. In her had sufferings and her dying visions she had the supreme happiness of being surrounded by those who had divoted their lives to the same ideal as she.

In her will her life shows itself that which we have the it—a daily struggle for the defence of the Francisconsider. We see how convergoons and brave was this woman who has always been represented as frail, conneiated, blanched like a flower of the cloider.

⁽A. 88., 176, Clay., p. 762. Cf. Conform., 64b, 2.

A. 88., Aprilia, t. III., p. 230a; Conform., 54a, 1; 177a, 2.

^{*} A. 88., Vit. Clar., p. 764d.

She defended Francia act only against others, but also against himself. In these hours of dark discouragement which so often and so profoundly disturb the archiest souls and sterilize the grandest efforts, she was beside him to show him his way. When he doubted his mission and thought of theing to the heights of repeace and solitary prayer, it was she who showed him the ripering horvest with no respect to guther it in, men going astray with no shopherd to lead them, and draw him once again into the train of the Calilean, into the unables of those who give their lines a reasont for many.

Yok this love with which at St. Damian Francis felt himself surrounded frightened him at times. He feared that his death, making too great a void, would imperil the institution itself, and he took pains to remind the sisters that he would not be always with them. One day when he was to preach to them, instead of entering the pulpit he caused some asher to be trought, and after having spread them around him and scattered some on his head, he intened the Misrrere, thus reminding them that he was but dust and would soon return to that.

But in general it is at St. Damian that St. Francis is

³ The bull of summization says nothing of the Paraceus whom the put to flight. Her life in the A. ES, colden the fast, but shows ber abriphy in prayer before the Roly Secrement, Cf. Conform., 18th, 1. Mark of Lisbon t. 1., part 2, pp. 170 ISI. None of these secondar represents Olars as going to meet them with a monetrance.

² Bon., 178; Fior. 16; Spre., 1994, Antiprin., 344, 9; 1105-1; 406, 1.
With shose about 4 to compared Spre., 2205; Frater Leo nervorit quad Banetus Franciscus surgensorare (slo) venit ad fratres sucs dicens; 33 Hz at seculum et dinittatis habitum, licentic vos.

³ Col., B, 184.

the most himself; it is under the slade of its olive-trees, with Clara caring for him, that he composes his finest work, that which Ernest Remn called the most perfect utterance of modern religious sentiment, the "Cantiele of the Sun."

OHAPEER X

SIRST ATTEMPTS TO REACH THE INFIDELS

Antomo, 1212 Summer, 1218

The only Brothern Minor had too much need of the oncouragement and example of Francia not to have very early agreed with him upon certain fixed periods when they would be sure to find this at Portiuments. Still it uppears probable that these meetings did not become true Chapters-General until toward 1215. There were at first two a year, one at Whitmudey, the other at Alielmetres (September 29th). Those of Whitsunday were the most important; all the Brothern came together to gain now strength in the neciety of Francis, to draw generous arder and grand hopes from him with his compacts and directions.

The members of the young escociation had everything in common, their joys as well as their sorrows; their nucertainties as well as the results of their experiences. At these meetings they were particularly occupied with the Rule, the changes that needed to be rando in it, and above all, how they might hatter and better educated it; then, in perfect harmony, they notifed the alledness of the frium to the various previnces.

One of Francish most frequent counsels here upon the respect due to the clergy; he begged his disciples to show a very particular deforence to the priests, and never to meet them without kissing their hands. It is saw only too well that the Brothers, having renounced everything, were in danger of being unjust or never toward the rich and powerful of the earth; he, therefore, sought to arm them against this tendency, often concluding his connsels with these holds words: "Phore are men who to-day appear to use to be members of the devil who one day shall be members of Christ."

¹⁸ Sec., 57; of. An. Ibrus., A. BB., p. 599.

"Our life in the midst of the world," asid he again, "ought to be much that, on hearing or aseing as, every one shall feel constrained to praise our heavenly Pather. You proclaim peace; have it is your hearts. Be not an occusion of wrath or scandal to anyone, but by your goutlement may all be led to peace, concerd, and good works."

It was especially when he undertook to cheer his disciples, to fortify them against temptations and deliver than from their power, that Francis was most successful, However auxieux a read might be, his words brought it back to servaity. The currentness which he showed in relating address became tiery and terrible in repreving those who fell away, but in these days of early fervor he addom and exemical to show neverity; mere often he musted gently to reprove the Brothers whose picty led than to exaggerate penances and maceralions.

When all was finished and each one bad had his part in this banquet of lave, Francis would like a them, and they would disperse in all directions like strangers and travellers. They had nothing, but shready they thought they saw the signa of the grand and final regeneration. Like the exile on Patmos they saw "the hely city, the mw Jerusalem, coming them from thed out of heaven, like a bride adecraed for her husband . . . and the throne upon which is neated the Desired of all untions,

No Mossiah of the new lines, he who is to make all things now."

Yot all eyes were larned lowerd Syria, where a French knight, Jean do Brienne, had just been declared King of Jornsalem (1210), and toward which were lastening the hands of the children's cruside.

The conversion of Francis, radical as it was, giving a new direction to his Homghts and wilt, had not had pawer to change the foundation of his character. "In a great heart everything is great." In vain is one changed at conversion he remains the same. That which changes is not he who is converted, but his marroundings; he is muldenly introduced into a new path, but he rame in it with the same ardor. Francis still remained a knight, and it is perhaps this which won for him in so high a degree the worship of the finest souls of the Middle Ages. There was in him that longing for the unknown, that thirst for adventures and sacrifices, which makes the history of his centures of grand and so attractive, in apite of many dark features.

Those who have a genine for religion have generally the privilege of illusion. They never quite see how large the world is. When their faith has moved a mountain they thrill with repture, like the old Hebrow prophets, and it seems to them that they see the downing of the day "when the glory of the Lord will appear, when the wolf and the hand will feed together." He seed illusion, that then the blood like a generous wine, so that the soldiers of rightenmores had them the them of the most terrifle fortresses, believing that these came taken the war will be embal.

Franciched found such joys in his union with poverly that he hold it for proven that one needed only to be a man to aquire after the same happiness, and that the

¹ Roy, xxl.; 1 Oct., 40; 3 Hom., 57-59; An. Phras., A. 88., p. 600

Sarmens would be converted in crowds to the gospel of Jesus, if only it were announced to them in all its simplicity. He therefore quitted Portimenta for this new kind of crusude. It is not known from what port he onlarked. It was probably in the antimum of 1202. A tempost having cast the ship upon the coast of Slavenia, he was addiged to resign himself either to remain several nearths in those parts or to return to Haly; he decided to return, but found much difficulty in occuring a passage on a ship which was about to sail for Ancona. It's land no ill-will against the sailers, however, and the dock of feed falling about he shared with them the provisions with which his friends had overloaded him.

No sooner had be landed than he set out on a preaching tour, in which scale responded to his appends 1 with even more engerness than in times past. We may suppose that he returned from Shavonia in the winter of 1212 1214, and that he employed the following apring in ovangelizing Control Haly. It was perhaps during this Lort that he retired to an island in Lake Trashueno, making a sojourn there which afterward because famous in his bround.2 However that may be, a serfeetly reliable document shows him to have been in the Rousigna in the month of May, 1213. One day Francis and his companion, perhaps Brother Leo, arrived at the chateau of Mantefeltro, Thetween Mucerata and San Marino. A. grand fête was being given for the reception of a new knight, but the noise and singing did not affright those, and without hesitation they entered the court, where all

⁹⁴ Col., 55 mid 50; Hon., 199-199.

^{*} Flore, 7: Spre., int: Confirm., 223a, 2. The fact of Franch's sojourn on up bland in this lake is made cortain by 1 Col., 60.

Vide Indaw, p. 400. Cf. A. 88., pp. 823 f.

At proport Same Feltrio, between Canes and Marcrello, south of sudabout two hores' walk from San Marluo.

the nobility of the country was assembled. Francia then taking for his text the two lines, Tanto è il bane ab' espello Ch'ogul pera m'ò dilotta, i present forgot for a moment that several of those present forgot for a moment the tourney for which they had come. One of them, Orhendo dei Cathari, Count of Chinsi in Casentine, was no much moved that, drawing Francis aside, "Futher," be used to him, "I desire much to converse with you about the sulvation of my soul." "Very willingly," replied Francis; "but go for this morning, do humor to those friends who have invited you, cut with them, and after that we will converse as much as you please."

So it was done. The count came back and concluded the interview by saying, "I have in Tascamy a mountain especially favorable to contemplation; it is cutively isolated and would well mit anyone who desired to do penace for from the noises of the world; if it pleased you I would willingly give it to you and your brothron for the salvation of toy soul."

Francis accepted it joyfully, but as he was obliged to be at Portiumala for the Whitsunday chapter to postponed the visit to the Verm³ to a more favorable time.

It was perhaps in this circuit that he went to Incola; at least nothing forbids the supposition. Always constoous, he had gone immediately on his actival to present himself to the bishop, and ask of him authority to preach, "I am not in need of unyone to aid me in my lask,"

Othe happiness that I expect is so great that all pain is jeyful to me. All the documents give Franch's lext in Italian, which is enough to prove that it was the language not only of the poems but also of the sections. Spec. 92a ff. Conform. 191a, 2; 201a, 1; Fior., Prima consid.

⁹ See p. 400.

replied the bistop dryly. Francis bowed and retired, more polite and even more gentle than usual. But in less than hour to had returned. "What is it, brother, what do you want of me again?" "Monsigner," replied Francis, "when a father driven his son out at the door he returns by the window."

 The bishop, distanced by such pious persistence, gave the desired authorization.¹

The aim of trancis at that time, however, was not to exampelize thaty; his frium were already scattered over it in great numbers; and he desired rather to gain them aggress to now countries.

Not having been adde to reach the infidels in Syrin, to resolved to week them in Morocco. Some fitted time before (duly, 1212), the troops of the Almohades laid met an irreparable defeat in the plains of Tolom; benfen by the condition of the Kingstof Aragon, Navarre, and Castile, Malammed el-Naser had returned to Morocco to die. Francis felt that this victory of arms would be nothing if it were not followed by a penceful victory of the gospel spirit.

The war no full of his project, so much in haste to surrive at the end of his journey, that very often he would forget his companion, and hastening forward would leave him far behind. The hieggraphera are unfortunately most faconic with regard to this expedition; they merely say that on arriving in Spain he was no seriously iff that a return home was importative. Beyond a few focal legently, not very well aftested, we present no other information upon the labora of the Saint in this country, nor upon the route which he followed either in going or returning.

This silence is not at all surprising, and ought not to make as undervalue the importance of this mission. The one to Egypt, which look place six years later, with a whole train of friars, and at a time when the Order was much more developed, is mentioned only in a few lines by Thomas of Colune; but for the recent discovery of the Chronicle of Brother Giordane di Giono and the copious details given by dacques do Vitry, we should be reduced to conjectures upon that journey also. The Spanish legends, to which allusion has just been made, rannot be altogether without foundation, any more than those which concern the journey of St. Francia through tanguedoe and Piedmont; but in the actual contilion of the sources it is impossible to make a choice, with any sort of authority, between the historic tasis and additions to it wholly willout value.

^{(#} Bol., 4, 86 , Bote, 82. 1 Cal., 56; Bon , 189.

The mission in Spain doubtless took pince between the Whitsunday of 1314 and that of 1316.3 Prancis, I think, had passed the provious year 2 in thaty. Perhaps he was then going to see the Verm. The March of Ausona and the Valley of Rieti would naturally have attracted him equally about this epoch, and finally the growth of the two branches of the Order must have made necessary his presence at Portionenta and St. Hamian. The rapidity and importance of these missions cought in mosons to give surprise, nor awaken exaggerated critical doubts. It look only a few hours to become a member of the fraternity, and we may not itembt the cineerity of those vocations, since Their condition was the immus-diate giving up of all property of whatever kind, for the benefit of the poor. The new friers were barely received when they in their turn began to receive others, often becoming the heads of the movement in whatever place they happened to be. The way in which we see things going on in Germany in 1221, and in England in 1224, gives a very living picture of this spiritual germination.

¹ Victo Wudding, ann. 1213–1215. Of. A. 195., pp. 1622, flot, 525 (21). Mark of thilan, lib. 1., rap. 45, pp. 76–191; Papinl, Storia di S. Francesco, 1., p. 76 ff. (Edigno, 1825, 2) vols., dio. — 14 la surpolaing to mos Pathor Snyolon giving so touch weight to the coprosection o selecto.

From Pontocost, 1244, to that of 1214. Perform antitive very temporis versus Marachiam iter arrigant, says Thomsecof, Calamert Col., 50), after having monitoned the return from Blavings. Taking into account the author's osus logical the phrase appears to establish a certain be torval between the two substants.

To found a monastery it was enough that two or three Brothers should have at their disposition some sort of a shelter, whonce they radiated out into the city and the neighboring country. It would, therefore, be as much an exaggeration to describe St. Francis as a man who passed his life in founding convents, as to deny altogether the local traditions which attribute to him the erection of a hundred monasteries. In many cases a glance is enough to show whether these claims of antiquity are justified; before 1220 the Order had only hermitages after the pattern of the Verna or the Carceri, solely intended for the Brothers who desired to pass some time in retreat.

Returned to Assisi, Francis admitted to the Order a cortain number of loarned men, among whom was perhaps Thomas of Celano. The latter, in fact, says that God at that time mereifully remembered him, and he adds further on: "The blessed Francis was of an exquisite nobility of heart and full of discornment; with the greatest care he rendered to each one what was due him, with wisdom considering in each case the degree of their dignities."

This does not harmonize very well with the character of Francis as we have sketched it; one can hardly imagine him preserving in his Order such profound distinctions as were at that time made between the different social ranks, but he had that true and eternal politeness which has its roots in the heart, and which is only an expression of tast and lawe. It could not be otherwise with a man who saw in courtesy one of the qualities of Conf.

We are approaching one of the most obscure periods of his life. After the chapter of 1215 he accurate have passed through one of those crises of discouragement so frequent with those who long to realize the ideal in this world. Had he discovered the warning signs of the mistartanes which were to come upon his family? Had he count to see that the accessition of life were to only and hight-his dream? Had he seen in the check of his missions in Syria and Mornero a providential indication that he had by change his method? We do not know. Dutathant this time he felt the need of turning to St. Clara and Brother Silvestra for counsel on the subject of the doubts and hesitations which resulted him; their reply restars? to him peace and joy. God by their mouth commanded him to continue his appostedate.

Immediately be row and set forth in the direction of Boyagua, with an order which he had never yet shown. In one amaging him to persevere Chara had in some northogalated him with a new outhorism. One word from her had sufficed to give him back all his courage, and from this paint in his life we find in him more pastry, more lays, thus over before.

Full of joy, he was going on his way when, perceiving some tlocks of birds, he turned aside a little from the road to go to thom. For from taking flight, they flocked around him as if to bid him welcome. "Brother birds," he said to them them, "you ought to praise and lave your Creator very much. He has given you feathers for clothing, wings for flying, and all that is needful for you. Ho has made you the unblest of his erentures; he permits you to live in the pure air; you have neither to saw nor to reap, and yok he taken care of you, widehes over you and guides you." Then the birds began to areli their nocks, to spread out their wings, to open their beaks, to look at him, as if to thank too, while he went up and down in their midst stroking them with the border of his timic, souding them away at last with his blessing.

⁴ Conform., 410b. 1; Spec., 62b; Fior., 16 (Bon., 170 174).

² Village about two leaguests, W. from Assisi, The time is indirectly fixed by Bon., 178, and f Cei., 58.

In this same evangelizing tour, passing through Alviana, he apoke a few exherintions to the people, but the swallows so filled the air with their chirping that he could not tanke himself heard. " He is my furic to speak," In said to thom; "little rister awallows, hearken to the word of God; keep silenk and he very quick until I have finished." a

We see how Francis'd lave extended to all creation. how the diffined life shed abroad upon all things inspired and moved him. From the marke the carthworm which we trample under foot, everything breathed in his our the incliable eigh of beings that live and soffer and die, and in their life as in their death have a park in the divine work.

⁶ Praised by thou, Lord, with all thy creatures, espesially for my brother Sun which given us the day and by him then showed thy light. He is beautiful and radiant with grout oplendor; of thee, Most High, he is the symbol."

Horo again, Francia revives the Hebrew inspiration, the simple and grandiese view of the prophets of Israel. "Proise the Lord!" the royal Pralmist had sung

¹⁴ Col. 584 Bon., 109 and 174; Flor., 16; Sprc., 62b; Conform, 1146, 2,

About halfway between Orviets and Narni.

^{*} I Gol., 59 · Bua., 175.

"praise the Tard, lire and frest, snew and mests, storacy winds that do his will, mountaine and all falls, frait-frees and all codurs, heads and all cutte, creeping things and fewls with wings, kings of the carth and all peoples, princes and all judges of the carth, young area and maidens, old men and children, procee the Lead, praise

The day of the birds of Bevagne councided in his amonocy as one of the most beautiful of his whole life, and though usually as reserved to adways level to tell of it; lik was because he owed to Claro these pure arders which brought him into a secret and delicious commusion with all beings; it was also who had revived him from sadness and hesitation; in his heart he here an immesse gratitude to her who, just when he meded it, had known how to relarn to him love for leve, inspiration for inspiration.

Prancish sympathy for animals, as we see it shining farth here, has some of that westimentalism, as often arbificial and exclusive of all other leve, which contain associations of his time neisity displayed; is him it is only a manifestation of his feeling for nature, a dought mystical, one might pay partheistic, continent, if the word had not a too definitely philosophical sense, quite opposite to the Franciscan thought.

This sentinent, which in the pacts of the thirteenth contary is so uften false and affected, were in him and only true, but had in it something alive, healthy, reduct.

¹ Ad have at ipon divelsal . . . 1 Pela 69.

² Practice has been compared to this regard to rectain of this contour-pararles, but the challedty of the words only nation more evident the diversity of inequation. Honories 111, may say a Forma come estimation anyona, superiax ample et significat quest theiries purper, full in mande, sed est theodores super manie et implet nois case. Your significant posse, ato, (Horay, t. 1., col. xxly, and 104s, and make a whole sormen on the symbolism of the rows; these averstrained discontinuous

It is this voin of poetry which awake Italy to self-consciousness, made her in a few years forget the nightmare of Catharist ideas, and researed her from possimism. By it Francis became the forermore of the artistic movement which preceded the Renaissance, the inspirer of that groups of Pro-Raphaelites, awkward, gradesque in drawing though at times they were, to whom we turn to-day with a sort of picty, finding in their angraceful saints an inner life, a moral feeling which we sock for obsewhere in vain.

If the voice of the Poverella of Assisi was so wall understood it was because in this mutter, as in all others, it was onlively unconventional. How for wours, with him, from the force or Pharisaic picty of these monks which forbids even the foundes of minucle to enter their convent! This notion of chestity in no some resembles this excessive practory. One day at Siemm he asked for some tartle-doves, and holding them in the skirt of his tunic, he said: "Little eisters turtle-doves, you are simple, innoceed, and chester, why flid you let yourselves he caught? I shall move you from death, and have nests mucle for you, so that you may teing forth young and multiply according to the communication of our Greater."

And he wonk and made tests for them all, and the turble-devise began to by erga and bring up their broads under the eyes of the Brothers.

At Rioli a family of red-brounds were the guests of the momentary, and the yenny firds made marranding expensive nothing to do with the feeding for nature. It is the areand of mediaval rheteria used to dissect a word. It is no intellected offer, not a song of two. The initiation would may: If thy heart were right all creatures would be for the a mirror of life and a return of hely does trine, the R., cap. 3. The simple scattment of the binary of creation is almost here also ; the passage is a polagogue to disguise.

C.Spec., 157. Plov.; 23.

ditions on the very lable where the Brothers were enting! Not far from there, at Greecie, they brought to Francis a loveret that had been taken ative in a trap. "Come to no, brother leveret," he said to it. And as the puor creature, being set free, run to him for refuge, he took it up, caressed it, and finally put it on the ground that it might run away; but it returned to him again and again, so that he was abliged to send it to the weighburing forest before it would causen! In return to freedom."

One day he was crossing the Lake of Ricti, The bookman in whise back he was making the passage offered himschmeh of uncommon size. Francis accepted it with joy, but to the great amazement of the fisherman put it lack into the water, bidding if Ideas Cod.

We should move have done if we were to relate all the incidenta of this kinds for the centiment of unture was innate with him; it was a perpetual communion which made him love the whole creation. The is ravished with the witchery of great forests; he lose the terrors of a child when he is alone at prayer in a deserted chapel, but he tastes ineffecte joy morely in inteding the perfunce of a flower, or gazing into the limpid water of a brook.

This perfect lover of poverty permitted one laxing to oven commanded it at Participants. That of flowers; the Brother was hidden not to new vegetables and metal pharts only; he numb reserve our corner of good ground.

^{1.2} Gal., 2, 164 Conform., 148n, 1, 188h, 2. 126 the story of the shoop of Porthagodic: Bon., 111.

² Villago to the valley of Rietl, two leans' walk from that town, or the road to Texak

^{# 1} Cal., 40; Bast., 1131.

⁴ f Gel., 01 ; Don., 114.

^{* 2} Cel., 8, 64 ; Ban., 149 ; 2 Cel., 3 ; 193 B°; Ron., 110 B°, Ban., 110; 1 Cel., 61 ; Ban., 114, 113, 115; 1 (24), 79 ; Fior., 13, etc.

^{± 9} Col., 8, 101 ff.; Boo., 199.

¹⁹ Cal., 0, 69; 1 Cal., 80 and 81, for our sisters, the flowers of the fields. Francis talked with them also, or rather he replied to them, for their mysterious and gentle language cropt into the very depth of his heart.

The thirteenth century was propared to understand the voice of the Underian poet; the sermon to the hirds of losed the reign of Byzantine art and of the thought of which it was the image. It is the end of degraction and anthority; it is the coming in of individualism and inspiration; very uncertain, no doubt, and to be followed by obstinate reactions, but none that less nursing a date in the history of the human conceiners. Many among the companions of Prancis were too much the children of their mutary, too thereoughly induced with its Hoological ⁰³ Pol, 3, 101; Spec, 130a; 1 Cel., 31.

Phila in the amount a life life most often reproduced by the qualeses such of the ta. The unknown artists who (before 1939) described the nave of the harver Church of Aedd gives the freeen to the history of Jame and the harver Church of Aedd gives the freeen to the history of Jame and the tate the History of St. Francis. Upon the latter he represents: I, the remarkable of the paternal laberthness; 2, Francis uphelding the lateran cheech; 3, the remain to the birde; 4, the stigmate; 5, the francist. This work, unlarpelly very bally lighted, and about half of the drayard at the time of the construction of the chapols of the may, aught to be suggreed before it completely disappears. The labery of set to the time of Giunta Phane to still too much enveloped in eleventhy for us to neglect such a source of information. M. Tionle (Francisco Assisi and dis Aufstrage dee Kunst, Berlin, 1985, 8vo, 1964, 1964, 8vo) are neach too heles so far so these broses are concerned.

³ It he modloss to any that I do not clube that Franch was the only initiater of this movement, still beer that he was becorener; he was its most laughred chaper, and that may onlike for his glory. If hisly was awakened it messeless of the tarp was not so mand us to the tarth mattry; the messeless of the façade of the Outhedral of Spolate (the Christ ladyona the Virgin and St., John) nirendy belong to the new art. Still, the victory was no little first that the mural polatings of St. Lawcomer without the walls and of the Quattra Coronate, which are nabsoquent to it by half a score of years, relapse into a coarse Byzantials as Sporales those of the Bajdolery of Florence.

and metaphysical methods, to quite undersland a sontiment so simple and profound. But each in his degree felt its charm. Here Thomas of Celano's language rises to an elevation which we find in ac other part of his works, closing with a picture of Francis which makes one think of the Song of Songs.

Of more than middle height, Francia had a delicate and kindly face, black eyes, a noft and semerous voice, There was in his whole person a delicacy and grass which made him indicately levely. All these characteristics are found in the most ancient pertraits.

I House the more or less addthe explorations with which they adore these imblents. As to the part of unions in thirteenth century legands consult Casar von Holderbook, Strange's edition, C. H., pp. 257 B.

^{*} L (5d), HO HB

a study of muo thirty partraits. The most bapariant are reproduced in Saint Français (I val., 450, Parks, 1835); I, contemporary partrait, by Bruther Embo, now at Salakov (be, cit., p. 30); 2, partrait dating alant 1230, by Ginnta Plana (71; preserved at Porthugala doe, cit., p. 30); 8, partrait dating alant 1230, by Ginnta Plana (71; preserved at Porthugala doe, cit., p. 384); 8, finally, partrait dated 1235, by Ban, Berlinghleri, and preserved at Possia, in Tusanny (lor, cit., p. 277). In 1896 Prof. Paratroit studied with grant care a partrait which dates from about those years and of which he gives a pleture (abso preserved of late years at Porthugala). Miss cellunas fromcescada t. 1, pp. 44–49; af. pp. 100, 100, and 1997, p. 32. M. Boughl has written some interesting papers on the beautyraphy of 8t. Francis (Francesco di Assis, 1 vol., 12ms, Citta di Castella, Lapi, 1884, Vidu pp. 108–108).

CHAPTER XI

THE INNER MAN AND WONDER-WORKING

The missionary journey, undertaken under the encouragement of St. Chara and so postically imaginated by the sermen to the birds of Bevagos, appears to have been a continual triumph for Francis.\(^1\) Legend definitively takes passession of him; whether he will or no, miracles burst forth under his foolstops; quite unawares to himself the objects of which he has made use produce marveltons effects; folk come out from the villages in procession to meet him, and the biographer gives us to hear the neho of those religions festivals of Italy—merry, popular, noisy, buthed in sunshine—which so little resemble the feathficusty arranged festivals of northern peoples.

From Alviano Francis doubtless went to Narni, one of the most charming little Lowns in Umbria, lassy with building a cathedral after the conquest of their communal liberties. He seems to have bud a sort of prediction for this city as well as for its surrounding villages. From thence he seems to have plunged into the valley of Rieli, where Greecie, Feate-Colombo, Ban Pabiano, Sant-Flouthere, Poppie-Buscone retain even stronger traces of him than the environs of Assisi.

¹⁴ Col., 89,

^{*1} Col., 66; of, Bon., 180; I Cel., 67; cf. Bon., 183; I Cel., 68; Bon., 183. After St. Francis's death the Naridates were the first to come to pray at less tamb. I Cel., 128, 135, 136, 138, 141; Bon., 275.

Thomas of Colama gives us no particulars of the route followed, but, on the other hand, he goes at length into the success of the upostle in the March of Ancoun, and especially at Ascali. Did the people of these districts still remember the appeals which Francis and Egidio had made to them six years before (1209), or must we believe that they were peculiarly prepared to understand the new gospel? However this may be, nowhere else was a like enthusiasm shown; the effect of the sermons was so great that some thirty neighbles at once received the habit of the Order.

The March of Ancoun ought to be held to be the Franciscan provinen par excellence. There are Offida, San-Severina, Maccenta, Farnaro, Gingoli, Fermo, Massa, and Iwenty other hermitages where, thring more than a century, poverty was to find its heralds and its unretyra; from thence came Giavanni della Verna, Jacopo di Massa, Conrad di Offida, Angelo Chreno, and those begions of nameless revolutionists, dreamers, and prophets, who since the extirpts in 1214 by the general of the Order, Crescentius of Jesi, never reased to ball powers filled and of the finest pages of religious history in the Middle Ages.

This success, which included the sead of Francia with joy, did not around in him the amallest movement of pride. Nover han man had a greater power over hearts, became nover preacher preached himself less. One day Brother Masses desired to put his medosty to the test.

On hearing these words the blessed Francis, full of juy, raised less eyes

[&]quot;Why thou? Why theo? Why thou?" he repeated ugain and again, as if to make a nack of Francis. "What are you waying?" orbid Francisat hat. "I am saying that everybody follows there, everys one destroit to sea three, lowe thee, and whey there, and yet for all that than art mather beautiful, nor bearned, nor of audio family. Whenever comes it, then, that it should be there where the world desires to follow to

Who knows if some one will not arise to take up his work? If a mid the passion for worm-enter appealations yet made victims enough? And there not many among us who permive that luxury is a debasion, that if life is a battle, it is not a slaughter-house where ferecious beasts wraugh over their proy, but a wrestling with the divine, under whatever form it may present itself—truth, beauty, or love? Who knows whether this expiring nineleenth century will not arise from its winding-shead to make amends honorable and bequeath to its successor one manly word of faith?

Yes, the Messich will come. He who was announced by Gionechino di Fiore and who is to imaggirate a new opech in the history of humanity will appear. Hope maketh not ushormed. In our modern Babylons and in the huts on our momentains are too many routs who mysteriously sigh the hymn of the great vigil, Horde culi desuper et unless placet Justum, for an not-to-by on the eye of a divine birth.

All origins are mysterious. This is true of natter, but yet more true of that life, superior to all others, which we call holimes; it was in prayer that Francis found the friars to high exclusivational charges; ii, the absolute prohibition of putting themselves in opposition to the nominar charge; if, the interdiction of grant characters and rich convents. On all these points and many athern infidelity to Francis's will was complete in the tirder less than twenty-five years after like abouth. We might expathate on all this; the Hely See in Interpreting the Rule had commical right on its shie, but Obsertine all Casall in maying that it was perfectly elemented had no mead of interpretation had good source on binedite; but that suffice! Let ret simper quary querium expositio super litterious sis apertum quin unla cut difficultus in regula intelligentia. Arbor (the cruciffur, Vandes, 1485, Itb. v., cap, 3. Sanctus vir Egidius tanta ejudatu chandrat super regula destructionem quara cidebat quad ignoreautious ciam spiritus quasi videbatur insanus. Id. (bid.)

1 Heavens drop down your dese, and let the clouds rain down the Just One. Authors for Advert.

spiritual strongth which he needed; he therefore sought for silence and solitude. If he knew how to do buttle in the midst of men in order to win them to the faith, he leved, as Colano bays, to fly away tike a bird going to make its nest upon the mountain.

With men truly pions the prayer of the lips, the formulated prayer, is hardly other than an inferior form of true prayer. Even when it is sincere and attentive, and not a mechanical repetition, it is only a probable for souls not dead of religious conterintism.

Nothing resembles picty so much as love. Formularios of prayer are as incapable of speaking the emotions of the soul as world lave-letters of apeaking the transports of an impossioned heart. To true picty as well as to profound love, the formula in a nork of profoundion.

To pury is to talk with God, to life ourselves up to him, to converse with him that he may come down to us. It is an set of meditation, of reflection, which presupposes the effect of all that is most personal in us.

Looked at in this sense, prayer in the mother of all liberty and all freedom.

Whether or no it be a relilequy of the soul will itself, the solilequy would be none the less the very foundation of a strong individuality.

With St. Francis as with Jesus, prayer has this character of effort which number of it the greatest moral actional relational to truly know such men one must have been able to go with them, to follow desur up to the mountain where he passed his nights. Three favored ones, Peter, James, John, followed him thither one day; but to describe what they saw, all that a manly sursum corderated to the radiance, and the mysterious grandour of him whom they adored, they were obliged to resert to the language of symbols.

¹ In forumibus petros midificabat. I Col., 71. Dpan the prayons of Francis vide fidel., 71 and 72; 2 Pol., 9, 48 43; Hon., 139-149. Cf. 4 Col. 6: 91; 103; 3 Soc., 8; 12; etc.

It was so with St. Francis. For him set for his Muster the end of prayer is communion with the heavenly Father, the accord of the divine with the human; or rather it is man who puts forth his strength to do the work of God, not saying to him a mere passive, resigned, powerless Fiat, but convegeously exising his bend: "Bushold me, Land, I delight to do thy will."

Phore are unfathamable depths in the human soul, because at the hottom is God himself." Whether this God be transcendent or immanent, whether he be One, the Creator, the eternal and immutable Principle, or whether he be, as my the doctors beyond the Rhine, the ideal objectivation of our Me, is not the question for the largest of humanity. The soldier in the thick of lattle docs not philosophize as to how much truth or falashoud there is in the patriodic sentiment; he takes his arms and fights at the peril of his life. So the soldiers of apiritual conflicts seek for strength in prayer, in reflection, contemplation, inspiration; all, poets, artists, teachers, saints, legislators, prophets, leaders of the people, learned monphilosophers, all draw from this mane source.

But it is not without difficulty that the soul unites itself to God, or if one prefers, that it finds itself. A prayer embaut hast in divine communion only when it began by a struggle. The patriarch of land, adversor Bethel, had already divined this: the God who passes by tells his name only to those who ntop him and do him violence to learn it. The blower only after long house of conflict.

The gespet has found in untranslatable word to characterize the prayers of dems, it compares the conflict which preceded the voluntary immedation of Christ to the death-struggle; Pactus in agenta. We might say of his life that it had been a long temptation, a struggle, a prayer, since these words only express different moments of spiritual activity.

Take their Master, the disciples and successors of Christ can conquer their own sould only through perseverance. But these words, ompty of meaning for devout conventicles, buve had a trugic sense for men of religious genius.

Nothing is more take, historically, than the saints that adorn our chareless, with their mineing attitude, bloir piteons expression, that indescribedly amounts and ounseinted one may almost say consecuted air which shows in their whole nature; they are pious seminorists brought up under the direction of St. Alphonse di fagnari ar of St. Louis di Conzagna; they are not usints, not the violent who take the kingdom of heaven by force.

We have some to one of the most deficate features of the life of Francia—his relations with disabelical powers. Castomagned ideas have so profoundly changed in all that concerns the existence of the devil and his relations with men, that it is almost impossible to picture to encoul blic encourage place which the thought of demons occupied at that hime in the minds of men.

The last minds of the Middle Ages believed without a doubt in the existence of the pervense spirit, in his perpetual transformations in the endeaver to tempt men and cause them to fall into his mares. Even in the sixteenth century, Lather, who undermined so many beliefs, had no more doubt of the personal existence of Sulan than of sorcery, conjugations, or possessions.

Polix Kuha: Lather, so riert son neuers, Parla, 1893, 3 volo, 8vo. 1, h, p. 128; 1, H, p. 9; 1, H1, p. 957. Henyemro Cellid dues not hostino la doscriba a vicit which he made one day be the Colisenia in company with a magleina whose words evoked clauda of dovids who illed the whole place. B. Cellini, Lee vita scritte de Uni medicino, Blassifi's edition, Plorance, 1890, 12ma, p. 48.

Finding in their routen wide background of grandenr and wretchedness, whence they sometimes beard a burst of distant harmonies calling them to a bigher life, soon to be overpowered by the clamons of the brute, our accessors could not refrain from accking the explanation of this duel. They found it in the conflict of the demons with God.

The devil in the prince of the demons, as Cled in the prince of the angele; espathe of all transformations, they early on to the end of time territhe battless which will end in the victory of Cled, but meantines each near his whole life long in confeuded for by these two adversaries, and the nathest male are metarally the most disputed.

This is how St. Francis, with all men of his lime, explained the disquiefuden, terrors, mignish, with which his limes was at times assailed, as well as the hopen, consolations, joya in which in general him soul was furthed. Wherever we follow his steps: local tradition has preserved the memory of rude assaults of the tempter which he had to undergo.

It is no doubt usoless to recall here the elementary fact that if manners change with the times, man binnelf is quite as strangely modified. If, according to education, and the manner of life, such or such a nearon experience—hearing in the masician, teach with the Idiad, etc.—we may estimate by this how much sharper certain acases may have been then than now. Beveral centuries ago visual delucion was with adults what it is new with children in remotest cauntry parts. A quivering leaf, a nothing, a breath, an amexplained acand exentes an image which they accound in the reality of which they believe absorbately. Man is all of a piece; the trypementhesis of the will presupposes that of the somebility, one is conditioned on the other, and it is this which makes men of revolutionary epochs so much greater than nature. It would be absurd under pretext of truth to try to bring them back to the common measures of our contemporary society, for they were veritably demigods for good as for ovil, Legends are not always absurd. The men of '93 are still near to us, but it is nevertheless with good right that legend has taken possession of them, and it is pitiable to see these men who, ten times a day, had to take rosolutions where everything was at stake-their destiny, that of their ideas, and semetimes that ef their country -judged as if they had been mere werthy citizens, with leisure to discuss at length every morning the garments they were to wear or the menu of a dinner. Most of the time historians have perceived only a part of the truth about them; fer net only were there two men in them. almost all of them are at the same time peets, demagogues, prophets, herees, martyrs. Te write history. then, is to translate and transpose almost centinually. The men of the thirteenth century could not bring themselves to not refer to an exterior cause the inner motions of their senls. In what appears to us as the result of our ewn reflections they saw inspiration; where we say dosires, instincts, passions, they said temptation, but we must not permit these differences of language to make us overlook or tax with trickery a part of their spiritual life, bringing us thus to the conclusions of a narrow and ignorant rationalism.

St. Francis believed himself to have many a time fought with the devil; the herrible demons of the Etruscan Inferno still haunted the forests of Umbria and Tuscany; but while for his contemporaries and some of his disciples apparitions, prodigies, possessions, are daily phenomena, for him they are exceptional, and remain entirely in the background. In the iconography of St. Benedict, as in that of most of the popular saints, the davil occupies a propondorant place; in that of St. Crancis he disappears so completely that in the long series of Giotto's fresces at Assisi he is not seen a single time.

In the same way all that is magic and miracle-working occupies in his life an entirely accordary rank. Jesus in the Gospels gave his apostled power to cust out evil spirits, and to heal all sickness and all infirmity.3 Ernneis murely took literally them worth, which made a part of his Rule. He believed that he could work miracles, and he willed to do no; but his religious thought was too pure to permit him to consider miracles otherwise than us an entirely exceptional means of relinying the sufferings of men. Not once do we see him resorting to mirude to prove the apentelute or to bolster up his ideas. His fact haight him that worth are worthy of being won by botter means. This almost complete absence of the unredlous in by so much the more remarkable that it is in absolute contradiction with the tondoncies of his time.1

^{*}On the day! and Franck vide I Col., 08, 72; 3 flor, 4 12; 2 Gal., 1, 6; 3, 10; 53; 53 flor, 1 Hon., 54 02. 15. Earl., 3; 5; 13; 57 02; 20; 8pec., 110k. To form an blea of the part labour by the doyll in the life of a mark at the highestian of the thirteenth century, one must read the Dialogus mirrordecism of Casar von Holsterback.

² Matthaw, x. 1.

^{*}Mirades examply only ten paragraphs (64-76) in 1 Col., and of this number there are several which can tarrily be counted as Francis's mirades, slace they were performed by objects which had belonged to bind.

Alloreties often teak advantage of this thirst for the convollen to dupe the catholica. The Cathori of Monecul mode a partrait of the Virgle representing her as one eyed and touthless, mying that in the himility Christ had choose a very agily woman for mather. They lead me difficulty to healing several excess of discountry its reconce; the image became famous, was venerated absent averywhere, and accomplished many infraction until the day where the heretica dividged the deception, to the great seaulal of the faltifol. Eghert you Schönen, Contra

193

Open the life of his disciple, St. Anthony of Padua (+1-1231); it is a tiresome catalogue of prodigies, houlings, resurrections. One would say it was rather the prospectus of some druggist who had invented a new drug than a call to men to conversion and a higher life. It may interest invalids or devotees, but neither the heart near the conscience is tenched by it. It must be said in justice to Authory of Padna that his relations with Francis appear to have been very slight. Among the carliest disciples who had time to fathour their unster's thought to the very depths we find traces of this noble diadain of the apprecians; they knew too well that the perfect joy is not to estound the world with prodigies, to give night to the blind, nor oven to revive them who have been four days dead, but that it lives in the love that gove even to self-immulation. Mihi absit gloriari nisi in erner Domini)

Thus Brother Egidio asked of God grace not to perform mirades; he may in them, as in the passion for learning a suave in which the proad would be taken, and which would distract the Order from its true mission.

St. Francis's miracler are all acts of lave; the greater number of them are found in the heating of norvens makedies, those apparently inexplicated diaquictudes which are the ernel afflictions of critical lines. The gentle glance, at once so companionate and so strong, which seemed like a messenger from this heart, often sufficed to make those who met it forget att their suffering.

The ovil eye in perhaps a tens stapid superstition than Outheron, Form, I. vap. 9. (Patrol. Iat. Mlgun t. 195.) Of Helster-book, los. cit., v. 18. Law de Tay, De altera Vita, Ib. II. 9; IB. 9, 18 (Patrol. Mlgun , 208).

I'm But Hod forbid that I should glory pave in the cross of our Lord Justic Chefat." Onl. vi. 14. This is to this day the matte of the Brothers Miner.

Spro., 182a; 200a; 202a. Cf. 100a.

is generally funcial. Jesus was right in mying that a look sufficed to make one an achilterer; but there is also a look—that of the contemplative Mary, for example which is worth all sacrifices, because it includes them all, because it gives, conservates, immedates him who looks.

Givilization dulls this power of the glance. A part of the education the world gives accountate in touching our eyes to decrive, in making them expressionless, in extinguishing their thinner; but simple and straightforward natures nover give up using this language of the heart, "which brings life and health in its beams."

"A Brother was suffering unspeakable tertures; sometimes he would roll upon the ground, atriking against whatever lay in his way, frothing at the mouth, hearible to see; at times he would become rigid, and again, after remaining stark outstretched for a moment, would roll about in hearible contections; nonetimes lying in a heap on the ground, his feet toucking his head, he would bound upward as high as a man'd head." Francia came to see him and healed him.

But those are exceptions, and the greater part of the time the Saint withdrew himself from the extreation of his companious when they added miracles at his hands,

To min up, if we take a survey of the whole field of Francisca piety, we not that it proceeds from the accret union of his soul with the divine by prayer; this intuitive power of seeing the ideal chases him with the mystics. He knew, indeed, both the certary and the liberty of mysticism, but we much not forget those features of character which reported him from it, particularly his apostolic ferver. Besides this lies piety had certain paculiar qualities which it is necessary to point out.

And first, liberty with respect of observances: Francis fold all the comptiness and pride of most religious closery-

He saw the source that lies hidden there, for the anco. man who carefully observes all the minutia of a religions code risks forgetting the supreme law of love. More than this, the fract who bays upon himself a certain munher of supercrogatory bests gains the admiration of the ignorant, but the pleasure which be finds in this admiration astually transforms his pions act into sin. Thus, strangely enough, contrary to other families of orders, he was continually ensing the strictness of the various rules which he loid down. We muy not take this to be a mere accident, for it was only after a struggle with his discipled that he made his will provail; and it was progisely those who were most disposed to relax their yow of poverty who were blue most auxious to display coglain bigotad obsurvances before the public eya,

"The simor can fast," Frencis would my at such times; "he can pray, weep, uncerate himself, but one thing he cannot do, he cannot be faithful le Cod." Noble words, act unworthy to fall from the lips of him who came to preach a worship in spirit and in truth, without lemple or priest; or rather that every tireside shall lim a temple and every believer a priest.

Religious formalism, in whatever form of worship, always lakes on a forced and moress mouner. Plantisees of every ugo disligare their faces that no one may be unaware of their goddiness. Francis not morely could not endure these grimmess of fake picty, he astually counted mirth and joy in the number of religious duties.

How shall one be inclanelicly who begin the heart an inexhaustible treasure of life and truth which only increases as one draws upon it? How be said when in spite of falls one mover censes to make progress? The pions soul which grows and develops has a joy like that of the child, happy in feeling its weak tittle limbs growing strong and permilting it every day a further exertion.

¹ Scenndam primana regulara fratres feria quayto et sexto et per licon-Gam beati Francisci feria secunda et sabbata jejanobant, dicord. 11. ef. Reg. 1221, cap. 8 mad Reg. 1223, cap. 8, whore Friday in the only fast day rotabled.

The word joy is perhaps that which comes most often to the pen of the translagar unthors; the master wentso far as to make it one of the precepts of the Rule. He was too good a general not to know that a joyons army is always a victorious army. In the history of the early Franciscan missions there are bursts of hughter which ring out high and elem."

For that multer, we are upt to imagine the Middle Ages as much more melanchely than they really were. Men suffered much in these days, but the idea of grief being never separated from that of penulty, authoring was either an expiration or a test, and sorrow thus regarded loses its sting; light and hope ahine through it.

Frameis alrow a park of his joy from the communion. Its gave to the sacrament of the encharist that worship imbaced with matterable emotion, with joyful tears, which has aided some of the noblect of human sould to endure the barden and heat of the day. The letter of the degrae was not fixed in the thirteenth century as it is to-day, but all that is beautiful, true, putent, elernal in the mystical feast instituted by Jeans was then alive in every heart.

The embarish was truly the vintician of the soul. Like the pilgrims of Emmun long ago, in the hour when the shades of evening fall and a vague madness invades the soul, when the phantoms of the night awake and seem to ¹⁴ Oct., 104 234 274 314 312 311 3 Cet., 1, 14 31, 115 4184 Reel., 54 67 Glord., 244 Spec., 119a4 Conform., 148a, 2.

^{*} Carenat featres qual non estembant so tristes extrinscens nublisses of hypocritas; sed estendant so gaudentis in Domine, hibares et conveniantes quationes.

Beet, lov. cit.; Glord., lov. cit.

Vido Vest.) 1 Col., 464 694 784 9 Col., 0, 1294 Spice, 44a.

Joon up behind all our thoughts, our fathers saw the divine and mysterious Companion coming toward them; they drank in his words, they felt his strength descending upon their hearts, all their inward being warmed again, and ogain they whispered, "Abide with us, Lord, for the day is far spent and the night approacheth."

And often their prayer was heard.

CHAPTER XII

THE CHAPTER GENERAL OF 12171

AFFRE Whitsumday of 1217 chronological notes of Francis's life are numerous enough to make arror almost

The communicated the great abstant and the Institution of provincial indicates is usually fixed of their at P217 or 1210, but high those dates present great difficulties. I confess that I do not understand the volumence with which partiends of either vide distant that options, The most important text is a personal in the 3-800, 63: Exploits itaque uniteim annis als inceptions religionis, et multiplicatis numero et movito fratribus, electiofuciant admissiri, et missi cum aliquot fratribus quasi per universas mundi provincian in quitar flats cathetics calitae et servatur,

What then this expression, interptio religionis, meant Y Alan first realing one undoctatingly taken it to refer to the foundation of the Onlar, which occurred in April, 1999, by the reception of the Brat Brathors: but on whiling chosen full years to this date we reach the minimer of Thin be more frostly too labe, for the fi See, may that the hardleren who wout out wore paracrated to meet of the equitries larged the mountains, as being nearedited by no poulified letter; but the half Our dilecti, bears the date of Janua 11, 1219. We see these had to think that the driven years are not to be counted from the reception of the that Brothers, but from Francisco conversion, which the nathers might will speak of as the ptio religionis, and 1206 (11 1313. Պիուրթում this expression to dedignate conversion is not entirely without example, Chushorgur naya (Au, fr., p. 0): Ordinsus minorum incepit anna 1900. Them who udodt 1918 are abliged (like the Hallandlata, for exemple), to attribute on lungourney to the text of the 3 Sec., that of having counted where years as having proved when there had been only ten-We should notice that in the two effect obranched as I bidle atlens glynn by the 8 Soc. (97 and 62) they count from the converdor, that he from 1906, no also Thomsu of Celmo, 88, 106, 119, 107, 88, 57, 55, 91. Carl, ously, the Conformation reproduces the passage of the il See. (118b, 1), impossible. Unhappily, this is not the case for the eighteen menths which precede it (autumn of 1215-Whitsunday, 1217). For this period we are reduced to conjecture, or littly better.

As Francis at that time undertook no foreign mission, in doubtless employed his time in evangelizing Central Italy and in consolidating the foundations of his institution. His presence at Rome during the Lateran Conneil (November II 30, 1215) is possible, but it has left no trace in the earliest biographies. The Council certainly took the new Order into consideration, but it was to re-int with the alteration: None anno ab inceptions religionis. Giradam ill Giano apour the deer to many acception: Anno vero Domini 1210 et anno conversionis spine decima frater Franciscus misit fraters in Franciscus misit fraters in Franciscus misit fraters in Franciscus in Theological, il Hangaviam, in Hespaniam, Giard., il As a little later the made action properly harmonized 1210 with the thirteenth year fram Franciscus conventen, everyone la in agreement in admitting that the passage alted meda accreation; we have unfortunately only one manuscript of this chroniole. The bareger, who doubt has had mather before him, antellated 1217, but he may have drawn this date from another document. It is notoworthy that findher Giardamo gives as shoullaneous the departure of the frime for Bermany, languary, and France; but, as to the latter country, it corbinly took place in 1217. So the Speenline, 44a.

The abranciae of the xxiv, generals and Mark of Liden (Dieda's ed., t. 1., p. 82) haids also to 1217, so that, though not definitely established, it would appear that this date decoded by excepted until further information. Starting from adightly different provides, the learned editors of the Analysis arrive at the same concludes (t. 11., pp. 25-36). Of Evers, Analysis at Er. Minorum historium, Ladisde, 1882, 410, pp. 7 and 11. That whild appears to me deathedly to the balance in favor of 1217, is the fact that the arbidomary frime were persecuted because they lead no dominant of legitimation; and in 1210 they would have had the built Cum dilecti, from Jame 14th of that year. The Betlandish, who had for 1219, lave so elearly soon this argument that they have been addiged to dony the anthenticity of the bull (or at how) to suppose it wroughy dated). A. 88., p. 850.

Vlda A. 88., p. 461. Cf. Augolo Chrono, Teibal, Archiv., L. p. 559. A papa Innocent's fait couniton annuntation in concilia youevall . . . slent nanctus vir fr. Lea serdit et fr. Johannende Celano. Those now the invitation made to it five years before by the supreme pontiff, to choose one of the Rutes already approved by the Church.\(^1\) St. Dominic, who was then at Rome to beg for the confirmation of his institute, received the same counsel and innectiately conformed to it. The Holy See would willingly larve conceded special constitutions to the Brothers Minor, if they had adopted for a base the Rule of St. Benedict; thus the Clarisses, except those of St. Damien, while preserving their name and a certain number of their enstons, were obliged to profess the Benedictine rule.

To apite of all adicitations, Francis insisted upon retaining his own Rule. One is led to believe that it was to confer upon these questions that we find him at Peragin in July, 1216, when Innocent 111, died.

However this may be, about this epoch the chapters took on a great importance. The Church, which had looked on at the foundation of the Order with somewhat mixed feelings, could no longer rest content with being the more specialor of so profound a movement; it saw the need of utilizing it.

Ugolini was marvellously well prepared for such a task. Cliovanni di San Puolo, Bishop of the Sabine, charged by Innocout III, to look after the Brothers, died in 1216, and Ugolini was not alow to offer his protection three have not perhaps the shortdleaves which one would be hed to give them at the first glauce, their author having pechaps reasonable consistent and consisterium. The Breenhan, 200 ways. Eam (Regulam Innocentius) appropriate et concessit et posten in consisterio omnibus annuationi.

As aimit Religionem diversitus proven in Ecclesia Del confusionem inducat, firmiter prohibemus, no quis de coetere moutan Religionem inveniat ; sed quicumque colocrit nel Religionem converti, unum de approbatis ussumat. Tabbie und Commet: Sacrosaneta conveitia, Paria, 1673, t. xl., col. 166.

¹ Fool., 16 (An. franc., t. 1, p. 250): Innocentium in cujus obita full presentialitor S. Franciscus.

to Francis, who accepted it with gratitude. This extraordinary offer is recounted at length by the Three Companions. It must certainly be fixed in the sammer of 1216 immediately after the death of Giovanni di San Paolo.

It is very possible that the first chapter held in the presence of this cardinal took place on May 29, 1236. By an error very common in history, most of the Franciscan writers have referred to a single date all the scattered incidents concerning the first colemn assizes of the Order, and bave called this typical assembly the Chapter of the Mats. In reality for long years all the gatherings of the Brothers Minor deserved this mane.

Coming together at the neason of the greatest heat, they slopt in the open air or sheltered thenselves under booths of reads. We need not pity them. There is nothing like the glorious transparency of the number night in Umbria; sometimes in Provence one may enjoy a foretaste of it, but if at Banx, upon the rock of Doms, or at St.

¹⁸ Soc., 61 ; ef. Au. Perus., A. 88., p. 1006.

Phomos of Colano must be in corror when be declared that Francis was not acquainfied with Cardinal Dgolloi before the yielt which he made him at Plorence (summer of 1917); Nondom after afterivral provipust familiaritate conjunctus (1464., 74 and 75). The Franciscan bloggaphur's purpose was toot blaterie; chromological bublenthess are given in profusion; what he socks bothe apts juncture. Tradition has preserved the mannery of a chapter held at Porthunenta in presence of Pgellul during a stay of the earls of Perugia (Spec., 1976.; Pier., 184 Conform., 2076; 3 Sec., 36). But the encladid not come back to Perugia between 1918 and Francis's death. It is also to be noted that corroling in Augula Garona, Dgollul was with Francia in 1910, supporting him in the presence of Innoced 111. Vide below, p. 313. Finally the built Secressauctu of December 9, 1210, witnessee that already during his logation in Florence (1917) Pgellint was actually interesting himself for the Garbason.

^{*}See, for example, the description of the chapter of 1921 by Brother Glordano. (Gord., 13).

Banno, the sight is equally solemn and grandiose, it still wants the curessing sweetness, the effluence of life which in Hubria give the night a bewitching charm.

The inhabitants of the neighboring towns and villages flucted to these necetings in crowds, at once to see the persumaics, to be present when their relatives or friends assumed the habit, to listen to the appeals of the Saint and to furnish to the friers the provisions of which they might have need. All this is not without some analogy with the camp-meeting se dear to Americans. As to the figures of several thomsands of attendants given in the legends, and furnishing oven to a Granciscan, Pather Papini, the occasion for pleasantries of doubtful taste, it is parhaps not so surprising as might be supposed.

These first meetings, to which all the Brothers engerly hastened, held in the open air in the presence of crowds come together from distant places, have then nothing in common with the subsequent chapters—general, which were veritable conclaves attended by a small number of delegates, and the majority of the work of which, done in secret, was concerned only with the affairs of the Order.

During Francia's lifetime the purpose of These assemblies was assentially religious. Men altended them not to talk business, or proceed to the nomination of the minister-general, but in mutual communion to gain new strongth from the joys, the example, and the sufferings of the other brothern.

^{*}With regard to the figure of five thousand attendants given by Bona-ventura (Bona, 50) Father Papial writes; to non-versio state expans aloums di shire ad intembere at B. Dattere simil fanfaluen, no vapore int di verdorhi.

[.] In somma it numera quinque millia et ultra man à del Santa, incapace di scrivere una cosa tanto improbabile e relativamente empossibile. Storia di S. Fr., f., pp. 181 and 183. This figure, five thousand, is also indicated by Each, fl. All this may be explained and foreume possibile by admitting the presence of the Brothero of Pouttence, and it seems very difficult to contest it, show in the Order of the Rumiliante, which much reconsider that of the Brothero Minur (equally composed of three branchous approved by three bolls given June, 1911), the chapterseguieral anomally held were frequented by the brothers of the three Orders. Tirabasold, t. fl., p. 144.—Of. shove, p. 168.

The four years which followed the Whitsunday of 1216 form a stage in the evolution of the Umbrian movement; that during which Francis was ballling for autonomy. We find here profty delients aludes of distinction, which have been misunderstood by Church writers as much as by their adversaries, for if Prancis was particular not to nut himself in the attitude of revolt, he would not commontise his independence, and he felt with an exquisite divination that att the privileges which the conct of Rome could heap upon him were worth nothing in comparison with liborly. Alas, he was soon forced to resign himself to these gilded bonds, against which he never consed to protost, even to his last sigh; but to shut one's eyes to the moral violence which the papacy did him in this rantfor is to condemn encoolf to an entire misapprehension of his work.

A glunce over the collection of bulls uddressed to the Franciscous suffices to allow with while arder he struggled against fuvers so engerly sought by the momestic orders.³

⁴ Vide 2 Col., 3, 121 ; Spec., 421c; 127b.

² Pracipio firmiter per obedientiam frateibus universis quot ubicunque sunt, non andeant peters aliquam litteram in Garia Ismana. Test. B. Pr.

[&]quot;A comparison with the Bullary of the Preaching Friers is especially instructive; from their directospher at Notre Dance de Prouille, in 1216, they are about differen; we find there at this time absolutely nothing that can be compared to the Francheous necessary, which was already sitering up all Italy. But with the first bull in fever of the Francheous hears the date of June 11, 1246, and the approbation property so called that of November 29, 1229, we find Homerine directly in the end of 1246 levishing marks of affection upon the Dominicans; December 29, 1246, Religiosam vitans. Of Present, J. regesti, del Pontefice

A great number of begoindary anecdotes put E disolain of privileges in the charest light. Even hi est friends thit not always understand his scruple

On you not sen," they said to him one day, " that often the do not permit no to prouch, and make no countries everal days doing anything holowe we wre permitted to probable the word it would be better worth while to obtain for this end a privil the pape, and it would be for the good of souls."

"I would first souvert the problem by boundity and respond piled quickly;" for when they have seen in binoble and a toward those, they those will beg us to preach and en people. As for me, I ask of that me privilege unless it be th lavo some, to be full of respect for all men, and to convert the Rule unblow, more by our example that by our species."

The question whother Francis was right or whis antipathy to the privileges of the caria doesn within the domain of history; it is evident that titude each not long continue; the Church knothe faithful and redule. But the holdest heard make a stand at compromises of this kind; the link the biture should grow out of the past wither valsion and without a critica.

The chapter of 1217 was notable for the defining anization of the Franciscan mindows. Unly a other countries were divided off into a certain unprovinces, having each its provincial minister.

Onorlo III., Rusa, 1894, t. I., mr. 1764 manner thin: New m. 1664, no. 176; January 24, 1217, protistrantennesses, it., m. 1, 284, 1889, 1456, 1208. It is needless to continue this env. Very much the muco could be about for the other Orders; we canclusten that if the Brothers Micar about the forgetten in the favors, it is became they decidedly whiled to be. It is milled that tomediately upon Franchis death they made thus.

"The authorithity of this passage is put beyond doubt by ill Camb'n citation. Archie. III., p. 56. Cf. Spec., 90a; 111b, 1; 118b, 1; Illurium, Arbor cita cruc., iii., 9. diately upon his accession Honorius III. had sought to revive the popular zeal for the crusades. He had not stopped at preaching it, but appealed to prophecies which had proclaimed that under his pontificate the Holy Land would be reconquered. The renewal of fervor which ensued, and of which the rebound was felt as far as Germany, had a profound influence on the Brothers Minor. This time Francis, perhaps from humility, did not put himself at the head of the friars charged with a mission to Syria; for leader he gave them the famous Elias, formerly at Florence, where he had had opportunity to show his high qualities.

This Brother, who from this time appears in the foreground of this history, came from the most humble ranks of society; the date and the circumstances of his entrance into the Order are unknown, and hence conjecture has come to see in him that friend of the grette who had been Francis's confident shortly before his decisive conversion. However this may be, in his youth he had earned his living in Assisi, making mattresses and teaching a few children to read; then he had spent some time in Bologna as scriptor; then suddenly we find him among the Brothers Minor, charged with the most difficult missions.

His adversaries vie with one another in asserting that he was the finest mind of his century, but unhappily it is very difficult, in the existing state of the documents, to pronounce as to his actions; learned and energetic, eager to play the leading part in the work of the refor-nation of religiou, and having made his plan beforehand as to the proper mode of realizing it, he made straight for his goal, helf political, half religious. Full of admiration for Francis and gratitude toward him, he desired to regulate and consolidate the movement for renovation. In the inner Franciscae circle, where Lee, Cinepro, Egidio, and many others represent the spirit of liberty, the religion of the lambde and the simple, Elias represents the scientific and ecclesiastical apirit, prudence and reason.

¹ Burchardt chronicon ann. 1217, loc. oit., p. 277. See also the bulls indicated by Potthast, 5575, 5585-92.

⁹ Before 1217 the office of minister virtually existed, though its definitive institution dates only from 1217. Brother Bernardo in his mission to Bologna, for example (1212?), cortainly held in some sort the office of minister.

To buil great ancess in Syria and received into the Order one of the disciples most dear to Francis, Casar of Speyer, who later on was to tanke the conquest of all Santhern Germany in less than two years (1221-1223), and who in the end scaled with Ida blood his tidelity to the strict observance, which he defended against the attacks of Brother Elies himself.

Casar of Speyer offers a brilliant example of Moso suffering souls athirst for the ideal, accuming one in the thirteenth century, who everywhere went up and down, seeking first in learning, then in the religious life, that which should assuage the mysterious thirst which testured them. Disciple of the achebratic Conrad, he had folk himself averpowered with the desire to reform the Church; while still a hyman he had preached his ideas, and without come success, since a certain number of ladies of Spayer had began beload a new life; but their husbands disapproving, he was obliged to escape their vengences by laking refuge at Paris, and thence he went to the East, where in the preaching of the Brothers Minor he found again his hopes and his dreams. This instance shows how general was the waiting condition of souls when the Franciscun gospel blazed forth, and how its way had been everywhere propared.

Tampisamed by order of Ellas, he died in convequence of blows given him one day whom he was taking the de outside of ble prison. Tribul., 24s.

But it is time to return to the compter of 1217: the friers who went to Germany under conduct of Giovanni di Penna were far from having the success of Elias and his companions; they were completely ignorant of the tanguage of the country which they had undertaken to evangelize. Perhaps Francis and not taken into account the fact that though Italian might, in case of need, suffice in all the countries bathed by the Mediterranean, this could not be the case in Central Europe.

The let of the party going to Hungary was not mere happy. Very often it came to pass that the missionaries were fain to give up their very garments in the effort to appears the peasants and shephords who multreated them. But no less incapable of understanding what was said to them than of making themselves understood, they were soon obliged to think of returning to traly. We may thank the Franciscan authors for preserving for us the memory of these checks, and not attempting to picture the frium as suddenly knowing all languages by a divine inspiration, as later on was so often related.

Those who had been sent to Spain and also to undergo persocutions. This country, like the senth of France, was ravaged by hereny; but already at that time it was vigorously repressed. The Franciscans, suspected of being false Catholics and Herefore engarly hunted out, found a refuga with Quean Urraca of Portugal, who permitted them to establish themselves at Coimbra, Chrimarraens, Alenquero, and Liebon.

^{! (}Hord., 5 and 6; 3 Sec., 42.

Of Glovanni di Parma, Claropo, Anthony of Padua, etc.

⁹ Mark of Lishan, t. i., p. 162. Cf. p. 70, t. ii., p. 80, Glassborger ann. 1917. An. fr., H., pp. B ff.; Chron xxie, yen., MS. of Asslat, no 828, fo 25.

Francis himself made proparations for going to France,! This country land a peculiar charm for him because of his fervent love of the Holy Sucrament. Perhaps also he was unwittingly drawn toward this country to which he owed his name, the chivalrons dreams of his youth, all of poetry, song, music, delicions dreams that had come into his life.

Something of the emotion that thrilled through him on undertaking this new mission has passed into the story of his biographera; one feels there the thrill at once sweet and agonizing, the heart-throli of the brave knight who goes forth all harmessed in the early dawn to seen the horizon, dreading the noknown and yet everthewing with joy, for he known that the day will be consecrated to love and to the right.

The Italian pact has given the one name of "pilgrimuges of love" to the faringe forth of chivalry and the journeys undertaken by dreamure, artists, or saints to those parts of the earth which forever mirror themselves before their imagination and remain their chosen fatherland. Such a pilgrimage as this was transin undertaking.

"Sad forth," reld to to the Brothera who accompanded him, "and walk two and two, humble and gentle, keeping allower until after ligren, praying to God in your bourts, excefully avoiding avery value or moless word. Modifiate as torole while on the journey as if you were shot up in a hountage or to your call, for wherever we me, wherever we go, we easily with me; Brother body in our call, and the word is the hounts who dwells in the there to pray to the Lord and to modifiate."

Arrived at Plarence he found there Cardinal Ugolini, sent by the pape as legale to Trineary to preach the crumda and lake all needful measures for assuring its success.¹ Francis was surely for from expecting the reception which the problet gave him. Instead of encouraging him, the cardinal orged him to give up his project.

USpec, 445. (Conform., 149a, 2), 195a; 1814, 1; 1 Col., 74 and 75.

¹² Oct., 8, 120. Diligebat Franchem . . . volchet in en mort.

"I am not willing, my brother, that you choold cross the accountains; there are many prolates who ask nothing better than to stir up differenties for you with the court of Rome. But I med the other cardinals who love your Order desire to protect and all you, on the condition, however, that you do not quit this province."

"But, manifiguor, it would be a great diagram for me to soul my brothron for away willing rounded titly here, sharing more of the tribulation which they must undergo."

"Whornfore, thou, have you ment your deothrouse of far away, expensing them thrusto starvather and all sorts of portlay"

"The you think," replied Franch wormly, and us if moved by prophetic langitudin, "that God ruleed up the Bredhees for the askn of this munity alone? Verily, I say unto you, God has raised them up for the awakening and the sulvation of all men, and they shall who souls not only in the mountries of these who hallows, but also in the very miles of the Inflates,"

The surprise and admiration which these words awoke in Ugolini were not enough to make him change his mind. He insisted so strongly that Francis lurned back to Pertinually, the inspiration of his work not even shaken. What knows whether the joy which he would have felt in sweing France did not confirm him in the idea that he might to renounce this plan? Souls athirst with the longing for macrifice often have accuples such as these; they refuse the most lawful joys that they may offer them to Clod.

¹ V. hull of Junuary 23, 1917, Tempus acceptabile, Potthist, no. 5480, given in Horey, t. H., and. 205 B., of. Presentl, t., p. 71.—This bull and those following fix without question the Hore of the journey to Florouse.—Putthast, 6486, 6487, and page 496.

^{*} It is superfluence to point out the error of the Bollandist text in the phrasa Manuit (Cardinalis Franciscum) captum non perfecto iter, where the non-beamlitted, A. 188., p. 704. Of., p. 307 and 835, which has bed Suysken into several other errors.

We cannot tell whether it was immediately after this interview or not till the following year that Francis put Brother Pacifico at the head of the missionaries sent into France.

Pacifico, who was a junt of talent, had before his conversion been surnamed Prince of Poesy and crowned at the capital by the enquerer. One day white visiting a relative who was a nun at San Severine in the March of Ancona, Francis also arrived at the momentary, and preached with such a hely inequality that the poet felt himself pierced with the sword of which the Bible speaks, which penetrates between the very joints and unarrow, and discous the thoughts and intents of the heart. On the morrow he assumed the habit and received his symbolical surname.

Ho was accompanied to France by Brother Agnello di Pisa, who was destined to be put at the head of the first mission to England in 1224.

Francis, on souding them forth, was far from dreaming that from this country, which exerted much a function over him, was to come forth the influence which was to compromise his dream that Paris would be the destruction of Assisi; and yet the time was not very far dislant;

¹ Bou., 64. Of, Cheisborger, ann. 1317; Spec., Mili.

^{*} Ifidia tv., 13 ; 9 thd., 0, 40 ; 11on., 60 mut 51.

Bruther Pacifico Interesta in [the French periode] particularly on the first inhibitor of the Orster in France; information about him is abinifiant; flow, 70; 24ad., 3, 61; 5pre., 41b.; Conform., 38a, 1; 48a, 1; 71b; 173b, 1, and 176; 2 Col., 8, 27; 2pre., 33h; Conform., 181b; 2 Col., 3, 76; For., 40; Conform., 70a. 1 do not indicate the general references found to Chevoller's Bibliography. The Miscollinea, t. 9. (1887), p. 158, contains a most proclassical interesting column about him. Gregory IX, speaks of blue to the bull Magna sient dicitor of regard to the first bull for, 1, p. 35(19) though of him in his Costa Imperatorum (Mon. germ. hist. script., 4, 42, p. 493).

^{*} Reol., I | Conform., 118b, 1.

. few years more and the Poverello would see a part of his spiritual family forgetting the lumility of their name, their origin, and their espirations, to run after the ophonoral landes of learning.

We invocalready seen that the limbit of the Franciscans of this time was to make their about within may reach of great cities; Pacifico and his companions established themselves at St. Donie. We have no particulars of their work; it was singularly fruitful, since it permitted them a low years later to attack England with full success.

Francia passed the following year (1218) in avangelizing tours in Italy. It is naturally impossible to follow him in these travels, the itimerary of which was fixed by his daily inspirations, or by indications as fanciful as the one which had formerly determined his going to Siemas. Belogue, the Verms, the valley of Rieli, the Sacro-Speco of St. Benedict at Subjaca, Coots; San Michele on Mount Cargano perhaps received binnet this time, but the notes

Payord 1224 (Inc Bruthern Minor desired to draw nearer and hulld a vast enryout near the walk of Pathe in the grounds eathed Vanyort, or Valvart (now the Laxemborg Cardem), (Eccl., 10; cf. Top. kist, duriour Paris, by Berty and Theorem), (Eccl., 10; cf. Top. kist, duriour Paris, by Berty and Theorem), 1, iv., p. 70). In 1230 they received at Paris from the Benedletines of Saint-Germalaclese-Prin a certain number of Inneses in parocchia 138, Cosmo et Dandoni infra muros domini regis propo portain do Gibarda (Charlulariam Universitatis Buristensis, no. 76.—Of. Topographia historique du cierce Paris; Région need, de Panis, p. 96; Félibben, Historic de la ville de Paris, 1, p. 146). Plunlly, 8t. Louis landolled them in the colebrated Convent of tim Cordellara, the refeatory of which ettli exists, transformed late the Dupaytron Manoum. The Boudaticaus, who arrived in Paris September 12, 1217, word straight to the centre of the city, near the bishopic palace on the He de la Citi, and on August 4, 1218, were instailed in the Convent of St. Jacques.

[§] Phor., 27; Spec., 1486; Conform., 71a and 118a, 24 flow, 482.

^{*} The traces of Francia's vielt here are universes. A Brether Eudot painted his portrait here.

⁴ But., 177.

Yido A. 88., pp. 855 and 850. Cf. 2 Cel., 3, 186.

of his presence in these placescare to esparse and vague to permit their being included in any scheme of history.

It is very possible that he also paid a visit to Rumo during this time; his communications with Ogolini were much more frequent than is generally supposed. We must not permit the stories of biographers to dereive us in this matter; it is a natural tendency to refer all that we know of a man to three or four especially striking dates. We forget entire years of the life of those whom we have known the best-and toyed this most and group our memories of them around a few solient events which shine all the more brilliantly the deeper we make the surrounding obscurity. The words of Jesus spaken on a hundred different occasions enuo at last to be formed into a single discourse, the Sermon on the Monut. It is in such cases that criticism needs to be delicate, to mingle a little divination with the heavy artiflery of sciontific argument

The texts are mered, but we must not make feticles of them; notwithdunding St. Matthew, no one to-day drams of representing Jeans in uttering the Sermon on the Moint all at one time. In the main way, in the nurritives concerning the relationst between St. Francis and Ugolini, we find anisolved every racinent about up in notheroughfares, coming up against contradictory indications, just so long as we try to refer everything to two or three moetings, in we are at first led to do.

With a simple net of unityain these difficulties disappear and we find each of the different narrative laringing us fragments which, being pieced together, furnish an organic story, living, paychologically true.

From the moment at which we have now arrived, we must make a much larger place for 1 polini than in the past; the struggle has definitively opened between the Franciscan ideal—chimerical, perhaps, but sublime—and the ecclesiastical policy, to go on until the day when, half in lumility, half in discouragement, Francis, heartsick, abdicates the direction of his spiritual family.

Ugolini returned to Rome at the ond of 12.17. During the following winter his countersign is found at the hottom of the most imported tails; he devoted this time to the special study of the question of the new orders, and summened Francis before him. We have seen with what frankness he had declared to him at Florence that many of the prolates would do anything to discredit him with the pape. It is evident the encross of the Order, its methods, which in apile of all probabilities to the contrary seemed to server of hereay, the independence of Francis, who had centered his friers in all the fear corners of the globe without trying to gain a confirmation of the verbal and entirely pravisional authorization accorded him by Innocent III.—all these things were calculated to startle the clergy.

Ugalini, who better than may one class knew Umbrin, Theomy, Emilia, the March of America, all those regions where the Franciscan preaching had been nost successful, was able by himself to judge of the power of the new movement and the imperions accessity of directing it; he felt that the best way to allay the projudices which the pope and the energy college might have against Francis was to present him before the curia.

Francia was at first much almshed at the thought of preaching before the Vieur of Jesus Christ, but upon the entreaties of his probector to commuted, and for greater security be tearned by heart what he had to say.

⁴ Among effices those of Hereinber 5, 1217, Potthest, 5626; February 8, Morel 30, April 7, 1218, Potthest, 5665, 6739, 5747.

^{2.1} Col., 74. O quanti maxime in principio cum lure agerentur acveltos plantationi ordinis insidialacatur ut perderent. Of. 3 Col., 1, 16. Vido bat branciscas laparum ouve sevire quanquares.

Ugalini himself was not entirely at case as to the result of this step; Thomas of Colano pictures tim as devoured with mexicty; he was troubled about Francis, whose artless eloquence ran many a risk in the halls of the Lateran Palace; he was also not without some more personal anxieties, for the failure of his protégé might be most damaging to limitelf. The was in all the greater anxiety when, on arriving at the feet of the pontiff, Franceis forget all he had intended to say; but he frankly avowed it, and seeking a new discourse from the inspiration of the moment, apoke with so much warmth and simplicity that the assembly was won.

The hiographers are unite so to the practical result of this sudience. We are not to be surprised at this, for they write with the sole purpose of edification. They wrote after the apotheous of their unater, and would with very bad grace have dwell upon the difficulties which he met during the early years.

The Holy See must have been greatly peoplexed by this 14 Cal., 78 (of. 3 Pal., 1, 17; Spec., 102a); 3 Sac., 31; Bau., 78, The diving of this seems be the wheter of 1217-1218 momer hardly in his dehalode; (Bardano's second (14) be fact determines the divious which Dyallot beams officially protecter of the Order; It intepreses earlier role than between Howevier, Franch, and Oyallot. We are therefore hel to sack a date at which these three personages may have not in Roma, and we arrive than at the period between December, 1217, and April, 4218.

⁹ A word of Brokher Glordano's opens the chor to certain emijoctures, ¹⁹ My hird,¹⁰ said Franch to Honorka III., in 1920, ¹⁹ you have given me among fathers (paper) give me a sleight one to whom I may face with the affairs of my Order.¹⁹ (Glord., 14, Multes milic papers decists do notes, etc.)

Door not this maggest blocklock that the poully had perhaps manual a contribution of cardinals to everyon the Brothers Minury. Its defilient than and the events to be reliable in the following elaptic radight have impulsed the to bean the batt Com dilection of June 11, 1219, which was not an approbation properly accalled, but a safe-constant in favor of the Franciscous.

strange man, whose faith and lumility were evident, but whom it was impossible to teach ecclesiastical abedience.

St. Dominic imposed to be in Reme at the same time, and was everwhelmed with favors by the pape. It is a matter of history that Innecent 111, taving asked him to choose one of the Rules already approved by the Church, he had returned to his frings at Notro Dame do Proville, and after conferring with them had adopted that of St. Augustine; theorims therefore was not sparing of privileges for him. It is hardly possible that Ugatini did not try to use the influence of his example with St. Francis.

The caria saw elearly that Dominie, whose Order Inrely comprised a few dozen members, was not one of the moral powers of the time, but its sentiments toward him were by no means an mixed as those it experienced with regard to Francis.

To unite the two Orders, to throw over the shoulders of the Dominicans the brown cassock of the Poor Men of Assisi, and thus make a little of the popularity of the Brothers Minor to be reflected upon thou, to trave to the latter their name, their ladit, and even a semblance of their Bule, only completing it with that of St. Augustine, such a project would have been singularly pleasing to Ugolini, and with trancie's lumility would seem to have some chance of success.

One day Daminia by dint of pions insistance induced Francis to give him his cord, and immediately girded himself with it. "Brother," said he, "I carnestly long that your Order and mine might units to form one sole and some institute" in the Church." But the Brother

¹ He took possession of St. Baldao on February 28, 1218,

^{*2} Col., 3, 87. The literal messaling of the phrise is somewhat ambiguous. The text is: Vellem, frater Francisco, union fleri religionem sum et meam et in Exclesia pari forma non vivers, Spec. 27b. The ocho.

Minor wished to remain us he was, and declined the proposition. So truly was he inspired with the needs of his time and of the Church that less than three years after this Dominic was drawn by an irresistible influence to transform his Order of Canona of St. Augustine into an order of mendicult meaks, whose constitutions were outlined upon these of the Franciscaus.

A few years later the Deminicans took, so to speak, their revenge, and obliged the Brothers Minor to give learning a large place in their work. Thus, while hardly come to youth's estate, the two religious families rivalled one another, impressed, influenced one another, yet never so much so as to less all traces of their origin—summed up for the one in poverty and by preaching, for the other in learning and the preaching of the clergy.

of labratumpt is found to Phlorry d'Apoldo, l'is de S. Dominique (A. 88.4 August), t. 1., p. 572 d) r. S. Dominicos in oscula sanota vuens et sinerros amplexas, dirit: Tu. es socius mens, tu curves paviter mecum, stemus sinul, nullus adversarius pavealchit. Hornard of Norso vaya: B. Dominious tanta B. Francisco decedion calesit ut optatum ab co condam subinferiari tantea decatissimi cingrect, cujus et sanur l'aligimem unum rells fleri diceret, ipsumque pro sanctitute caleris sequendem veligiosis asservet, Turin MS., 1021.

At the chapter hold at Relegies at Whiteheaday, 1920. The bull Religiosam vitum (Privilege of Natro Hamo do Privilla) of March 30, 1918, mannorated the presessions of the Doublehams. Ripolli, Bulk Privil., t. 1., p. 6. Herey, Homerit opera, t. 11., vot. 034.

CHAPTER XIII

ST. DOMINIO AND ST. FRANCIS

The Egypthia Medon. Smanor 1218 - Autumn 1220

Arr and poetry have done well in inseparably associaking St. Dominio and St. Francia; the glory of the first is only a reflection of that of the second, and it is in placing thom side by side that we are used best in understanding the genius of the Poverdle. If Francis is the man of inspiration, Dominio is that of obedience to orders: one may may that his life was passed on the read to Rome. whither he continually went to ask for instructions. His legend was therefore very dow to be formed, although nothing forbade it to blossom freely; but neither the zeal of Gregory 1X, for his momory nor the learning of his disciples were able to do for the Hammer of hereties that which the love of the people did for the Pather of the His legend has the two defects which so soon worry the readers of hagiographical writings, when the question is of the sainta whose worship the Church has commanded. It is occuralised with a spurious superanturalism, and with incidents borrowed right and left from earlier legends. The Italian people, who hailed in Francis the angel of all their hopes, and who showed hemselves so greedy for his relies, did not so much as dream of taking up the corpse of the founder of the Order of Preaching Priors, and allowed him to wait twelve years for the glories of canonization.)

¹ One preed of the elemently in which Dominic remained so long as Rome did not apollosedze blue, is that Jusquene do Yirry, who consecutes a whole chapter of his Historia Occidentalis to the Presching Friers (27, p. 333) does not even more the founder. This is the more significant since a few jurges faction on, the chapter given to the Brothers Miner is almost entirely filled with the person of St. Princis. This silence about St. Dominic has been remarked and taken up by Moschus, who fluds no way to explain it. Vide Filam J. do Fibriaco, at the head of the Donal edition of 1507.

We have already seen the efforts of Cardinal Ugolini to unite the two Orders, and the reasons he had for this course. He went to the Whitsambuy chapter-general which met at Portimenta (June 3, 1218), to which came also St. Dominie with several of his disciples. The coremonial of these solemnities appears to have been always about the same since 1216; the Brothers Minor would in procession to meet the cardinal, who immediately distance from his horse and havished expressions of affection upon them. An ultur was set up in the open air, at which he said mass, Francis performing the functions of descent.

It is easy to imagine the emotion which overcame those present when in its beautiful acting of the Umbrian landscape burst forth that part of the Pentecental service, that most exciting, the most appealyptic of the whole Catholic litargy, the author. Allelaia, Allelaia, Emitte Spiritum tuna et creabantur, et renerabis faciens terra. Allelaia, does not this include the whole Franciscan dream?

But what expecially unnized Dominic was the absence of material cares. Francia had advised his brethren not to disquiet themselves in any respect about food and drink; he know by experience that they might fearlessly trust all that to the toye of the neighboring population. This want of earefulness had greatly surprised Dominic, who thought it exaggerated; he was able to consume himself, when meal-time arrived, by seeing the inhabitants of the district lustening in crowds to bring far larger supplies of provisions than were meded for the several thousands of frincs, and tudding it as honor to wait upon them.

⁴ Francis, who died in 1926, is canonized in 1929; Anthony of Padau, 1931 and 1934; Elizabeth of Thurbugh, 1931 and 1935; Dominic, 1924 and 1934.

⁹ Il Suc. , 61,

³ Shod alread, Lord, thy Spirit, and all shall be created, and thou shall renew the face of the certic.

The joy of the Princiscion, the sympathy of the populace with them, the poverty of the lints of Portinnents, all this impressed him theply; so much was in moved by it that in a burst of outbusiasia he suncursed his resolution to embrace gospel poverty.

Ugolini, though also moved, even to tears, did not forget his former unxieties; the Order was too unmerous not to include a group of indeenteals; a few friers who before their conversion had studied in the universities began to condomn the extreme simplicity hid upon them as duty. To men no longer sustained by enthusiasm the short precepts of the Rule appeared a charter all too insufficient for a vast association; they turned with envy toward the monumental abbeys of the Benedictines, the regular Canons, the Cistercians, and toward the ancient monastic legislations. They had no difficulty in perceiving in Egolini a powerful ally, nor in confiding their observations to him.

The latter deemed the propitions moment arrived, and in a private conversation with Francis made a few suggestions: Ought he not give to his disciples, especially to the educated among them, a greater stars of the burdens? consult them, gain impiration from their views? was there not room to profit by the experience of the older orders? Though all this was said enauntly and with the greatest possible tact, Prancis felt himself wounded to the quick, and without answering he drow the cardinal to the very midst of the elapter.

¹² Cul., 3, 87; Spec., 1321c; Conform., 207a, 112a; Fior., 18. The bistorians of St. Dominde have not received these details kindly, but an incontestable point gained from diplomatic ducuments is that in 1218 Dominio, at Rome, presented privileges in which the properties of his Order were indicated, and that in 1220 be hed his friend to profess poverty.

^{*2} Col., 3, 9; Spec., 17a.

"My brothers," said he with fire, "the Lord has called me into the ways of simplicity and tunnility. In them he has shown me the truth for myself and for those who desire to believe and follow me; do not, then, come speaking to me of the Rule of St. Benedict, of St. Augustine, of St. Bernard, or of my other, but sotely of that which God in his mercy has seen the to show to me, and of which he has told me that he would, by its means, make a new coverant with the world, and he doen not will that we should have any other. But by your learning and your wisdom Cod will bring you to confusion. For I am persuaded that Cod will chustise you; whether you will ar no you will be forced to come to repentance, and nothing will remain for you but confusion."

This warmth in defending and affirming his idem profoundly astoniahed Ugolivi, who added not a word. As to Dominic, what he had jude seen at Portinnenta was to him a revolation. He fell, indeed, that his zeal for the Church could not be greater, but he also perceived that he could serve her with more success by certain changes in his weapons.

Ugolini no doubt only encouraged bind in thin view, and Dominic, beset with new unxietien, not out a few months later for Spain. The intensity of the crisis through which he passed has not been sufficiently not ticed; the religious writers recount at length his sejourn in the gretto of Segovia, but they see only the ascetie practices, the prayers, the genuflexions, and de not think of leoking for the cause of all this. From this epoch it might be said that he was nuceasingly occupied in copying Francis, if the word had not a somewhat displeasing sense. Arrived at Segovia he follows the example of the Brothers Minor, founds a hermitage in the outskirts of the city, hidden among the rocks which overlock the tewn, and thence he descends from time to time to preach to the people. The transformation in his mode of life was so evident that several of his companions rebelled and refused to follow him in the new way.

⁾ Speak, 40k; Tribut., Tokar. MB., 41k-12h; Speak, 288a; Conforme 125b L

Popular sentiment has at times its intuitiens; a legond grow up around this grotto of Sogovia, and it was said that St. Dominio there received the stigmata. Is there not here an unconscieus effort to translate into an image within the comprehension of all, that which actually took place in this eave of the Sierra da Guaderrama?

Thus St. Dominic also arrived at the povorty of the gospel, but the road by which he reached it was different indeed from that which St. Francis had followed; while the latter had seared to it as on wings, had seen in it the final emancipation from all the anxieties which debase this life, St. Dominic considered it only as a means; it was fer him one more weapon in the arsenal of the host charged with the defence of the Church. We must not see in this a mere vulgar calculation; his admiration for him whom he thus imitated and followed afar off was sincere and profeund, but genius is not to be copied. This sacred malady was not his; he has transmitted to his sens a sound and robust blood, thanks to which they have known nothing of these paroxysms of het fever, those lofty flights, these subten relatives which make the story of the Franciscions the story of the need tempesttossed society which the world has ever known, in which glarious empters are mingled with pages trivial und grakesque, sometimes oven course.

The principal sources are indicated in A. SS., Augusti, t. i., pp. 470 ff.

At the shapter of t248 Francia had other causes for sadness than the normors of a group of malconfents; the missionaries sout out the year before to Germany and Hungary had returned completely discouraged. The account of the sufferings they had endured produced so great an effect that from that time many of the frines added to their prayers the formula: "Lord preserve as from the hereny of the Lomburds and the force-ity of the Germans."

This explains how Ugotini at last authorided in convincing Francis of his duty to take the moreovery measures no longer to expose the friend to be hunted down as heroica. It was decided that at the end of the most chapter the missionaries should be arrured with a papal brief, which should serve them an occlesionation passport. Here is the translation of this document:

Hanglia, libbop, persons of the account of that, to the archibshaps, hiphops, absents, decemes, archibecture, and other recleobations annualizes, assume that the appetain therein)

Our dear and, brother Francis, and life conquestions of the life and the Order of the Briefhers Misor, boxing communed the vanishes of this world to shoose a made of life which has accepted the approval of the Roman Church, and to go out after the example of the Apostles to past by various regimes the most of the worl of God, we pasy and exhaut you by these apostedle latters to receive regard enthalise the friend of the mison months and mostly, bearers of these presents, warning you to be favorable to them and treat them with bindness for the home of God and out of combletation for on.

(Riven (at theth) this third day of the blen of June (June 11, 1219), in the third year of mor poullieste.

^{? (}Hord., 18), 11 Soc., 4일,

^{*} Sharulea, Rull. fr., t. 1, p. 2; Porthod, 6051; Wadding, dun. 1219.

It is evident that this lull was calculated to avoid awakening Trancis's susceptibilities. To understand precisely in what it differs from the first letters usually incredited to new Orders it is necessary to compare it with them; that which had instituted the Dominicans had been, like the others, a verilable privilege; here there is nothing of the kind.

The assembly which was equited at Whitsunday of 1219 (May 26) was of extreme importance. It closed the series of those primitive elapters in which the inspiration and famey of Francis were given from carrae. Phose which followed, presided over by the vicars, have neither the same cheerfulness nor the same charm; the errole glare of full day has driven away the lines of dawn and the indescribable arrives of nature at its awakening.

The summer of 1219 was the epoch fixed by Honorius III, for making a new effort in the East, and directing upon Egypt all the forcess of the Granders. Francis thought the moment arrived for realizing the project which he had not formable to excent oin 1213. Strangely enough, Ugolini who, two years before had hindered his going to France, now left him in entire liberty to earry out this new expedition. Several muthers have deemed that Francis, having found in him a true protector, folt

No. 28, indicates the works where the text may be found. Gf. A. 88, p. 880.

Pro tilla millelently Indicated the contents: Demonica point 8. Romani tolosani ejusqua fratribus, cos in protestimaem vecipit covunque Ordinem cum banis et privilegiis conflemat. Religiosem vitam: Documber 23, 1210; Promutt, U. I., 176, text in Horay 1, II., vol. 141-444.

^{*} Vide A. 88., pp. 608 ff. and 818 ff.

^{*} Vide Bull Multi divina of August B3, 1919. Heroy, t. III., ed. 124 Potthast, 6891.

Othe contradiction is sestriking that the Bollandists have made of it the principal argument for defending the error in their manuscript (1 Col., 76), and instaing in the face of, and against averything that Franols had taken that journey. A. 88, 407.

himself reassured as to the future of the Order; he might indeed have thought blus, but the history of the trembles which barst out immediately after his departure, the astemding story of the kind reception given by the court of Rame to some meddlers who look the opportunity of his absence to imperil his Order, would suffice to show how much the Church was emborrassed by him, and with what arder she longed for the transformation of his work. We shall find later on the delailed account of those facts.

The appears that a Roungnol brother Christopher was at this same chapter nominated provincial of Clascony; he lived there after the endown of the early Franciscans, working with his lamba, living in a narrow cell made of the laughs of trees and policy's earth.

Egidic sol onl for Tuniu with a few friers, but a great disappointment awaited them there; the Christians of this country, in the fear of being compromised by their missionary zeal, burried blum into a boat and constrained them to recross the sea.

If the date of 1219 for these two missions has little other basis than conjecture, the same is not the case as to the departure of the friend who went to Spain and Morocco. The discovery had recently been made of the account of their but preachings and of their tragge death, made by an eye-witness. This document is all the more precious because it confirms the general lines of the much longer account given by Mark of Lishon. It would be out of place to give a summary of it here, because it but very indirectly concerns the life of St. Francis, but we must note that these acta have beyond their historic value a truly remarkable psychological—one must almost say pathological—significance; never was the mania for martyrdom better characterized than in these long pages, where we see the frings forcing the Mahometrus to pursue them and make them win the horvenly palm. The forbearance which Miramedia as well as his fellow religionists at first show given an idea of the civilization and the good qualities of them intidels, all the higher that very different sentiments would be matural in the vanquished ones of the plains of Tolom.

⁴ Ho died at Cahera, October III, 1272. The legend is frough in M8, Riemardt, 270, f°. 68c. Incipit vita f. Christophork quana compilarit fr. thermardus do Bessa castadio Catarrensis: Quasi vas auxi solidam. Of Mark of Lisbon, t. II., pp. 100-113, t. III., p. 212, and Chasburger, An. fr., t. II., p. 14.

² A. 88., Aprilla, t. III., p. 224; Conform., 118h, 1; hda; Mack of Idabou, t. II., p. 1.—Brother Lake had been must to Constantinople, in 1249, at latent. Vido Constitutus of Theorember 9, 1220. Shacabu, Bull. fr., t. 1., p. 6; Potthast, 0491.

³ We own to M. Müller (Anfilinge, p. 207) the boner of this publication, employ from a manageript of the Cottonians.

This impossible to call by the name of normons the collections of rude uportrophes which the missionnries addressed to those when they wished to convert; at this paroxysm the thirst for martyrdom becomes the madness of snicide. Is this to say that frium Bermard, Pietro, Adjulus, Acenso, and Othe have no right to the admiration and worship with which they have been surrounded? Who would dare say no? In not devotion always blind? That a furrow identify be feemed it must have blood, it must have tears, such tearn an St. Augustine has called the blood of the soul. Alt, it is a great mintake to immolate eneself, for the blood of a single man will not save the world nor even a unition; but it is a still greater mistake not to immolate eneself, for then one lets others be lest, and is eneself lost that of all.

I greek you, therefore, Markyra of Morocco; you do not regret your undness, I am sure, and if ever some righteous pedant gone astray in the groves of paralise undertakes to domenstrate to you that it would have been better worth while to remain in your own country, and found a worthy family of virtuous laborers, I fancy that Miramalin, there because your best friend, will take the trouble to refute him.

You were road, but I envy such unchess, for you felt that the essential thing in this world is not to serve this ideal or blat one, but with all one's scort to serve the ideal which one has chosen.

Whom a few months after, the story of their glorious and arrived at Assisi, Francis discerned a feeling of pride material his companions and represented them in lively terms; he who would at have envied the lok of the martyrs felt himself humbled because God had not judged him worthy to share it. An the story was neingled with some words of rulogy of the founder of the Order, he forhade the further reading of it.

Jumediately after the chapter he had himself undertaken a mission of the same kind as he had coulided to the Brothers of Morocco, but he had presented in it in an entirely different number: his was not the blind zoul which courts death in a sort of frenzy and forgets all the rest; perhaps he already felt that the permiatent effort after the lector, the continual immediation of self for truth, is the martyrdam of the strong.

This expedition, which haded more than a year, is mentioned by the biographers in a few linen. Happily we have a number of other papers regarding it; but their silence suffices to prove the sinewity of the primitive Franciscan authors; if they had wanted to amplify the deeds of their subject, where could they have found an easier appartunity or a more marvellous theme? Francis quitted Fortiuments in the middle of dame and went to

CHord., B.

² I Col., 57; Box., 193 193; 154 and 456; 2 Col., 2, 24 Conformal 1935, 2; 114a, 2; Spec., 556; Flor., 24.

Ancona, whonce the Crusaders were to set sail for Egypt on St. John's Day (June 24th).

Many friers joined time a fact which was not without its inconveniences for a journey by sea, where they were obliged to depend upon the clarity of the owners of the boats, or of their fellow-travellers.

We can understand Francia's embarmssment or arriving at Ancona and finding himself obliged to leave hushind a number of those who no currectly longed to go with him. The Conformities relate here an incident for which we might desire an eartier authority, but which is certainly very like Francia; no led all his friends to the part and explained to them his perplexities. "The people of the best," he told them, "refuse to take us all, and I have not the courage to make choice among you; you might think that I do not love you all alike; let us then try to learn the will of Cod." And he called a child who was playing close by, and the little one, charmed to take the part of Providence put upon him, pointed out with his tager the cloves frians who were to set sail."

We do not know what itinerary they followed. A single incident of the journey has come down to us; that of the classification in the ide of Cypras on Brather Barbaro, who had been guilty of the fault which the master detected above all others—evil-speaking. If was implicable with regard to the looseness of language so castomary among pious folk, and which often made a hell of religious homes apparently the most peaceful. The offense this time appeared to him the more grave for laving been aftered in the presence of a stranger, a knight of that district. The latter was stapefied on hearing Francis command the guilty one to cat a lump of asc's damp which buy there, adding: "The month which has distilled the venous of lastred against my brother must cut this excrement." Such indignation, no less than the obedience of the unhappy offender, filled him with admiration."

[!] Conform., 1186, 2; ef. A. 88., p. 611.

It is very probable, so Wadding becomposed, that the missionaries deburked at St. Jenn d'Acre. They arrived there about the middle of Juty? In the environs of this city, doubtless, Brother Elies had been established for one or two years. Francis there told off a few of his companions, whom he cent to preach in diverse directions, and a few days afterward be bimself set out for Egypt, where all the effects of the Crusadera were concentrated upon Damieth.

From the first he was heart-broken with the moral condition of the Christian army. Notwithstanding the presence of unmerous prelates and of the apostolic legate, it was disorganized for want of discipline. He was so affected by this that when there was talk of bubble he felt it his duty to advise against it, predicting that the Christians would infallibly be heaten. Second haded him, and on August 29th the Crusaders, larving attacked the Saracem, were terribly routed.

The predictions were him a narrychous success. It must be owned that the ground was befor proposal thms my other to receive the new weed; not surely that picty was after there, but in this mass of men come tagether from every corner of Europe, the troubled, the sweet, the enlightened ones, those who this ted for right-commens and truth, were observed by rescale, adventurers, ¹² Cal., 3, 92 ; Epro., 306. Of, 2 Pel., 3, 115. Conform., 1926, 4, This faciliest may possibly have taken place on the return.

With the facilities of that period the veyinge required from twinty to thirty days. The distribute of a similar percent may be found in Hullhard Brillottes, Hist. Dipl., A. A., 199 BBA. 127, Rid., Johnson, p. 1008XXI.

U2 Col., 29; Hone 154, 186; of. A. 186, je 619.

those who were greedy for gold and plunder, capable of much good or much evil, the sport of fleeling impulses, loosed from the heads of the family, of property, of the habits which usually twine themselves about man's will, and only by exception permit a complete change in his manner of life; these among them who were sincere and had come there with generous purposes were, so to speak, prodestined to enter the peaceful army of the Brothers Minor. Prancia was to win in this mission fellow-laborers who would assure the meases of his work in the countries of northern Europe.

Ineques do Vitry, in a lotter to friends written a low days later, time describes the impression produced on him by Prancis:

of annuamme in you that Mester Royalar, Pelor of St. Michael, has autoral the Order of the Brothers Mhor, an Order which is multiplying capitily on all alder, because it indicted the prinditive Charde and fullows the Bre of the Apostlea la everything. The master of those Brothers is maned Brother Francia; he is an iovable that be is comerated by averyone. Having cases into our army, he has not book an afraid, in his zoal for the faith, to go in that of our anomales. For days together he annuamed the word of God to the Surnecus, but with little anneses; than the suitae, Klug of Egypt, asked that in secret to entreat that to reveal to the, by acase introde, which is the loot religion. Calin, the Englishman, our eleck, has entered the same Order, as also two others of our economical, Michael and 16m Motthew, to whom I had given the restardily of the Salate Chapalle. Canter and Benry have deducted manes, and still others whose annes I have forgetten.

The long and collinsinatic eluptor which the sum author gives to the Brothers Minor in his great work on the Oscident is too diffuse to find a phase here. It is a diving and account picture of the early times of the Order; in it Francis's section before the sulling is again related. It was written at a period when the francist had still neither mounsteries nor churches, and whon the chapters were hold once or twice a year; this gives us a date autorior to 1223, and probably even before 1221. We have here, therefore, a verification of the narratives of Thomas of Colano and the Three Companions, and they find in it their perfect confirmation.

¹ Jucquen de Vitry speaks only healtendally of Francis here in the midst of salutations; from the critical point of view this only enhances the value of his words. See the Study of the Sources, p. 428.

As to the interviews between Francis and the sulfan, it is prudent to keep to the narratives of Jacques du Vitry and William of Tyre.\(^1\) Although the latter wrate at a comparatively late date (between 1975 and 1995), he followed a truly historic method, and founded his work on authoric documents; we see that he knows no more than decques do Vitry of the proposal said to have been made by Francis to pass through a fire if the priests of Mahamel would do an much, intending so to catablish the superiority of Christinnity.

We know how little meli an appeal to signicia charactoristic of St. Francis. Perhaps the story, which comes from Bomwentura, is been of a miscomeption. The sultan, like a miw Plannoh, any have laid it upon the strange preacher to prove his miscion by miracles. However this may be, Francia and his companions were treated with great consideration, a fact the more meritorious that hostilities were then at their height.

Returned to the Grunding enup, they remained there until after the faking of Damietta (Nevember 5, 1219). This time the Christians were victorican, but perhaps the heart of the gespet man bled more for this vickery than for the defeat of August 25th. The aboveking condition of the city, which the victors found piled with heaps of dead hodies, the quarrelic over the during of body, the sale of the westeled creatures who had not succombed to the pestilence, all thems account of terror, ora-olty, greed, caused bim profound horror. The "luman boast" was let loose, the upostle's voice could no more make itself heard in the midst of the savage clamor than that of a life-saver over a raging ocean.

⁾ Vida below, the Sticly of the Housens, p. 480.

^{*} All this is related at beight by discusses do Vitry,

He set out for Syrin' and the Holy Places. How ghally would we follow him in this pilgrimage, accompany him in thought through Indea and Galilee, to Bethlehom, to Nazaroth, to Gethsemanel. What was said to him by the stable where the Son of Mary was born, the workshop where he toiled, the clive-tree where he accepted the bitter cap? Also I he decented a here suddenly fail us. Setting out from Dandetta very shortly after the siego (November 5, 1219) he may easily have been at Bethlehom by Christmus. But we know nothing, absolutely nothing, except that him sojourn was more prolonged than had been expected.

Some of the Brothers who were present at Porlimenta at the chapter-general of 1220 (Whilsumlay, May 17th) had time enough to go to Syria and still find Francis there; I they could hardly have arrived much earlier than the end of June. What had he been doing those eight months? Why had he not gone home to preside at the chapter? That he been ill? I that he been belated by some mission? Our information is too slight to permit us even to venture upon conjecture.

Angelo Chrono relates that the Sultan of Egypla

^{1 &}quot;Cil ham qui common l'entre den Frères Mineure, et el nom frère Français vint en l'est du Dandute, et list moult de bien, et donner taut que le ville l'ut prèse. Il vit le mai et le péché qui comença à craistre entre les gans de l'est, et il decedet, par quoi il c'en paril, et name pième mi Sarle, et puis c'en rala en mai pace." Historiens des Groinndes, il. L'Est de Erreles Empereur, Ilv. xxxii., chap. xv. Cf. Sannta : Secreta fid. erue., Ilic III., p. xi., eq. 8, in Bangais.

^{*} Official, Ohron., 11 44.

^{*}The episode of Reather Leconod's complithing related below, gives some probability to thin hypothesis.

touched by his preaching, gave command that he and all his friars should have free access to the Holy Sepulchre without the payment of any tribute.

Bartholomew of Pisa on his part says incidentally that Francis, having gone to preach in Antioch and its environs, the Benedictines of the Abbey of the Black Mountain, eight miles from that city, joined the Order in a body, and gave up all their property to the Patriarch.

These indications are mengre and isolated indeed, and the second is to be accepted only with reserve. On the other hand, we have detailed information of what went on in Italy during Francis's absonco. Brother Giordano's chronicle, recently discovered and published, throws all the light that could be desired upon a plot laid against Francis by the very persons whom he had commissioned to take his place at Portinneals, and this, if not with the comiyance of Rome and the cardinal protector, at least without their apposition. These events had indeed been marrated by Angelo Chirono, but the undiagnised feeling which broathes through all his writings and their lack of need racy had sufficed with cureful critics to leave them in doubt. How could it be supposed that in the very lifetime of St. Francis the views whom he had instituted could take advantage of his absence to overthrow his work? How could it be that the pope, who during this poriod was sajourning at Ricti, how that Ugolini, who was still nearer, did not impose pilence on these ugitators 7 "

Now that all the facts come amove to light, not in an

¹ Tribut., Vaur. M8., 0b. Of. 10b: Sepulero Domini visitato festinat ad Obristianorum terram.

Opon this monastery see a letter ad familiarers of Inequate to Vitry, written in 1216 and published in 1847 by Baron Inducedo St. Ganola in t. xiB. of the Mémoires de l'Académie royale des soiences et des beaute arts de Bruxelles (1849). Conform., 1006, 2; 114a, 2; Spec., 184.

A. SS., pp. 610-620, 848, 851, 608.

oratorical and impassioned account, but brief, precise, enting, dated, with every appearance of unless taken day by day, we must perforce yield to evidence.

Does this give us reason chancerously to condemn Hgolino and the pope? It do not think so. They played a part which is not to their honor, but their intentions were evidently excellent. If the function unphorism that the end justifies the means is criminal where one examines his own conduct, it becomes the first shalp in judging that of others. Here are the facts:

On July 25th, about one meath after Francis's departure for Syria, Dgolini, who was at Perugia, hid upon the Chrisses of Monticelli (Percuce), Siema, Perugia, and Lucea that which his friend land so obvinately refused for the friara, the Benedictine Rule.

At the same time, St. Dominie, returning from Spain full of now urder after his retreat in The grette of Segovia, and fully decided to adopt for his Order the rule of preverly, was strongly encouraged in this purpose and overwholmed with favors. Benerius 111, now in him the providential man of the time, the reference of the measuring Orders; he showed him anumual attentions, going no far, for example, as to transfer to him a group of meaks belonging to other Orders, whom he appointed to set as Dominic's lientements on the preaching term which he believed it to be his duty to undertake, and to serve, under his direction, an apprenticeship in popular preaching.

That Ugolini was the imporation of all this, the Indla

⁴ Vlda Bull Successivety of Decorder 9, 4210. Pf. there of Explorabir 19, 1223; Blumba, F., p. 3, 14 Pf.; Potthest, 6170, 68708, b. c.

⁴ Vido Pattland, 8165, 6177, 6191, 6100, 6214, 6217, 6219, 6229, 6246, 800 alm Charinarian Universitatis Perc. 3, 4, 497.

³ Bull Quia qui somiumet of May 12, 1220. Bipalli, Red. Procl., C.I., p. 10 (Cutthost, 6240).

are here to witness. His ruling purpose at that time was so clearly to direct the two new Orders that he chose a domicile with this and in view, and we find him continually either at Perugia. That is to my, within three leagues of Portinneula, or at Bologna, the stronghold of the Dominicans.

It now becomes manifest that just as the fraternity instituted by Francis was truly the fruit of his body, flesh of his flesh, so does the Order of the Preaching Friers emmate from the papacy, and St. Dominic is only its putative father. This character is expressed in one word by one of the most authoritative of contemporary annalists, flurchard of Uraperg (F-1226). "The pope," he says, "instituted and confirmed the Order of the Preachers."

Francis on his journey in the Orient land taken for special companion a frier whom we have not yet met, Pietro di Cataun or dei Cottani. Was he a native of the town of Cataua? There is no precise indication of it. It appears more probable that he belonged to the neble family dei Cattoni, already known to Francis, and of which Orlando, Count of Chinsi in Cascutino, who gave

Mon, Gerne, hist. Seript., 1, 22, p. 378. Thin passage he of extreme importance because it oriented in a few lines the coelected policy of Hamerica III. After speaking of the postar with which the Hamilian threatened the Claurab, Burdwell adds: Quan releas varrigere dominas papa wallness Predicatorna instituit et confirmacit. Now these Hamiliati were an approved Color. But Hamiliati, while classing them with heratical bouldethe Poor Mon of Lyans, expresses in a word the sentiments of the papary toward them; it had for them on invincible repagament, and not whiling to strike them directly it soughts adde besse, Stuther mation were followed with regard to the Brothers Miner, with that overplan of cantha which the production access of the Order haspland. It all beginns maches when in 1921 Brothers Elies beginn Francis's view, and expectably whou, after the latter's death, he had all the liberty manuscary for directing the Order wearefling to the views of Ugolini, now become tregory IX.

bim the Verm, was a member. However that may be, we must not conformal him with the Brother Pietro who assumed the habit in 1200, at the same time with Bernardo of Quintavalle, and died shortly afterward. Tradition, in reducing these two men to a single personage, was influenced not merely by the similarity of the mames, but also by the very matural desire to increase the prestign of one who in 1220–1221 was to play an important part in the direction of the Order.

At the time of his departure for the East Francis and left two vicure in his place, the Brothern Matter of Narmi and Gregorie of Naphus. The former was especially charged by remain at Portionents to admit postulants; a Gregorie of Naphus, on the other hand, was to pass through Italy to console the Brothers.

The two victors begun at once to overturn everything. It is inexplicable how men still under the influence of their first ferver for a Rule which in the plenitude of their liberty they had promised to obey could have dremmed of much innovations if they had not been urgud on and upheld by those in high places. To alleviate the year of poverty and to multiply observances were the two points toward which their efforts were head.

¹⁴ Col., 25; af. A. SS., p. 531. Photo ili Cotion land the libb of doctor of laws, Churd., 41; which centrely disagrees with what he colored of Brother Photo, 3 Soc., 23 and 29. Of. Boos, 28 and 29; Spec., 5h; Fior., 2; Conform., 47; 52b, 2; Petrus vir litteratus crat et nobilis, Glord., 12.

² We know nothing more of him exempt that after his death he had the gift of advantor. Gird , 11; Conform., 198, 1.

[&]quot;He was not an ordinary man; a rooma kaldo administrator and ordinary (Book, d), he was minister in France before 1224 and again in 1240, thanks to the zeal with which he had adopted the bless of Bridfor Blus. He was nephew of Gregory IX., which throws more light upon the practices which have just been described. After having been away in Elbain disgrace and conformed to prison for life, he become in the end library of Bayers. I note for those who take as interest in those things that manuscripts of two of his sermons may be found in the National Library of Park. The author of them being hallested shaply as fr. Or. min., It has only lately become known whose they were. These sermons were presented in Park on Hoty Thursday and Baturday. M8, now, seq., Lat., 338 C. 148, 159.

In appearance it was a trilling matter, in reality it was much, for it was the first acovement of the old spirit against the new. It was the effort of men who meansciously, I am willing to think, made religion an affair of rite and observance, instead of seeing in it, like St. Francia, the conquest of the liberty which makes as free in all things, and leads each soul to obey that divine and mysterious power which the flowers of the fields adore, which the birds of the air bless, which the symphony of the stars praises, and which desus of Nazaveth called Alba, that is he say, Father.

The first Rule was excessively simple in the matter of fasts. The frism were to abstrain from meat on Wednesdays and Fridays; they might add Mondays and Saturdays, but only on Francish special authorization. The views and their adherents complicated this rule in a surprising manner. At the chapter-general held in Francishs absence (May 17, 1920), they decided, first, that in times of feasting the friens were not to provide most, but if it were offered to them opentaneously they were to eat it; second, that all abould fast on Mondays as Wednesdays and Fridays; third, that on Mondays and Saturdays they should abstain from milk products unless by chance the atherents of the Order brought some to them.)

These beginnings bear witness also to an effort to initiate the ancient Orders, not without the vegue hope that they would be substituted for them. Brother Giordano has preserved to us only this decision of the chapter of 1220, but the expressions of which he makes not sufficiently prove that it was far from being the only one, and that the endcontents had desired, as in the chapters of Citeaux and Monte Cassine, to put forth veritable constitutions.

[!] Olard., 14. Of. Spec., 94b. Phir., 4; Conform., 184c, 1.

These modifications of the Rule did not pass, however, without arousing the indignation of a part of the chapter; a lay brother and a himself their enger messanger, and set out for the East to entreat Francis to return without delay, to take the measures called for by the circumstances.

There were also other causes of disquiet. Brother Philip a Zerdot of the Chrissen, had made haste to secure for them from Ugolini the privileges which had already been under consideration.

A sertain Brother Giovanni di Conpello² lind gathered together a great number of lepers of both sexes, nad written a Rule, intending to form with them a now Order. He lad afterward presended himself before the supreme pontiff with a train of these unfortunales to obtain his apprehalion.

Many other distressing symptoms, upon which Brather Giordano does not dwell, bud manifeded themselves. The report of Francis's death but even been spread abraid, so that the whole Order was disturbed, divided, and in the greatest peril. The dark presentiments which [!] Glord, 42. Cf. Ball Sucrements of December 9, 1219.

Y Glord., 12. Ought we, perhaps, to read di Campella Y Half way hotween Pullgua and Spedate there is a phase of this name. On the other hand, the il Sue., 35, Indicate the entrance into the Order of a Glovan-ni di Capella who in the legend became the Francheau Julia. Invent abasam capello et als jest denominatus est: abordine recedus factus leprosus laqueo at Judos se suspendit. Conform., 194a, 1. Of, Remard ds Resse, 195a (Spec., 24) Fior., 1. All this is much mixed up. Perhaps we should believe that Glovanal di Campello died shoully afterward, and that later on, when the clocket of this tradded line were forgotten, some lugarious Brother explained the note of lafamy uttached to ids money by a hypothesia fadit upon his name likeli.

Francis seems to have had were exceeded by the reality.¹ The messenger who brought him the sad news found him in Syria, probably at St. Jean d'Acre. He at once embarked with Elias, Pietro di Catana, Cæsar of Speyer, and a few others, and returned to Italy in a vessel bound for Venice, where he might easily arrive toward the end of July.

1 Giord., 12, 18, and 14.

OHAPPER XIV

THE CRISIS OF THE ORDER!

Autman, 1220

On his arrival in Venice Francis informed himself yel more exactly concerning all that had happened, and convoked the chapter-general at Pertinnents for Michaelmas (September 29, 1220).² The first care was doubtless to reasonre his sister-friend at St. Damian; a short fragment of a letter which has been preserved to as gives indication of the ead auxieties which filled his mind:

"I, little Brothec Franch, desire to follow the life and the poverty of Jenus Christ, our most high tord, and of ble most hely Mather, persevering therein until the end; and I beg you all and exhert you to persever always in this most hely life and poverty, and take good care never to depart from it upon the advice or teachings of any one whom-souver."

A long shout of joy sounded up and down all fluly when the news of his return was heard. Many zealous brethren were already deepniring, for persecutions tad began in many provinces; so when they learned that their spiritual father was alive and coming again to visit

Cillorda, 144, Tribala, 12 10,

Any other date is tempossible, since Francis in open chapter relicquished the direction of the Order in favor of Pietro di Calasar, who died March 16, 1821.

^{*}This too short fragment is found in § vi. of the Role of the Dandanies (August 9, 1258): Speculum, Mortu, Tract. III., 226b.

them their joy was unbounded. From Venice Francis went to Bologna. The journey was unrived by an incident which once more shows his acute and wise goodness. Worn out as much by emotion as by fatigue, he one day found hinself oldiged to give up finishing the journey on foot. Mounted upon un ass, he was going on his way, followed by Brother Leonard of Assisi, when a passing glance showed him what was passing in his companion's mind. "My relatives," the friar was thinking, "would have been far enough from associating with Bernardone, and yet here um 1, obliged to follow his son on foot."

We may judge of his astonishment when he heard Francis saying, as he heatily disacounted from his beast; "Here, take my place; it is most importly that thou shouldst follow me on foot, who art of a noble and powerful lineage," The nulmppy Leonard, much confused, throw himself at Francis's feet, begging for pardon.

Scarcely arrived at Bologan, Francis was obliged to proceed against those who had tocome backeliders. It will be remembered that the Order was intended by possess nothing, either directly or indirectly. The monustories given to the friers did not become their property; sa soon as the prequietor should desire to take them back or unyone also should wish to take possession of them, they were to be given up without the least registance; but on drawing near to Bologua he learned that a house was being built, which was already called The house of the Brothers. He communded its immediate evacuation, not oven excepting the nick who tappened to be there. The Brothers then resorted to Updini, who was then in that very city for the connecration of Santa Maria di Rheno. He explained to Francis at longth that this house did not belong to the Order; he had declared himself its propri-eter by public nels; and he succeeded in convincing bim.

Col., 2, 3; Roa., 162; of. Conform., 18th, 2, and 62b; 1.
 Signdia, Opera, t. III, ad. 226; of. Puttbast, 6516, and 6086.

Bologuese picty prepared for Francis on enthusinstic recoption, the celectof which has come down even to our times:

" t was atudying at Bologon, 1, Thomes of Spuleto, archibanum in the calledral aburab of that city, when in the year 1220, the day of the Agsumption, I saw St. Francis prescibling on the plazza of the Lesser Pulma, informalment every man in the elly. The theme of his discourse was the following: Angets, mon, the demons. The spoke on all these autoleads with so minth, whaleon and whopeoner that energy learned map who were there were titled with solution at the words of an plain a name Yet his had not the nonuner of a presider, blo ways were rather these of mogramation; the authorance of his elberousar hore especially upon the abidishus of condition and the accessity of making peacatal alluming The appared was paid, the person to on respect imposing, like face not at all humbarnes but that gave much great eithenry to like words that he branglet back to posen and hormory ones, aribber whose eavings freey had ant even atopped about before the chedding of block. So great a degre tion was folt for him that men and women theked after him, and ha extended blanck happy who anceceded in touching the hom of his garmont, "

Was it at this time that the celebrated Accurse the Glosswrist, chief of that functus dynasty of jurisconsulls who ituring the whole thirteenth century shed history upon the University of Bologue, webconed the Brethers Minor to his villa at Rieardina, near the city? We do not know.

It appears that another professor, Nicolas dei Pepali, also outered the Order. Suturally the pupils did not lag behind, and a certain manher asked to receive the habit. Yet all this constituted a danger; this city, which in Italy was as an alter consecrated to the science of law, ^{*9} Cal., 9, 4; Spec., 11n; Tribut, 196; Conform., 1996; 9.

² Dhal Di 1999. Of. Mazzotti, Repertorio di tutti i professori di Bokogna, Balagani, 1847, p. 11.

⁸ Bon Mon. Cherm. hist. Biriph., 1 29, p. 635, and the indes.

¹ WmbHog, ann. 1920 no. 0 Cf. A. 88., p. 328.

was destined to exercise upon the evolution of the Order the same influence as Paris; the Brothers Miner could no more hold aloof from it then they could keep aloof from the ambient air.

Thicking Francis remained here but a very short time. An ancient tradition, of which his biographers have not preserved any trace, but which nevertheless appears to be entirely probable, may that Ugolini took him to pass a mouth in the Camaldeli, in the retreat formerly inhabited by St. Romald in the midst of the Camadim forest, one of the undded in Europe, within a few hours walk of the Verm, whose manned rises up gigantic, nyorlooking the whole country.

We know how much Francis needed repose. There is an doubt that he also longed for a period of mulitation in order to decide carefully in salvance again his lim of conducts in the midst of the durk conjectures, which had called him home. The desire to give him the unaliunreled rest was only a anleastimate parpose with Ugolink The moment for vigorous action appeared to him to have come. We can ensity picture his respondente Francis's nomphints. Had be not been acritately advised to goofit by the counsels of the part, by the experience of thuse founders of Orders who have been not only mints but skilful leaders of men? Was not Upolini himself his best friend, his been defender, and yet had not Francia foread him to by mide the influence to which his laye for the frims, his position in the Church, and his greak ago gave him meh jud title? Yes, he had toen forced to lower Francis to needlessly expose his disciples to all norts of ilanger, to soul them on inbadona as parilons as they had proved to be ineffectively and all for what? For the most trivial point of honor, became the Brothers Minor were determined not to enjoy the similest privileges. They were not bereties, but they disturbed the Church as much as the herotics did. How many times had he not been reminded that a great association, in order to exist, must have precise and detailed regulations? It load all been labor lost! Of course Trancis's humility was doubted by no one, but why not manifest it, not only in coatomo and moment of living, but in all his nels? He thought himself obeying God in defending his own inspiration, but does not the Church speak in the name of God? Are not the words of her representatives the words of Josia forever perpetuated in earth? Ho desired to be a man of the Gorgel, an apostolic man, but was not the best way of becoming such to obey the Roman pontill, the successor of Peter? With an excess of condescension they had let him go on in his own way, and the count was the sadded of lesson. But the situation was not despeode, there was still time to find a remedy; to do that he lad only to throw hinself at the feet of the pope, imploring his bleasing, his light; and his counsel.

Reproaches such as these, mitgled with professions of love and admiration on the part of the prelate, could not but professedly disturb a semistive locat like that of Francis. His conscience born him good witness, but with the modesty of noble mimbe be was really enough to think that he might have made many mistakes.

Perhaps this is the place to ask what was the secret of the friendship of these two men, so little known to one another on certain sides. How could it last without a shadow flown to the very death of Francis, when we always find Ugolini the very send of the group who are compromising the Franciscan ideal? No answer to this question is possible. The same problem presents itself with regard to Brother Elias, and we are no better able to find a salisfactory answer. Men of loving limits soldom have a perfectly clear intelligence. They often become fuscinded by men the most different from themselves, in whose breasts they feel none of those femining weaknesses, those strange dreams, that almost sickly pity for creatures and things, that mysterious thirst for pain which is at once their own tappiness and their forment.

The sojourn of Cumuldeli was prolonged until the middle of September, and it ended to the cardinal's satisfaction. Francia had decided to go directly to the pope, then at Orvieta, with the request that Ogolini should be given him an efficient protector intrusted with the direction of the Order.

A dream which he had once had recurred to his menarcy; he had seen a little black her which, in spite of her officts, was mit able to speed her wings over her while brood. The poor her was himself, the chickens were the frieze. This dream was a providential indication communiting him to seek for them a medier under whose wings they rould all find a place, and who could defend thou against the birds of prey. At least so he flought?

His repaired to Orvieto without taking Assist in his way, sine if he went there he would be obliged to lake some measures against the functions of disturbance; he now proposed to refer everything directly to the pops.

Does his prefound lumility, with the feeling of entpability which Ugolini had awakened in him, suffice to explain his attitude with regard to the pope, or must we suppose that he had a vague Hought of abdicating? What knows whether conscience was not already unrunning a reproach, and allowing him how trivint were all the suphisms which had been wever around him?

Ond daring to premate bloomly in the squatmentary magnest a prime, harmonished butside before the dear, patiently walting till the populational mane but. When he appeared Bt. Francis made a coverance and sality

*Futher Pupe, may God give you pence.' May God bless you, my son, replied he. 'My lord,' then cold St. Franch to him, 'you are great and offen absorbed by great affaire; poor frime cannot come and talk with you as often as they need to do; you love given un many popus; give men single one to whom I may address myself when need means, and who will indee in your atend, and thereis my affairs and those of the Order,' 'When do you wish I about give you, my sen?' 'The Blanq of thata.' And he gave lete to him."

Conferences with Ugolini now began again; he immediately accorded Francia nome annuals; the privilegal granted the Chrisses was revoked; Giovanni di Conpello was informed that he had nothing to hope from the carit, and last of all leave was given to Francia himself to compose the Rule of him Order. Naturally he was not spared connect on the multipert, but there was one point upon which the caris could not brook deby, and of which it exacted he immediate application—the obligation of a year's movitiate for the postulants.

At the annotine a full was based not morely for the sake of publishing this reclimace, but especially to mark in a selemn nanner the commencement of a new era in the relations of the Church and the Franciscus, The fraternity of the Unitrian Penilouls Incano an Order in the strictest sense of the word.

Homerlan, libding, servant of the servante of God, to Brother Francis and the station priors or enstoder of the Brothers Misor, greeting and the speadable tenedletter.

In noarly all religious Orders it has been whely ordefied that these who present themselves with the purpose of abserving the regular life shall make trial of it for a certain thee, during which they also shall he tested, in order to beave neither place nor protext for inconsiderate steps. For these reasons we community on by these presents in admit as one to make profession until after one year of nevitlate; we forlig that after profession any trother shall leave the trider, and that any one shall take back again that who has gone out from it. We shall for ldd that there were tray your haldt stodd einenlate here and there without ideolfonce, lest the parity of your poverty be corrupted. If any frime have had this and wity, you will halbet upon them coalistastical consider milicropentation.

³ Glord., 14; of, 3 Col., 1, 17; Spec., 192; 3 Sec., 58 and 63.

It is surely only by a very decided euplemism that much a bull can be considered in the light of a privilege, It was in reality the laying of the strong hand of the pagacy upon the Brothers Minor.

From this time, in the very auture of things it became impossible for Francis to remain minister-general. Ho felt it himself. Heart broken, soul sield, he would fain, in spile of all, have found in the energy of his love those would, those planess which up to this time had laken the planes of take accountitution, giving to his earliest companions the intuition of what they ought to do and the strength to accomplish it; but an administrator was much at the least of this family which he middenly found to be an different from what it had been a few years before, and he easily acknowledged that he himself was not in the slightest degree such a person.

Ah, in his own conscience he well knew that the old ideal was the true, the right one; but he drove away such thoughts as the temptations of pride. The recent exents had not taken place without in some degree workening his moral personality; from being continually talked to about idealistics, submission, lumility, a cerbin also quity had come over this luminous soul; inspiration no longer same to it with the certainty of other days;

Venezistindam. The original to at Acidst with Inform upud lighen Veteron X. Keil, Oct. p.151 model introduction (Supplember 22, 1920). It is therefore by an order that Maraba and Washing make it date from Viterba, which is the less explicable that all the ladie of this epoch are detected from Urviete. Washing, and 1920, 54; Sharaba, vol. 549, 64 Political, 1956.

^{*2.441.0.110} Physilia, Arker, V., 24 Sprin, 204 50; 100b; Conferm., 1995, 2., 1495, 2.

the prophet had begun to waver, almost to doubt of himsolf and of his mission. Auxiously he nonrehed himself to see if in the leginning of his work there had not been some vain self-complacency. He pictured to himself heferehand the charter which he was about to open, the attack, the criticiness of which it would be the oldest, and lalared to convince binacelf that if he did not and me them with joy he was not a true Brother Minord The nullest virtues are subject to accupied, that of perfeet humility more than any other, and thus it is that excollect mon religiously betray their own convictions to avaid assorting themselven. He resolved then to just the direction of the Order into the hands of Pietro di Catana. It is evident that there was nothing apentaneous in this decision, and the fact that this brother were declar of laws and belonged to the nobility squarely argues the transformation of the Franciscan inclitate.

It is not known whother or not Ugolini was present at the chapter of September 29, 1220, but if he was not there in person he was assuredly represented by seems prolate, charged to watch over the debates? "Pure hull which had been issued a week before was communicated to the frians, to when Prancia also are manifed that he was about to clalarate a new Rules. With reference to this matter there were conferenced in which the ministers alone appear to have had a deliberative voice. At these conferences the essential points of the new Rule were settled us to principle, leaving to Francis the care of giving them proper form at his leisure. Nothing better reveals the demoralized state into which he had fullen than the decision which was taken to drop out one of the essential passages of the old Rule, one of his three fun-

¹² Cal., 8, 83; Bou. '17. One should read this assumet in the Conforms according to the Antiques Legenda, 142s, 2; Ws. 1; Spec., 43b.

^{*} Tribul. Laur. Mr., 12b; Magt. MS., 71b.

•
1
,
1
ı
1 ı E
 !
- -
: :
1

nothing is more interest, since Princis remained at Tortimenta to complete the task confided to him, living there surrounded with brothern who later on would recall to mind all the incidents of which they were wiknesses. Some of them reveal the conflict of which his soul was the arena. Desirous of allowing himself submissive, he nevertheless found thinself tormented by the desire to shake off his chains and thy away as in fermer days, to live and breathe in Contribute. The following artless record deserves, it seems to me, to be better known.

Our day a mayice who could road the poolter, though not without diffiguilty, abitulised from the intuistor general that between, from the vieur of St. Princets permission to have one. But as he lad bearied that St. Francis desired the fuethren to be covehers weither for learning our for lanka, he would not take his positor without life consent. Bo, St. Praythe linving some to the momentary where the newless was, "Pathier," add hig "It would be a great consolition to lawar pointer; but though the minister-general loss entherized me to get $1.1 would not have it nakuswa to you," " Look at the Emporor Charles," repilled St. Prancis with the, "Reland, and Oliver and all the paladim, valorous hornes and galbank kulghby, who galand their famous victories in lighting infidals, in fulling and belowing even unto death). The hely martyra, they about hive chosen in die in the midde of buttle for the fulth of Christ I that may there are many of those who gaples he medic bonner and glory simply by relating their feats. Yes, usuing as also there are many who expect to receive glory and honor by reciting and preaching the works of the sainty, we if they had done there themselves!"

. . . A few days after, 31. Francis one atting before the fire, and the unvise drew near to speak to bite anew alant his peaker.

"When you have come position," aski Franch to him, "you will want a breeking, and when you have a breeking you will cont yourself in a might like a great prolate and will becken to your comparison," Bring me my breeking !"

St. Francis said this with great vivacity, then taking upcome ashes he scattered them error the head of the novles, repenting, "There is the browlary, there is the breeface!"

Suvered they ander, St. Francis belog at Portingents and walking up and down on the readelde met for from his cell, the same Brother come again to uponk to him about his pealter. "Very well, go mi" said Francis to him," you have only to do what your inflictor tells you." At those words the newtoo went toray, but Francis began to rether on what he had said, not modernly calling to the friar, he crimi," Wait for met walt for met." When he had cought up to him, "Retrace your steps a little way, I her you," he caid. "Where went when I tall you to do whatever your minister told you as to the pealter?" Then falling upon his knows in the spot polated out by the frier, he prostrated himself at his feet: "Pardon, my landber, pardon!" he cited, "for he who would in Brother Minor ought to have nothing but his abiliting."

⁴ Spec., Mer. Arbor. 11, 31; Conform., 170a, 4; 2; Cal., 8, 124. Of Obserted, Arabir., 61, 195-75 and 477.

This long story is not morely previous became it shows us, even to the mullest particular, the conflict between the Francia of the early years, looking only to (test and his conscience, and the Francia of 1220, become a submissive monk in an Order approved by the Roman Church, but also because it is one of those infrequent narratives where his method shows itself with its artless realism. These alluminar to the talest of chivalry, and this freedom of manner which made a part of his ancess with the messes, were climinated from the legend with an incredible rapidity. His opiritual sams were perhaps not ashamed of their father is this matter, but they were so beat upon bringing out his other qualities that they forget a little the nucle the post, the troubulour, the joundator Domini.

Cortain fragments, later than Thomas of Colano by more than a contary, which relate some incidents of this kind, hear for that very remon the stamp of authoritisity.

It is difficult enough to ascertain precisely what purt Francis still took in the direction of the Order. Pietro di Catana and later Brother Elias are acmetimes called ministers-general, acusotimes vicara; the two terms often occur successively, as in the preceding narrative. It is very probable that this confusion of terms corresponds to a like confusion of facts. Perhaps it was even intertional. After the chapter of September, 1220, the uffairs of the Order pass into the hands of him whom Francis had called minister-general, though the friars as well as the papacy gave him only the title of view. It was essential for the popularity of the Brothers Minor that Francis should preserve an appearance of authority, but the reality of government had slipped from his hands.

The ideal which he had horne in his body until 1209 and had then given birth lo in anguish, was now taking its flight, like those some of our loins whom we see suddenly leaving me without our being able to help it, since that is life, yet not without a reading of our vitahe. Mater dotorose I. Ah, no doubt they will come back again, and sent themselves piously beside as at the paternal hearth; perhaps even, in some hour of moral distress, they will feel the need of laking refuge in their mother's arms as in the old days; but these fleeting returns, with their foverish limite, only reopen the wounds of the poor parents, when they see leave the children haden to depart agains they who bear their mane but belong to them no longer.

CHAPTER XV

THE RIGHT OF 1990

Tur winter of 1220 1221 was spent by Francis chiefly in fixing his thought by writing. Hutil now he had been too much the man of action to have been able to give much thought to mything but the living word, but from this time his exhausted forces compelled him to satisfy his longing for nonla by nome other means than evangel-We have men that the chapter of Soptomizing tongs.

UPoxt in Firmamentum, 104 Spect 1694 Spect, Modin. Pract 146, 26. M. Millior (Anglinge) becaused a starty of the Rule of 1991 which is a unastorphoco of recyclical secol. Neverthodose & he had more encofully endlated the different toxts be would have needed at dill more striking rosulto, thanku to the variouts which he would have been able to enable Laita a single example.

Text Brm. Wielding integred by [Mr. M.

Onnex fratics adjeaning and idfrequentia multerum et auttas cam vis consilictur solas, Baccrdos ha neste hyvatur ovus eis danda pen itration eel aliud spicitaale coo adium.

Text of the Speculum, 189 ff.

Corner fratees ablemagne and et radual, corrent sild or male risa et condunt careant se a male cisa et frementia muliscom et nullus sam cis concilictur and per ciona vadat silus unt ad accusam in ana parapaide connected, (11) Succeeded honests to-Unitator rum cir danita . . . etc.

This passage is anticlent to show the experiently of the text of the Speenland, which is to be preferred also by other respects, but this is not the place for entering into these stetule. It is evident that the phraso in which we see the conflect frizes constinue charing the repust of the slater and eating from their possinger is not a later interpolation ber 29, 1220, on one side, and the bull Cum secondum on the other, had fixed in advance a certain number of points. For the rest, complete liberty had been given him, not indeed to unker a final and mechangeable statement of his ideas, but to set them forth. The substance of legislative power had passed into the hands of the ministers.

That which we call the Rule of 1221 is, then, nothing more than a proposed law, submitted to a representative government at its parliament. The head of authority will one day give it to the world, so thoroughly modified and altered that Propeis's name at the head of such a document will give but small promise, and quite indirectly, that it will contain his personal opinion.

Nover were mun less expubby of backing a Rule blan Francis. In reality, that of 1240 and the one which the paper solemuly approved in November 29, 1223, had fibble in common except blue paper. In the fermer all is alive, from spoulaneous; it is a point of departure, an inspiration; it may be somewed up in two phranes: the appear of Jesus to man, "Come, follow me," the ack of non, "He left all and followed him." To the rall of divine love man raption by the joyful gift of himself, and that quite naturally, by a sort of instinct. At this height of mysticism any regulation is not only usedess, it is almost a profunction; at the very least it is the symptom of a doubt. Even in curtbly lever, when people truly love such other nothing it asked, nothing promised.

The Rule of 1223, on the otter hand, is a reciprocal control. On the divine side the call has become a community on the human, the free impulse of love has became as not of submission, by which life eternal will be carned.

At the bottom of it all is the antinome of law and love. Under the reign of law we are the mercenaries of God, hound down to an irloome task, but paid a hundred-fold, and with an indisputable right to our wages.

⁹ Tribute, 126 ; Spec., 646 ; Arbor, V., 3 ; Spec., 86.

Under the rule of love we are the sons of God, and coworkers with tim; we give ourselver to him without bargaining and without expectation; we follow Jesus, not because this is well, but because we can do no otherwise, because we feel that he has loved as and we love lim in our turn. An inward thane draws us irresistibly toward him: Et Spiritus et Sponsa dieunt: Veni.

It is necessary to dwell a little on the antithesis between these two Rutes. That of 1210 alone is Iruly Franciscan; that of 1223 is indirectly the work of the Church, endeavoring to assimilate with becault the new movement, which with one touch also transforms and turns wholly from its original purpose.

That of 1221 murks an intermediate stage. It is the clash of two principles, or rather of two spirits; they approach, they touch, but they are not merged in one mather; here and there is a mixture, but newhers combination; we can reparate the divers elements without difficulty. Their condition is the exact reflection of what was going on in Franciscs soul, and of the rapid evolution of the Order.

To aid him in his work Francis joined to himself Brother Count of Spoyer, who would be especially useful to him by him profound acquaintance with the succed fixed.

While strikes no first, on glancing over this Rule of 1221, is its extraordinary length; it ecovers not less than len folio pages, while that of 1223 has no more than three. Take away from it the passages which enamate from the pages and those which were fixed at the provious chapter, you will hardly have chartened it by a column; what remains is not a Rule, but a series of impassioned appeals, in which the father's heart speaks, not to command but to convince, to touch, to awaken in his children the instinct of love.

It is all chaotic and even contradictory, without order, a medley of outbursts of joy and bitter sobs, of hopes and regrets. Thoro are passages in which the passion of the soul speaks in every possible tone, runs over the whole gamut from the softest note to the most masculine, from those which are as joyous and inspiring as the blast of a clarien, to those which are agitated, stiffed, like a voice from beyond the touch.

"By the hely love which is lu God, I pray all the friars, ministers as well as others, to put aside every obstacle, every care, every auxiety, that they may be able to conscerate themselves entirely to serve, love, and hence the Lord God, with a pure heart and a sincere purpose, which is what he asks above all things. Let us have always in ourselves a tabernacle and a home for him who is the Lord God most mighty, Father, Son, and Hely Spirit, who says, 'Watch and pray always, that you may be found worthy to escape all the things which will come to pass, and to appear upright before the Son of man.'

"Let us then keep in the true way, the life, the truth, and the hely Gospel of Him who has deigned for our sake to leave his Father that he may manifest his name to us, saying, 'Father, I have manifosted thy name to those whom then hast given me, and the words which thon hast given me I have given also unto them. They have received them, and they have known that I am come from thee, and they believe that then hast sent me. I pray for them; I pray not for the world, but for those whom thou hast given me, that they may be one as we are one. I have said these things, being still in the world, that they may have joy in themselves. I have given them thy words, and the world hath hated them, because they are not of the world. I pray not that thou shouldst take them out of the world, but that then wilt keep them from the ovil. Sanetlfy them through the truth; thy word is truth. As then hast sent me into the world I have also sent them into the world, and for their sake I sanotify myself that they may themselves be sanctified in the truth; and neither pray I for these alone, but for all those who shall believe on me through their words, that we all may be one, and that the world may knew that thou hast sent me, and that thou lovest them as then hast leved me. I have made known some them thy rame, that the toys wherewith those hast layed me may be in them and I in them."

¹ Of, cap. 17 and 21,

PRAYER

Almighty, most high and sovereign God, buty Pattier, rightness hard, King of heaven and earth, we give thee thurder for thin own make, in that by they holy will, and by thine only Son and the Hule Spirit then best erested all things spiritual and corpored, and that after having made us in thine image and after thy Morness, than didn't place us in that paracless which we lost by our sine. And magive these thanks because after having executed us by thy four, by that here which is thing and which then best had for my then lest made him to be here year God and vory man of the glorious and libered Mary, over Virgin, and beganso by his cross, his blood, and life death throu hast willing to canoning to poor captives. And we give the climate that the Sou is to roturn in this glorious nealesty to send to elected the the neutrical mass. those who have not repented and have not known thou; and home to those who have lanewn and adored their and served there by remainning, Come, ye bleed of my Father, laborit the kinglein proporal for you from before the foundation of the world. And storn will wrotehol and shiful, no not worthy to name thou, we hundly ask our Laurd Joseph Childer they well bedoes defen, by a horn thou sat well ploased. that he may give thee thanks for everything; and abor the Haly Spirit, the Caraclete, at it may please there and them; for this we supplieato blu who has all power with thee, and by whom then hashdone unth great things for me. Allehde

"And we pray the glorious Mather, the blossed Mary, over Virgin, 8t. Michael, Galariel, Raphaet, and all the chefr of blossed Spirita, Southin, Cherubia, Thrones, Demarkors, Principalities and Powers, Virtues and Angels, Archaegels, John the Baptist, John the Evangelist, Peter, Paul, and the hely Patriocche, the Prophets, the Huly Innoculs, Apastles, Evangelist, Disciples, Martyrs, Confessors, Virgins, that blossed mass, Elljah and Enach, and all the salars of he have been such that for these things, as it pleases there, severely a two, eternal and living that and also to the Mon, our most hely berd Jesus Christ, and to the Hely Spirit, the Comforter, forever and ever, Amen, Alfelia.

O And we supplieste all those who desire to nerve the Lord Gul, in the beson of the Calbelle and Apostolic Church, all priorie, downers, sub-descens, undyles and exercists, readers, perfects, oil clocks, all moules and mine, all children and little color, paupers and exites, kings, and princes, workness and biboners, so vants and masters, the virgins, the continent and the married, bales, men and vicence, all children youther, men and old men, the sick and the well, the small and the grout, the peoples of overy tribe and longue and unthen, all man in every part of the world whatsoever, who are or who shall be, we pray and beseech them, all we Brothers Minor, unprofitable servants, that all together, with one neveral we persevere in the true faith and in panitemee, for outside of these no person can be seven.

is lost our all, with all our loors and all our thought, and all constrought, and all our inted, with all our vigor, with all our officel, with all our affection, with all our inward powers, our dedies, and our willing have the Lord Cool, who less given be as all ide body, all like soul, all like His, and utill given them every day to each one of na. He arented no. ho sayed noticy the grace alone; too has been, be shift to, full of goodnow to us, us wheleof and worthloss, corrupt and offoredye, ungrateful, ignorant, bud. We deadro nothing clos, we wish for nothing close; may nathing the please un, or laye any attraction for un, except the Croular, the Ruteomor, the Saviour, rule and true Chol, who is full of greatment which all goodness, who lethe true and imprenie good, who alone is kind, niano, and morriful, graciona, aweet, and gentle, who alone is haly, righteram, true, apright, who alone her benightly, impresses, and jourily ; of whom, by whom, and in whom built the puston, all the grane, all the glory of all perillouls, of all the righteens and all the saluta who ura rejulaing ta loagea.

Offine lot mething again binder, bet nothing again separate, autiling again return in, and may we all, so long as we live, in every place, at every hour, at every time, every day and uncensingly, truly and hamily believe. Let us have in our longist, let us tove, above, along, acree, praisa, bloss, glorify, exult, magnify, thank the most high, according obtain that, Trinity and Dody, Father, Son, and Holy Spiril, Greater of all men, both of those who believe and hope in him and at those who level to the most him and an unfailed and invisible, incitable, incomprehensible, influencentible, blossed, landed, glariom, exalled, antilline, nost high, awest, levely, debetable, and always warthy of being desiral above all things, in all the agent of ages.

Have not these arthus repelitions a mysterious charm which atoms deliciously into the very depths of the heart? Is there not in them a nort of surrament of which the words are only the rule vehicle? Francis is taking rulinge in (ind, so the child throws itself upon its mother's bosom, and in the incoherence of its weakness and its joy stammers out all the words it knows, repeating by them all only the eternal "Lancthine" of love and faith.

There is in them also comething which recalls, not only by citations, but still more by the very inspiration of the thought, that which we call the succeeded prayer of Christ. The apostle of poverty appears here as if suspended between earth and heaven by the very strength of his love, consecrated the priest of a new worship by the inward and irresistible unction of the Spirit. He does not offer enerifice like the priest of the past time; he meritical himself, and carries in his body all the woos of humanity.

The more beautiful are these words from the mystical point of view, the less do they correspond with what is expected in a Rule; they have neither the precision nor the brief and imperative forms of one. The transformations which they were to umbergo in order to become the code of 1223 were therefore fatal when we consider the definitive intervention of the Church of Rome to direct the Franciscan movement.

It is probable that this rough draft of a Rule, such as we have it now, is that which was distributed in the chapter of Whitmuchy, 1991. The variants, sometimes capital, which are found in the different texts, can be nothing other than outlines of the corrections proposed by the provincial ministers. Once admit the idea of considering this document as a rough draft, we are very some brought to think that it had already undergone a rapid preliminary revision, a next of pruning, in which ecolosiustical authority has caused to disappear all that was in flagrant contradiction with its own projects for the Order.

If it is asked, who could have under these curtailments, one bame springs at once to our lips. Updini. The criticised its exaggerated propartions, its want of unity and pracision. Tator on it is related that Prancia had seen in a dream a multitude of stacying friars, and himself unable to satisfy their wants, because though all around him by immuorable crumbs of bread, they disappeared hetween his tingers when he would give them to those about him. Then a voice from beaven said to him; "Francis, make of these crumbs a water; with that then stuff food these starving ones."

There is little hazard in assuming that this is the pisturesque echo of the conferences which took place at this time between Francis and the cardinal; the labter might have suggested to him by such a comparison the assential defects of his project. All this, no doubt, book place during termeists may in Rome, in the beginning of 1221.

Before going there, we must east a glunce over the similarity in imperation and even in style which allies the Rule of 1221 with another of St. Francis's works, that which is known under the title of The Admonitions. This is a series of spiritual counsels with regard to the religious life; it is closely united both in matter und form with the work which we have jud examined. The term of voice is so perfectly the name that one is temptal to see in it parts of the original draft of the Rule, separated from it as too profix to find place in a Rule.

However it may be with this hypothesis, we find in The Asimonitions all the anxieties with which the soul of Francis was assoiled in this uncertain and troubled hour. Some of these connects sound like hits from a private journal. We see him making, with the simplicity of parfect lumility, for reasons for admitting himself, remaining his ideas, and not quite meconding in finding them. He repeats to himself the exhertations that others had given him; we feel the offert to understand and admire the ideal mork whom $U_{\rm R}$ ofini and the Church have proposed to bim for an example :

¹² Oct., 8, 130.

^{*}Son below, p. 1154, text to the Frimanentina, 19 ff.; Speakins, Morin, truct, III., 21-ia ff.; of. Conform., 197 ff.

The hard mays in the Grapola: "He who does not give up all that he buseranust his my disciple. And he who would have his life dult loss it." One gives up all he precesses and beser his life when he gives himself entirely but the hands at the superior, to aboy lune. . . . And when the larger trings which would be botter or much usuful to ble soul that those which the superior remaineds him, let him after be that the marrithm of him with.

Reading this one night think that Francia was about to join the ranks of those to whom aubmission to each singuished authority is the very essence of religion. But no; even here his true feeling is not wholly efficied, he mingles his words with parentheses and illustrations, timid, indeed, but revealing his despest thought; always ending by enthroning the individual conscience an judge of hist report.

All this shows clearly enough that we must picture to ourside a moments when his wounded sout sight after possive abedience, the formula of which, periode accombiner, good apparently unch forther back than the Company of Jesus. These were moments of exhaustion, when inspiration was sitent.

One day be was sitting with the companions, where he began to great and may: "There is basely a much open each who perfectly along his superfust." His companions, much actualshed, said: "Explain to me, fulface, what in perfect and appears about tome." Then, companing him who alongs to a corpor, he replied: "Take a deed budy, and pull it where you will, it will make no constance; when it is in one place it will not auromate, when you take it away from there it will not abject;

A Chim facil (subditus) voluntatem (probati) divioundo benefacil vera obedientia est. Admin., M.; Conferm., 1986, 2 - la vero probatus subdito aliquid contra animum pracipiet livet ex non obediet termen ipsum non dimittat., 1964. Nullus tenetur nel obedientiam in en abl vonanittitur delictum vel peccutum. Epist., 3.

put it in a pulpit, it will not look up but down; weap it in purple, it will only be doubly pulse. $^{\rm PP}$

This lenging for corpse-tike abedience witnesses to the ravages with which his soul find been full waste; it corresponds in the moral domain to the cry for annihilation of great physical augusts.

The worst was that he was alcoholy alone. Everywhere else the Pranciscan obedience in living, active, joyful.

He drank this cup to the very dregs, helding sacred the revolts dictated by conneience. One day in the later years of his life a Clerum triar came to see him, and after having long discussed with him pure obseliouse:

"I ask you one favor," he said to kha, "It is that If the Brathers over some in live we hager according to the Rule you will peculic me to separate myself from them, whome or with a few others, to observe it in the suppletoness." At these words Francia felt a great jay. "Know," said ha, "that Christ as well as I anticorize what you have just been asking," and haying hands upon him, "Then art a priest forever," he added, "after the order of Medaldadoe,"

We have a yel more truching proof of his solicitude to safeguard the spiritual independence of his disciples; it is a note to Brother Leo.! The latter, much abruned by the new spirit which was gaining power in the Order, opened his mind thereupon to his amorphomission as the triar from Chemany. After an interview in which he replied viva vocc, Francis, not to leave my nort of doubt or ^{*9} Col., 8, 89; Spec., 200; Conform., 170b, 1; Boo., 77.

¹ Per caritatem spiritus veluntarii serviant et obediant invicem. Ri hao est wra et sunuta abedientia. Reg., 1221, v.

⁴ Tribul., Laur. M8., 14h , Spec., 425a), Conform., 107h, 14 184h, 1.

Woodling given it (Epist, xvi), after the autograph preserved in the transmity of the Conventuals of Spelato. The authoritieity of this place is evident.

hesitation in the mind of him whom he surnamed his little sheep of God, pecocella di Dio, wrote to him again:

Brother how the brother Franchi whites their peace and health.

I reply ges, my wow, we a mother to her child. This would sums up all we call which walking, we well so all my connoch. If then hast most to near to use for connoch, it is my wich that them shouldstain it. Whatever may be the manner in which them thinheat then cannot plause the hard that, follow it, and live in poverty. Do thus (faiter in 2), God will bloom have a madel authorize it. And if it were measurery for thy multiper for thy consulation that them when the came to see the, or if them desirest it, my hen, come.

Thing in Clothic

Surely we are far enough here from the corpse of a few pages back,

It would be superfluous to paine over the other admonitions. For the most part they are reflections inspired by circumstances. Consider as to hamility recur with a frequency which explains both the personal auxioties of the author, and the mechality of confieding the brothers of the very essence of their perforation.

The sojourn of St. Francia at Rome, whither he went in the early months of 1221, to by his plan before Ugalini, was marked by a new effort of the latter to bring him and St. Deminio together.

Pride placal, which people and Washling, shown plately that Brother four had spokers in the name of a greate

*This data for the new economic actions between them recents become fields, though It has never been proposed. In fact, we are only conserred to find a three whom all three could have mut at Rome (2 Cal., 3, 26; Spr., 27a), between Recorder 22, 1216 (the approbation of the Dondard boom), and August II, 1221 pleath of Dondards. Only two problems possible: the early mouths of 1216 (Potthes), 5509 and 5647) and the winter of 1220-1221. At any other three one of the three was desort from Rome.

On the other hand we know that Egoliul was he Rome in the while of 1920-1931 (Halliard Grébolles, Hist dipl., II., pp. 46, 193, 142. Of, Potthest, ffish). For Hamish see A. 83., Aug., vol. L., p. 503. The later date is imperative because Egoliul confit and offer prelature to

The cardinal was at this time at the apogee of his success. Everything had gone well with him. His voice was all powerful not only in affairs of the Church, but also in those of the Empire. Frederic II., who seemed to be groping his way, and in whose mind were germinating dreams of religious reformation, and the desire of placing his power at the service of the truth, treated him as a friend, and spoke of him with unbounded admiration.

In his reflections upon the remedies to be applied to the woes of Christianity, the cardinal came at last to think that one of the most efficacious would be the substitution of bishops taken from the two new Orders, for the feudal opiscopate almost always recruited from local families in which ecclesiastical dignities were, so to speak, hereditary. In the eyes of Ugolini such bishops were usually wanting in two essential qualities of a good prolate: religious zeal and zeal for the Church.

Ho believed that the Preaching and the Minor Friars would not only possess those virtues which were lacking in the others, but that in the hands of the papacy they might become a highly centralized hierarchy, truly catholic, wholly devoted to the interests of the Church at large. The difficulties which might occur on the part of the chapters which should elect the bishops, as well as on the side of the high secular elergy, would be put to flight by the enthusiasm which the people would feel for pasters whose poverty would recall the days of the primitive Church.

At the close of his interviews with Francis and Dom-

the Brothers Minor before their explicit apprehation (June 11, 1219), and this effor had no meaning with regard to the Dominicans mutil after the definitive establishment of their Order.

¹ See the imperial letters of February 10, 1221; Huillard-Bréhelles, vol. il., pp. 122-127.

inic, he communicated to them some of these thoughts, usking their advice as to the elevation of their frins to prelatures. There was a pious condest between the two saints as to which about answer first. Finally, Dominic usid simply that he should prefer to see his companions remain as they were. In his treat, Francia showed that the very name of his institute made the thing inquissible. "If my frium have been called Minores," he said, "it is not that they may become Majores. If you desire that they become fruitful in the Church of Gord, leave them alone, and keep them in the estate into which that has called them. I pray you, father, do not so set that their poverly shall become a motive for pride, nor elevate them to prelatures which would move them to insolve to bound others."

The crelesizatical policy followed by the paper was destined to render this counsel of the two founders wholly uselons?

Francia and Dominic parted, novor again to meet The Master of the Preaching Friera shortly after solout for Bologna, where he died on August 5th following, and Francia returned to Portinucula, where Pietra di Calum land just died (March 10, 1991). He was replaced at the head of the Order by Brother Elina. Ugalini was doubtless not without influence in this chaice.

Delained by his functions of legate, he could not be present at the Whitemday chapter (May 30, 12:1). He was represented there by Cardinal Roynerio, who came

¹² Col., 8, 86; Hou., 73; Spec., 27b

⁹ Vida K. Enbol: Die Hischife, Uardindle und Papete aus dem Minoritenorden bis 1995, two, 1996.

⁴ He was in Northern Daly. Viels Registric Data 17 29.

^{*} Regnering, cardinal denotes with the little of A. M. In Cosmodin, Bishap of Viterlactof, Lunecut III., Opers, Migno, I. cal. caxiii), I Cal., 125. He had been mained reduc of the Ducky of Spelato, August 9, 1920. Pottiact, CIII.

accompanied by several bishops and by meaks of various orders. Altert three thousand friers were there assembled, but so great was the eigencess of the people of the neighborhood to bring provisions, that after a session of seven days they were eddiged to remain two days longer to eat up all that had been brought. The sessions were presided over by Brother Eline, Francis atting at his feet and pulling at his role when there was mything that he wished to have put before the Brothers.

Brother Gierdani di Ginno, who was present, has preserved for as all these details and that of the setting out of a group of frium for Germany. They were placed under the direction of Gerar of Speyer, whose mission succeeded heyond all expectation. Eighteen mouths after, when he returned to Italy, communed with the desire to nee St. Francia again, the cities of Warzhung, Mayence, Worms, Speyer, Standang, Cologne, Salzhung, and Rabishen had become Prancisean centres, from wheney, the new ideas were radiating into all Southern Germany.

The foundation of the Tortisries, or Third Order, generally in the addest documents called Brotherhood of Penitence, is mainly fixed an occurring in the year 1221; but we have already seen that this date is much be recent, or rather that it is impossible to fix any date, for what was later called, quite arbitrarily, the Third Order is evidently contemporary with the First,² Olord, 38. The presence of Dombdo at an earlier elepter had therefore been quite natural.

This view learmenized to every particular with the witnessed 1 Oct., 36 and 37, which shows the Third Order as having been quite inducally been of the outleadam excited by the preaching of Evench learned and interpretation for the control from Roma in 1210 (cf. Auctor cit. sec.) A. 88., p. 5631). Notiding in any other document rendrables it; quite the contrary. Vida 3 Sec., 88. (Cf. Anon. Print; A. 88., p. 600; Han., 25, 40. Cf. A. 88., pp. 631 634. The first bull which concerns the Brothact of Pontionea (without mains them) is of Describer 16, 1224.

Francia and his companions desired to be the apostles of their time; but they, no more than the apostles of Jesus, desired to have all men enter their association, which was necessarily somewhat restricted, and which necording to the geopel mying, was mount to be the leaven of the rest of humanity. In consequence, their life was literally the apostolic life, but the ideal which they preached was the evangelical life, such an Jesus lad preached it.

St. Francia no more condemned the family or property than Jeoms did; he simply new in them tien from which the apostle, and the specific alone, needs to be free,

If before long nickly minds fancied that they interpreted his thought in making the union of the sexes an ovil, and all that concerns the physical activity of man a full; if unbalanced epirits becrowed the untherity of his name to escape from all duty; if rearried persons condensed themselves to the neuroless unretyrdem of virginity, he should certainly not be under responsible. These traces of an unmatural asceticism come from the dualist idean of the Callariats, and not from the inspired poet who range induce and her feemality, who made usels for doves, inviting them to multiply under the watch of God, and who imposed manual labor on his friars as a sacrad duty.

The basis of the corporation of the Renthers and Sisters of Penitence were very simple. Francis gave no new doctrine to the world; while was new in his message was wholly in his love, in his direct call to the evangelical life, to an ideal of moral vigor, of tabor, and of toye.

Signification est. If it really refers to theor, we bilarate athino, with all these who have interested themselves to the question to M. Müller tooloutydy—but which, it appears, neight be contested—it is because in 1224 they had made appear to the papears the predested of Figure and the neighboring effice. This evidently supposes an eccentric out recently here. Sixrales, Hull. fr_{ij} , 1_i , p_i , 8_i ; therey, vol. $\{v_{ij}\}$ cal. 49_4 Potthast, 9716.

Naturally, there were soon found men who did not understand this true and simple beauty; they fell into observances and develous, imilated, while living in the world, the life of the cloister to which for one reason or another they were not able to retire; but it would be unjust to picture to ourselves the Brothers of Penitenee as modelled after them.

Did they receive a Rule from St. Francis? It is impossible to say. The one which was given them in 1289 by Pope Nicholas IV, is simply the regasting and analgumation of all the rules of lay fraternities which existed at the end of the thirteenth contary. To attribute this document to Francis is nothing less than the placing in a new building of certain venerated atmos from an uncient edifice. It is a matter of fugade and ornamentation, nothing more.

Notwithstanding this absence of any Rule emanating from Francis himself, it is clear enough what, in his estimation, this association ought to be. The Gospel, with its connscle and examples, was to be its true Rule. The great innovation designed by the Third Order was concord; this fraternity was a union of prace, and it brought to astonished Europe a new truce of God. Whether the absolute refusal to carry arms? was an idea Intil Supra mondem of August 17, 1986, Pollined, 23044. M. Müller has made a huntroos study of the origin of this ladt; it may be considered that he all committed galute (Anfänge, pp. 117-171). By this bull Nicholas IV. minister-general of the Brothem Minor hefere heromorphy paper morphs to draw into the hundr of his Order the direction of all associations of plane below (Pidret Order of St. Dominio, the Gandontos, the Humiliat, etc.). He desired by that to give a greater inepulse to those fraternities which depended directly up the mant of Rimos, and augment their power by unifying them.

YVIda Bull Signification est of Thosomber 18, 1221. Of. Supra montom, chap. vII.

wholly chimerical and ephemeral, the documents are there to prove, but it is a fine thing to have had the power to bring it about for a few years.

The record essential obligation of the Brothers of Penitoneo appears to have been that of reducing their wants so far an possible, and while preserving their fortmes to distribute to the poor at proper intervals the free parlion of the revenue after contenting themselves with the strictly necessary.

To do with joy the duties of their calling; to give a holy inspiration to the slightest actions; to find in the infinitely littles of existence, things apparently the most commonplace, parts of a divine work; to keep pure from all debusing interest; to use things as not possessing than, like the servants in the parable who would soon have to give necond of the talents contided to them; to choose their hearts to betred, to open them wiche to the poor, the sick, tenth alumbaned mass, such were the other easenful duties of the Brothers and Sisters of Penilence.

To lead them into this royal road of liberty, love, and responsibility. Francia connectioner appealed to the torrors of hall and the joya of paradise, but interested love was so little a part of his nature that these considerations and others of the same kind occupy an entirely secondary place in those of his writings which remain, as also in his biographics.

For him the geopel life is natural to the soul. Whoever somes to know it will prefer it; it has no more med to be proved than the outer air and the light. It needs only to lead prisoners to it, for them to less all desire to return to the dangeous of averies, hatrod, or frivolity.

Francis and his true disciples tanks the painful ascent

The Rule of the Tidrd Dider of the Hamiliati, which dates from 1201, contains a studier chains. This boseld, vid. 11., p. 132, of the mountain leights, impelled solely, but irresistibly, by the inner voice. The only foreign aid which they accept is the menory of Jesus, going before them upon these heights and mysteriously living again before their eyes in the sacrament of the oneherist.

The letter to all Christians in which these thoughts break fortle is a living souvenir of St. Francis's teachings to the Tortiaries.

To represent these latter to ourselves in a perfectly concrete form we may report to the legend of St. True-chesio, whom tradition makes the first Brokher of Penitonee.¹

A native of a little city of Tusemy he quitted it to avoid its political counities, and established bimself at Peggibonsi, not for from Siema, where he continued to trade in grain. Already rich, it was not difficult for him to buy up all the wheat, and, selling it in a time of searcity, realize energous profits. But soon evercome by Francis's proaching, he took himself to task, distributed all his superfluity to the poor, and kept nothing but his house with a small garden and one one.

From that time he was to be seen devoting himself to the cultivation of this lot of ground, and tasking of his house a sort of hosteby whither the poor and the sick came in awarms. He not only welcomed them, but he sought them out, even to the underic-infected Marchana, often returning with a sick man asteids on his back and preceded by his ass bearing a nimitar burdon. The resources of the garden were necessarily very limited; when there was no other way, tarechesio took a wallet and went from door to door asking alms, but must of the time this was needless, for his poor guests, seeing him so diligent and so good, were better satisfied with a few poor vegetables from the garden shared with him than with the most copious repost. In the presence of their benefactor, so joyful in his destitution, they forgot their own poverty, and the habitual manuairs of these wreteless were transformed into outlands of admiration and gratitude.

In the A. 88., ApcBis, vol. 11. p. 600 tith. Orbitale di Chimi also received the haldt from the hands of Francis. Vide Instrumentum, etc., index, p. 400. The Franciscan fraternity, under the influence of the other third undere, capidly best its specific characters. As to this lifte, Third Order, it mustly had adjoinally a hierarchical scene, upon which little by little a obranelogical scenes has been experienced. All those questions become stagnizely elegrar when they are compared with what is known of the Hamilton.

Conversion had not killed in time all family ties; Bona Donau, his wife, because his best co-laborer, and when in 1260 he may her gradually facing away his grief was too deep to be endured. "You know, dear companion," he said to her when she had received the last sucraments, "how much we have leved one another while we could serve God together; why should we not remain united until we depart to the ineffible joy? Wait for me. I also will receive the meraments, and go to heaven with you."

So be spoke, and called back the priest to administer them to him. Then after lodding the launds of his dying companion, comforting her with gentle words, when he saw that her soul was gone he made over her the sign of the cross, stretched himself beside last, and calling with love upon Josus, Mary, and St. Francis, he fell askep for eternity.

CHAPTER XVI

THE BROTHERS MINOR AND LEARNING

Autumu, 1221-December, 1223

After the chapter of 1221 the evolution of the Order hurried on with a rapidity which nothing was strong onough to cheek.

The creation of the ministers was an enormous step in this direction; by the very pressure of things the latter came to establish a residence; those who command must have their subordinates within reach, must know at all times where they are; the Brothers, therefore, could no longer continue to do without convents properly so-called. This change naturally brought about many others; up to this time they had had no churches. Without churches the friars were only itinerant preachers, and their purpose could not but be perfectly disinterested; they were, as Francis had wished, the friendly auxiliaries of the clergy. With churches it was inevitable that they should first fatally aspire to preach in them and attract the crowd to them, then in some sort erect them into counter parishes.

¹ All this took place with prodigious rapidity. The dimensions of the Basilica of Assisi, the plans of which were made in 1228, no more permits it to be considered as a conventual chapel than Santa-Croes in Florence, San Francesco in Sienna, or the Basilica San Autonic at Padua, monuments commonced between 1230 and 1240. Already before 1245 one party of the episcopate utters a cry of alarm, in which he speaks of nothing less than of closing the door of the secular churches,

The bull of March 92, 1292, shows us the papery hastening these transformations with all its power. The pontiff accords to Brother Francis and the office kians the privilege of celebrating the sourced mysteries in their churches in times of interdict, on the intural combition of not ringing the bells, of closing the door, and previously expelling those who were excommunicated.

By an astoniohing inadvortence the bull itself bruss witness to its undersuces, at bust or the time in which it was given; "We accord to you," it runs, "the permission to colorate the accuments in times of interdict in your chareless, if you come to have very." This is a new proof that in 1993, the trider we yet had none; but it is not difficult to see in this very document a pressing invitation to change their way of working, and not have this privilege to be of nearnit.

Another decennent of the some time phows a like purpose, though manifested in another direction. By the total Expanse of March 29, 1929, Honorina III, laid upon the Preschere and Minors of Lieben conjointly a singularly delicate mission; he gave them full powers to proved against. The bishop and clergy of that city, who exacted from the faithful that they about leave in them which have become usedess. The complaint with Incredible bifterness that the Miner and Presiding Prints have alcodifiely supplanted the parachide cleasy. This letter may be found in Pleire do be Vignerable seed at once to Frederick II and the Connell of Lyone: Printale, Hooke, 1740, 2 volo., vol. 1. pp. 226-229. It is supply to be desired that a critical text should be given. See also the eather against the two tows (Irders, done to relyance about 1242 by Pierre do la Vigne, and of which, altering for possible exaggstations, the greater number of their cidents caused have been invented. If do Meril, Besien pap. lett., pp. 163-177, Paris, syn. 1647.

And not of the 20th, as Mharafea will bave R.—Hall fe., vol. l., in ty, vol. iv., e.d. 120; the original, still in the archive of the title i Halsun Anaguie 11 Kulendos Aprilis pontificaturals.

by will one-third of their property, and refused the Church's burial service to those who disobeyed.

The fact that the pope committed to the Brothers the care of choosing what measures they should take proves how anxious they were at Rome to forget the object for which they had been created, and to transform them into deputies of the Holy Seo. It is, therefore, needless to point out that the mention of Francis's name at the head of the former of these bulls has no significance. We do not picture the Poverello scoking a privilege for circumstances not yet existing! We perceive here the influence of Ugolini, who had found the Brother Minor after his own heart in the porsen of Elias.

What was Francis doing all this time? We have no knowledge, but the very absence of information, so abundant for the period that precedes as well as for that which follows, shows plainly onough that he has quitted Portiuncula, and gone to live in one of those Umbrian hermitages that had always had so strong an attachment for him.⁸ There is hardly a hill in Central Italy that has not preserved some memente of him. It would be hard to walk half a day between Florence and Rome without coming upon some but on a hillside bearing his name or that of one of his disciplos.

¹ Potthast, 0809; Horey, iv., col. 129. See also the bull Rece Venit Deus of July 14, 1227; L. Anvray: Registres de Grégoire IX., no. 129; cf. 153; Potthast, 8027 and 8028, 8189.

² He had finished his mission as legate in Lombardy toward the close of Soptembor, 1221 (see his register; of. Böhmer, Acta imp. sel. doc., 951). In the spring of 1222 we find him continually near the pope at Anagni, Veroli, Alatri (Potthast, 6807, 0812, 6840). The Holy See had still at that time a marked predilection for the Preachers; the very trite privilege of power to celebrate the offices in times of interdict had been accorded them March 7, 1222, but instead of the formula usual in such cases, a revised form had been made expressly for them, with a handsome eulogy. Ripolil, Bull. Præd., t. i., p. 15.

^{&#}x27;2 Col., 3, 93 : Subtrahebat se a consortio fratrum.

* *

With this child-like representation of the Lyranny of material cares which to lad escaped, he thally put away the temptation.

There is nothing to show whether or not we should lix at the same epoch unother incident which legend gives as taking place at Sartiano. One day a brother of whom lay asked, "Whence do you come?" replied, "Trins aimple maswer was enough to make the vehement lover of Poverty refune to occupy it again. "Trins lawe holes," he loved to repeat, "and the birds of the air lawe nests, but the Son of man land not where to buy his hand. When the bord opent forty days and forty nights praying and fasting in the desert, he built himself neither cell nor home, but made the side of a rock his shelfar."

Ik would be a mistake to think, we some have those, link as time went on Francis changed bic point of view. Corbain occleainstical writers have assumed that since ha desired the multiplication of his Order, he for that very reason consented to its transformation. The suggestion is specious, but in this matter we are not left to conjectare; almost everything which was done in the Order after 1221 was done either without Framis's knowledge or against his with. If one were inclined to doubt this, it would need only to glarge over that most solemn and also most adequate manifesto of his thought his Will. There he is shown freed from all the temptations which had at times made him heritate in the expression of his idens, bravely gathering himself up to summer back the primilize ideal, and set it up in opposition to all the concessions which had been wrung from his weakness.

The Will is not an appendix to the Rule of 1223, it is almost its revocation. But it would be a postuke to see in it the first abbumpt made to return to the early ideal.

¹⁹ Col., 8, 50 ; Bon , 100 ; Conform., 1995, 9, ^{*9} Col., 3, 6; Spec., 120; Conform., 169b, 2.

The hist five years of his life were only one incessuate effort at protest, both by his example and his words.

In 1922 he midressed to the brethren of Bidogua a letter filled with sail forebodings. In that city, when the Dominicans, overwhelmed with attentions, were occupied with making themselves a stronghold in the system of instruction, the Brothers Minor were more than anywhere else tempted to forsike the way of simplicity and poverty. Proceids warnings had put on such that and threatening colors that after the famous earth-quake of December 23, 1922, which spread torror over all northern Huly, there was no hesitation in believing that he had predicted the entastrophe. The had indeed predicted a cutastrophe which was much the less horrible for being wholly moral, and the vision of which forcal from him the nest bitter imprecations:

O hard doma, then didst choose there is partles to the number of twelve, and if one of them did below thou, the others, remaining united to thee, preached thy hely gaspel, filled with one and the monor haplication; and beheld new, remembering the learner days, then host raised up the Bullgian of the Brothers be order to upheld fishin, and that by them the mystery of the gaspel may be accomplished. Who will take their piace if, instead of tabilling their reliation and being phining examples for all, they are seen to give the madves up to works of darkness to the may they be accorded by them, both and by all the court of heaven, and by me, then movethly servant, they who by their bad example overture and destroy all that then didst do in the legioning and consent not to do by the budy thathem of this Order. ***

This passage from Thomas of Celuius, the most makerate of the biographers, shows to what a pitch of velocities and imlignation the gentle Francis could be worked up.

In apile of very initiand efforts to throw a veil of re-

Bend., B. Vlebe Ideliurmann's text, Mon. Overn. hist. Virript., 1, 28, p. 669.

^{8 2} Col., 8, 100; Rom., 104 and 105; Conform., 1916, 2.

sorve over the auguish of the founder with regard to the future of his spiritual family, we find traces of it at every stap. "The time will come," he said one day, "when our Order will so have tost all good renown that its members will be ashamed to show themselves by daylight."

He saw in a dream a slatue with the field of pure gold, the broast and arms of silver, the body of crystal, and the legs of iron. He thought it was an amon of the future in above for his institute.

He believed his acum to to attacked with two mahaties, unfaithful at ones to poverty and lumility; but perhaps to dranded for them the demon of learning more than the temptation of riches.

What were his views on the subject of learning? It is probable that he never examined the question as a whole, but he had accidingtly in accing that there will always he stadents enough in the universities, and that if scientific effort is an homoge affered to God, there is no risk of worshippers of this class being wanting; but in vain he looked about him on all sides, to saw accone to fulfit the abssion of lave and humility reserved for his Order, if the friers came to be unfaithful to it.

Therefore there was seanething more in his auguisk than the grief of accing his hopen confounded. The rout of an army is nothing in comparison with the averthrow of an idea; and is him an idea had been incarnated, the idea of peace and happiness restored to marking, by the victory of love over the transmets of material things.

By an ineffable mystery he felt himself the Man of his ago, him in whose hedy are borne all the efforts, the desires, the aspirations of men; with him, in him, by him humanity yearns to be renewed, and to use the language of the geopel, been again.

¹² Oct., 3, 43; Spre., 406; 182c; Conform., 482c, 1; Tribut., 15c; 2 Oct., 3, 98; 143; 445; 4 Cct., 29, 50; 50; 103; 104; 108; 144; 448.

^[2] Odd., 3, 27 (Spec., 486); Conform., 1816, 14 Tribul., 76. Of. Spec., 220b.; Conform., 400b.

In this lies his true bounty. By this, for more than by a vain conformity, an exterior initiation, he is a Christ.

He also bears the affliction of the world, and if we will look into the very depths of his soul we must give this word affliction the largest possible meaning for him as for Jeans. By their pity they bere the physical authorings of hummity, but their everwhetning anguish was something by different from this, it was the birth threes of the divine. They author, because in them the Word is made flesh, and at Gettmennine, accurate the alive-trees of Greecia, they are in ageny "because their own received them not."

You, St. Francis forever felt the travail of the transformation taking place in the womb of humanity, going forward to its divine destiny, and he offered himself, a living oblation, that in him might take place the mysterious pullingenesis.

Do we now understand his pain? He was frendling for the mystery of the gospel. There is in him something which reminds us of the tremor of life when it stands face to face with death, associting by accusulthe more painful as we have here to do with moral life.

This explains how the more who would run after ruffiant that he might make discipled of there could be pitiless toward his fellow-holorers who by an indiscreek, however well-intentioned, zent forgot their vocation and would transform their Order into a scientific institute.

Under pretext of putting learning at the service of God and of religion, the Church land featured the worst of vices, pride. According to some it is her title to glory, but it will be her greatest shame. Must we renounce the use of this weapon against the enemies of the faith? she asks. But can you imagine Jesus joining the school of the rabbins under the pretext of learning flow to repty to them, enteebling his thought by their dialectic subtleties and fantastic exegosis? He might perhaps have been a great doctor, but would he have become the Saviour of the world? You feet that he would not

When we hear preachers going into raptures over the marveltons aprend of the gospel preached by twelve poor fishermen of Childre, might we not point out to them that the miracle in it once more and lescustomeding blumbling say? More for innong the twelve several returned to the shores of their charming like, and forgetfut of the mystic net, thought of the Cracified One, if they thought of him at all, only to hument him, and not to raiso him from the dead by continuing his work in the four quarters of the world; lesse for if even now, in these dying days of the ninelecuth century, preachers would go forth beside themselves with leve, sacrificing themselves for each and all as in the old days their Master did, the miracle would be repented ugain.

But no; theology has killed religion. The clergy repeat to subjety that we must not confound the two; but what good does this do if in practice we do not distinguish them?

Nover was learning more experty coveted than in the thirteenth century. The Empire and the Cimrch were anxiously acking of it the arguments with which they might defend their opposing claims. Innovent III, sends the calbetina of his Decretals to the University of Bologna and heaps beyons upon it. Frederick II, founds that of Naples, and the Patarini themselves soul their sons from Tussany and Lomburdy to study at Paris.

We remember the success of Francis's preaching at Bedogna, in August, 1990, at the name period he had strongly reprime the Pietro Staccia, the provincial udulator and a doctor of has, not only for having installed this Brothers in a house which appeared to belong to them, but respecially for having organized a sort of college there.

It appears that the minister paid no attention to these reproaches. When Francis became aware of his obstinacy he cursed him with feightful vebennence; bis indignation was so great that when, later on, Pietro Stacois was about to die and his numerous friends came to entrop Francis to reveals his undefliction, all their efforts were invain.²

In the face of this attitude of the founder it is very difficult to believe in the authenticity of the acle purporting to be addressed to Authory of Padam:

"Tu my very dear Authory, brother Francis, greetings in Christ,

If pleases not that you interpret to the Brotheve the sourch writings and theology, in such a way, however reconformably to mar Rada, that the splett of hely prayer be not extinguished either to you or in the others, which i desire currently. Greetings 9

Must we not in this a pious fruid to wraken the numberless clear declarations of Francia against learning?

It is difficult to picture to conserved the rivalry which Franchia auccessor were nearly all without exception stadems of Bologua. Pletro ill Patrica was doctor of love, as also Blovenial Parcial (Glord., 51). Effected had been scripter at Bologua. Alloctic of Pies had been included them (Ecol., 6). Aymon had been reader their (Ecol., 6). Presentation wrote works on jurispendence (Cayform, 1915, Leola, 6).

² This name current by warranted 4 for is called the granted 41 becomes on 10 a passings of the Confermities (101a, 1); Pletre Schlacchi in the Italian MS, of the Tribulations (f. 55a); Petrus Stavia in the Laurence Hulan MS, 118h; cf. Archiv., H., p. 238). Tribut., 48h; Epre., 484b, Tida story has been nough simplified in other places. Spec., 420x4 Comform., 104b, 1.

existed at this time between the Dominicans and Franciscans in the attempt to draw the most illustrious masters into their respective Orders. Petty intrigues were organized, in which the devotees had each his part, to lead such or such a famous doctor to assume the habit.¹ If the object of St. Francis had been scientific, the friars of Bologna, Paris, and Oxford could not have done more.²

The current was so strong that the elder Orders were swept away in it whether they would or no; twenty years later the Cistercians also desired to become legists, theologians, decretalists, and the rest.

Perhaps Francis did not in the outset perceive the gravity of the danger, but illusion was no longer possible, and from this time he showed, as we have seen, an implacable firmness. If later on his thought was travestied, the guilty ones—the popes and most of the ministers-general—were obliged to resort to feats of prestidigitation that are not to their credit. "Suppose," he would say, "that you had subtility and learning enough to know all things, that you were acquainted with all languages, the courses of the stars, and all the rost, what is there in that to be proud of? A single demon knows more on these subjects than all the men in this world put together." But there is one thing that the demon is in-

¹ Vide Eccl., 3: History of the entrance of Adam of Oxford into the Order. Of., Chartularium Univ. Par., t. i., nos. 47 and 40.

² Eccleston's entire chreniele is a living witness to this.

³ Admonitio, v.; of. Conform., 141a.

Compare the Constitutions antique (Speculum, Morin, iii., f° 195b-206) with the Rule. From the opening chapters the contradiction is apparent: Ordinamus quod nullus recipiatur in ordine nostro nisi sit talis electious qui sit competenter instructus in grammatica vel logica; aut nisi sit talis laious de cujus ingressu esset valdo celebris et edificatio in populo et in elero. This is surely far from the spirit of him who said: Et quioumque venerit amicus vel adversarius fur vel latro benigne recipiatur. Rule ef 1221, cap. vii. See also the Exposition of the Rule of Bonaventura. Speculum, Morin, iil., f° 21-40.

enpuble of, and which is the glory of man: to be faithful to $\operatorname{God}_{-}^{n+1}$

Definite information with regard to the chapters of 1222 and 1223 is wanting. The proposed modifications of the project of 1221 were discussed by the ministers and afterward definitively settled by Cardinal Ugolini. The latter had long conferences on the subject with Francia, who has himself given us the account of thom.

The result of them all was the Rule of 1223. Very soon a swarm of macvellons atories, which it would be terlious to examine in detail, came to be clustered around the origin of this document; all that we need to rotain of them is the memory that they keep of the struggles of Francia against the ministera for the preservation of his ideal.

Before going to Rome to ask for the final approlation he had meditated long in the solitade of Monte Colombo, near Rieti. This hill was soon represented as a new Sinai, and the disciples pictured their master on its heights receiving another Decalogue from the lands of Jesus himself.

Augelo Charono, one of the most complacent narralors of these traditions, takes upon himself to point out their slight value; he shows us Romaions 111, modifying an essential passage in the plan at the last meanent. I

¹ Opin Franch's atthinds toward tearning see Tribul., Laur., 1464 Spec., 184a; 2 Col., 3, 8; 48; 100; 110; 110; 120–121 – Boo., chap. 162, industily expresses only Bonavettora's views – Foo especially Rule of 1921, cap. xvII.; of 1224, cap. x.

Spec., We Feet Franciscus eighten quam papa Honorius einflemmit eum bulla, do qua reputa multa fuerant extracta per ministres eintra robuntatem h. Francisci. Cl. 9 Col., 3, 196 have already so for described this Bula that there is no need to return to the subject here.

^{*} Bull Quarlonguli of Replander 28, 1280; Standon I, p. 56.

^{*} Hon., 55 and 50 (d 2000), 92 [Spec., 70 ; 424a ; Tribal , Laur., 476-196 ; Oberthit, Actor. P., 6 ; Conform., 99a, 9.

Tribut, Laur., 1984 Archiv. t, 91, p. 801. 13f. A, 88, p. 6986.

It was approved November 25, 1223.1 Many monories appear to have chatered about the journey of Francis to Rome. One day Cardinal Ugotini, whose hospitality he had accepted, was unch marprised, and his guests as well, to find him absent as they were about to sit down at table, but they soon saw him coming, carrying a quantity of pieces of dry bread, which he joyfully distributed to all the noble company. It is host, somewhat abashed by the proceeding, having undertaken after the meal to reproach him a little, Francis explained that he had accept to forget, for a sumptions feast, the bread of charity on which be was fed overy day, and that he desired thus to show him brethren that the richest table is not worth no much to the poor in spirit as this table of the Lord.2

We have seen that thering the earlier years the Brothers Minor had been in the limbit of earning their bread by going out an servands. Some of them, a very small number, had continued to do so, tittle by little, in this matter also all had been changed. Under color of serving, the friend cultered the families of the highest personages of the positional court, and became their confidential alterdants; instead of submitting themselves to all, as the Rule of 1221 ordained, they were alove everyone.

Butirely losing eight of the apostolic life, they became conviiers of a special type; their character, half orclesiustic and half lay, rendered them capable of carrying out a number of delicate missions and of playing a part in the varied intrigues for which the greater number of Roman prolates have always seemed to live.\(^{\text{L}}\) By way of probest Francia had only one weapon, his example,

⁴ Potthaga, 7108. The work of this bull was completed by that of Decondror 18, 1223. (The original of the Sucre Convents bears Datum Laterant X F. Ral. Jun.). Frateen Minorum? Potthagt, 7123.

² 2 Col., 8, 49 ; 1000., 165; Spec., 485; Conform., 1716, 4.

One day, the Speechum relates, the Illusted Francia came to Runn to see the higher of Octa (Pgotinis, and offer having remained some than at his bonne, be went also to visit Continual loop, who had a great daystion for him.

If were whiter; the cold, the wind the rate made any journey impossible, so the conditud logsest him to prove few days in his trouse and to take the find there, like the other poor feth who come there to mit, . . . "I will give you," be added, "a good hedging, quite reffred, where if you like you may pory and eat." Then the thether Angele, not of the twelve fiel disciples, who lived with the cardinal, sublet Francis; "There is, close by here, a great lover clauding by itself and vary quiet; you will be there as in a hermitage," Francis want to send and it plopped bim. Then, returning to the cardinal, "Manadgnor," he want to prepare the latter was vary joyful, and Brother Angele went to prepare the lawer for the Blogsest Francis and ble companion.

Hut the very first while, when he would have slept, the dominisoning and among that. Calling then to his comparison, "Hrother," in wild, "the demons lave come and emitten my with vidence; remain mear me, I beg, for Lam afiable here alone."

Ho was trembling in all the conclust, like one who has a favor. They passed the night both without steeping. O'The demons are rand missianed with the classic ments of God," end Francis; "not a pulest's needs his executioner to provide the criminal, so God ments demons, who in this are his ministers.

Why her he sent them to the 9 Perhaps this is the reason; 'The captinal dealers' to be kind to me, and I have truly great need of repose, but the Brothers who are out in the world, suffering houser and a thomsand tribulations, and also those others who are in hermitages or in adsorable houses, when they hear of my sejourn with a captinal will be moved to repine. 'We continually privations,' they will say, 'while he has all that he can desire;' but I ought to give them a good example—that is my time oriector."

Early next norming, therefore, he quitted the tower, and having lold the middling all took leave of the and returned to the hermings of Monte Colombo, near trict. "They think use a body man," he mild " and son, it needed demons becaut me out of prison."

J.2 Col., 3, 61 and 02.— Cf. Reel., 6, theorems of Rost de Ross.

^{*} Spec., 476 G., 2 Col., 4, 414 How., 84 and 85.

This story, notwithstanding its strange coloring, shows plainly how strong was his instinct for independence. To compare the hospitality of a cardinal to an imprisonment! It's spoke better than he know, characterizing in one word the relation of the Church to his Order.

The lark was not dead; in spite of cold and the north wind it gayly took its flight to the vale of Rieti.

It was mid-December. An underlidenic to observe to the life the memories of Christmas had taken possession of Francis. He opened his heart to one of his friends, the knight Giovanni di Greccio, who undertook the necessary preparations.

The imitation of draws has in all times been the very contre of Christianity; but one must be singularly opiritant to be satisfied with the initation of the heart. With most men there is used that this should be preceded and sustained by an external initation. It is indeed the spirit that gives life, but it is only in the country of the angels that one can say that the flesh proliteth nothing.

In the Middle Agera religious festival was before all things olso a representation, more or less faithful, of the event which it recalled; hence the seatons of Provence, the processions of the Palmerel, the Holy Supper of Mannely Thursday, the Resurrection of Easter, and the flaming tow of Whitsanday. Francia was too thoroughly Italian not to leve these festivals where every visible thing speaks of Good and of his leve.

The population of Greecie and its environs was, therefore, convoked, as well as the Brothers from the neighboring momenteries. On the evening of the vigil of Christmus one might have seen the faithful historing to the hornitage by every path with torches in their hands, making the forests ring with their joyful hymns.

Everyone was rejoicing Printeis most of all. The knight had prepared a stable with straw, and trought an extend in ass, whose treath accured to give warmth to the poor bendine, becombed with the cold. At the sight the saint felt learn of pity below his face; he was no longer in threecie, his learn was in Bethlehem.

Finally they began to climit matine; then the mass was largun, and brane is, an deacon, read the Gospel. Already hearts were touched by the simple recital of the sacred legend in a vicence gentle and so fervent, but when his preached, his conclion door everence the audience; his voice had so multicrated a tenderness that they also furgest overything, and were living over again the feeling of the shepherds of Juden who in those old days went to make the tied made man, born in a stable.

Toward the close of the thirteenth contary, the author of the Stabat Mater delerosa, Gincopene dei Tadi, that Franciscan of genina who spent a part of his life in dangeous, inspired by the memory of Greecie, composed ans other Stabat, that of joy, Stabat Mater speciesa. This hymn of Mary beside the manger is not less noble than that of Mary at the fact of the cross. The sentiment is even more tender, and it is hard to explain its neglect except by an unjust caprice of fate.

Stabat Matar speciena Juxture formun quodicia Dum jacobat parvulus, Quaegandeleat et ridolat Examinhat enna videbat Nati partona inclytt.

Fan san verse congraidera denalige coleeyore Diana ega vixeng

⁴⁴ Od., 94 97; 1666, 149.

This little poon use published entire by M. Ozanam in vol. v. of his worker p. 194.

CHAPTER XVII

THE STIGMATA

1224

The upper valley of the Arno forms in the very centre of Italy a country apart, the Casentine, which through centuries had its own life, somewhat like an island in the midst of the ocean.

The river flows out from it by a narrow defile at the south, and on all other sides the Apennines encircle it with a girdle of inaccessible mountains.

This plain, some ten leagues in diameter, is enlivened with picturesque villages, finely posted on hillocks at the base of which flows the stream; here are Bibbiena, Peppi, the antique Remena sung by Dante, the Camaldeli, and up there on the crost Chiusi, long ago the capital of the country, with the ruins of Count Orlando's castle.

The people are charming and refined; the mountains have sheltered them from wars, and on every side we see the signs of laber, prosperity, a gentle gayety. At any mement we might fancy ourselves transported into some valley of the Vivarais or Provence. The vegetation on the berders of the Arno is thoroughly trepical; the olive and the mulberry marry with the vine. On the lower hill-slepes are wheat fields divided by meadews;

¹The passes that give access to the Casentino have all about one thousand metres of altitude. Until the most recent years there was no road properly so called.

then come the chestuats and the take, higher still the pine, the fir, the breth, and above all the bare rock.

Among all the peaks there is one which especially attracts the attention; instead of a rounded and so to my flattened top, it uplifts itself slender, proud, isolated; it is the Verma.

One might think it an immense rock fallen from the sky. It is in fact an erratic block set there, a little like a petrified Nombic ark on the amount of Mount Ararat, The basidite mass, perpendicular on all sides, is crowned with a plateau planted with pinea and gigantic beaches, and accessible only by a footpath.

Such was the solitate which Orlande bad given to Francis, and to which Francis had already many a lime come for quiet and contemplation.

Sented upon the few atomes of the Penni," he heard only the whispering of the wind among the trees, but in the splender of the number or the annual he could sen nearly all the districts in which he had nown the send of the propel; the Rusangue and the March of Ancona, losing blumselves on the herizon in the waves of the Adriatic; Umbrin, and facther away, Tusenny, vanishing in the waters of the Mediterranean.

The impression on this height is not crushing like that which one has in the Alpa: a feeling infinitely culm and

On France Mount Algalile, one of the seven wenders of Damplday, presente the same aspect and the rame geological formation. St. Odilo also results the Verm, but is very much smaller.

^{*} The parentle has an altitude of 1200 motion. In Italian they call if the Verna, in Latin Alternia. The objectory, which has tested the automess of the bound, appears to be very shirphy; the verb cernare, used by Danie, alguidies under rold, freeze.

Name of the highest point on the plateau. Hardly three quarter of an hour from the momentary, and not two hours and a half, as these worthy nucharities believed. This is said for the boneilt of tourisis. . . and pligness.

sweet flows over you; you are high enough to judge of men from above, not high enough to forget their existence.

Besides the wide horizons, Francis found there other objects of delight; in this forest, one of the noblest in Europe, live legions of birds, which never having been hunted are surprisingly tame. Subtile perfumes arise from the ground, and in the midst of horage and lichens frail and exquisite cyclamens blossom in fantastic variety.

Ho desired to return thither after the chapter of 1224. This meeting, hold in the beginning of June, was the last at which he was present. The new Rule was thore put into the hands of the ministers, and the mission to England decided upon.

It was in the early days of August that Francis took his way toward Verna. With him were only a fow Brothers, Masseo, Angelo, and Leo. The first had been charged to direct the little band, and spare him all duties oxeept that of prayor²

They had been two days on the road when it became necessary to seek for an ass for Francis, who was too much enfeobled to go farther on foot.

The Brothers, in asking for this service, had not conecaled the name of their master, and the peasant, to whom they had addressed themselves respectfully, asked leave to guide the beast himself. After going on a certain time, "Is it true," he said, "that you are Brother Francis of Assisi?" "Very well," he went on, after the answer in the affirmative, "apply yourself to be as good an folk say you are, that they may not be deceived in their expectation; that is my advice." Francis immediately get down from his tenst and, prostrating himself before the personal, thanked him warmly.

¹ The forest has been preserved as a relic. Alexander IV. fulminated excommunication against whomever should out down the firs of Verna. As to the birds, it is enough to pass a day at the menastery to be amazed at their number and variety. M. O. Beni has begun at Stia (in Casentine) an ernithological collection which already incindes more than five hundred and fifty varieties.

²¹ Col., 91; Bon., 188; Fice ' -- yid,

Meanwhile the warraest hear of the day had some on. The persont, exhausted with fatigue, little by little forgot his imprine and joy; one does not feel the tarring of third the best for walking beside a soint. He had began to regret his kindness, when Francis pointed with his tinger to a spring, naknewa till there, and which has never since been seen.³

At last they arrived at the foot of the last precipies, Before acaling it they paused to rest a little under a great eak, and inmediately flocks of hirds gathered around them, leadifying their joy by songs and flutterings of their wings. Hovering account Francis, they alighted on his head, his aboutders, or his arms. "Twee," he said joyfully to his companions, "that it is pheating to our Lord Jesus that we live in this solitary mount, since our brothers and sisters the birds have shown unch great delight at our coming." "

This mountain was at once his Taker and his Calvary. We must not wonder, then, that begends have flourished here even more numerously than at any other period of his life; the greater another of them have the exquisite charm of the little flowers, row and perfuned, which hile themselves modestly at the feet of the tir-trees of Verm.

The annuar nights up there are of imparalleled beauty: inture, utilied by the heat of the min, accume then to breathe mees. In the trees, behind this rocks, on the turf, a thousand voices riso up, sweetly harmonizing with the marriar of the great woods; but among all these voices there is not one which forces itself upon the attention, it is a moledy which you enjoy without listening. You let your eyes wander over the landscape, still for long hours illumined with hieratic tints by the departed star of day, and the peaks of the Apennines, flooded with rainbow lines, drop down into your soul what the Franciscan poet called the nostalgia of the everlasting hills.

¹ Flor, L. consider Conformer 18th, L.

^{*9 15}d , 2, 45; Rou., 110, Fior. L., comid.

^{*}Bun., IB. For. L. ronsid.

More than anyone Francis felt it. The very evening of their arrival, sented upon a mound in the midst of his Brothers, he gave them his directions for their dwellingրկաց.

The quick of nature would have sufficed to sow in their hearts some germs of sudness, and the voice of the master harmonized with the emotion of the last glowns of light; he apoke with them of his approaching death, with the regret of the laborer overtaken by the sludes of evening before the completion of his last, with the sight of the father who trembles for the future of his phildren.

For himself he desired from this time to prepare himself for ideath by prayer and contemplation; and he begged them to protect him from all intrusion. Oriende," who had atready come to hid them welcome and offer his corvices, had at his request limitly caused a lint of bringhs to be under, at the foot of a great brech. It was there that he desired to dwell, at a stone's throw from the cells inhabited by his companions. Brother Lee was charged to bring him each day that which he would need.

¹² Col., 100. " Plor, B., consid.

⁸ The rubic of the castle of Phinst are three quarters of an hour from Vertor.

The relired to it immediately after this memorable conversation, but according later, endocrossed no doubt by the pions curiosity of the triars, who watched all his mayoments, he went further into the woods, and on Assunaption Day he there began the land which he desired to observe in honor of the Archangel Michael and the colertial host.

Clonium line its moderdy net well as love. The poel, the artist, the mint, need to be alone when the Spirit come to move them. Every effort of thought, of imagination or of will in a prayer, and one does not pray in public.

Alas for the man who has not in his immost heart some accret which may not be told, because it cannot ke apoken, and because if it were spoken if could not be an derstood. Such trees which will be son felt it deeply the raphness of Taber are brief; they may and be table.

Before These coul mysteries and cridists and devotes often meet and are of one mirel in demanding precision those things which can the least endure it.

The heliever usles in what spot on the Verna Franci received the stigmata; whether the ceraph which appears to him was decase or a celestial spirit; what words were spoken as he imprinted there upon him; and he a more understands that hour when Francis awarded wit woo and love than the underinlist, who asks to see withis over and touch with his bunds the gaping wound.

Last un try to avoid those extremes. Last no hear whrethe documents give us, and not seek to do them violences to wreat from those what they do not tell, what they causant tell.

[•] Blor, is and a count. These two conditional impour to be the result of a reworking of the primitive decrement. The latter medialities decrement. The latter medialities decrement has interpolated and lengthermal. Of. Conferm., 231s, 1; Spec., 1914, 92a, 197; A. 88a, pp. 860 ff.

They show us Francis distressed for the future of the Order, and with an infinite desire for new spiritual progress.

He was consumed with the fever of saints, that need of immolation which wrung from St. Theresa the passionate cry, "Either to suffer or to die!" He was bitterly repreaching himself with not having been found worthy of martyrdem, not having been able to give himself for Him who gave himself for us.

We touch here upon one of the most pewerful and mysterious elements of the Christian life. We may very easily not understand it, but we may not for all that deny it. It is the root of true mysticism. The really new thing that Jesus brought into the world was that, feeling himself in perfect union with the heavenly Father, he called all men to unite themselves to him and through him to God: "I am the vine, and ye are the branches; he who abides in me and I in him brings forth much fruit, for apart from me ye can do nothing."

The Christ net only preached this union, he made it felt. On the evening of his last day he instituted its sacrament, and there is probably no sect which denies that communion is at ence the symbol, the principle, and the ond of the religious life. For eighteen centuries Christians who differ en everything else cannot but look with one accord to him who in the upper chamber instituted the rite of the new times.

The night before he died he took the bread and brake

In current language we often include under the word mysticism all the tendencies—often far from Christian—which give predominance in the religious life to vagne poetic elements, impulses of the heart. The name of mystic ought to be applied only to those Christians to whom immediate relations with Jesus form the basis of the religious life. In this sense St Paul (whose theologico-philosophical system is one of the most powerful efforts of the human mind to explain sin and redemption) is at the same time the prince of mystics.

it and distributed it to them, saying, "TAKE AND EAR, FOR THIS IS MY BODY."

Jesus, while presenting union with himself as the very foundation of the new life, took care to point out to his brothren that this union was before all things a sharing in his work, in his struggles, and his sufferings: " het him that would be my disciple take up his cross and follow no."

St. Paul onlered ac perfectly into the Mander's thought in this respect that he aftered a few years later this ery of a mystician that has never been equalled; "I have been cracified with Christ, yet I live . . . or rather, it is not I who live, but Christ who livelli in me." This atterance is not an isolated exclamation with him, it is the very centre of his religious consciousness, and he goes so far as to say, at the risk of remaditizing many a Christian; "I fill up in my body that which is backing of the sufferings of Christ, for his body's take, which is the Church."

Porhaps it has not been motion to enter into these thoughts, to above to what point Francis during the last years of his life, where to renews in his loady the possion of Christ, is allied to the apostolic tradition.

In the solitudes of the Verm, as formerly at St. Damian, Jeans presented himself to him under his form of the Crucified One, the man of norrows.

That this intercourse has been described to us in a people and inexact form is nothing surprising. It is the contrary that would be corprising. In the parexysous

Of the distance to the the the transition, for the test the excity of the servance and degrace. (The operation continued to treatment the dowish temple. Ada, 5., 40., 56., 1., v., 25., xxl., 26.) Her leaded to turnship the world with a new life.

²² Gal., 3, 29; ef. 4 Cel., 115; 3 Sec., 13 and 14; 3 Cel., 1, 6; 3 Cel., 8, 423 and 431; 16cc, 67; 424; 200; 204; 224; 225; 300; 310; 311; Conform., 2205 ff.

of divine love there are inefficialite which, for from being able to relate them or make those understood, we can hardly recall to our own minds.

Francis on the Veron was even more absorbed than usual in his ardered desire to suffer for Jesus and with him. This days went by divided between exercises of piety in the fundte sanctuary on the mountain-tap and muditation in the depths of the forest. It even happened to turn to forget the services, and to remain several days alone in some cave of the rock, going over in his heart the memories of Golgetha. At other times he would remain for long hours at the foot of the altar, reading and re-reading the Gospel, and entreating God to show him the way in which he ought to walk.

The hook almost always opened of itself to the story of the Passion, and this simple coincidence, though easy amough to explain, was enough of itself to excite him.

The vision of the Crucified One took the fuller possession of his incultion on the day of the Elevation of the tody Cross drew near (September 14th), a festival new relegated to the background, but in the thirteenth contary cotchrated with a ferver and zeal very matural for a solomidty which might be considered the pulconal festival of the Cruesdes.

Francis doubled his firstings and prayers, a quite transformed into deans by love and compassion," says one of the legends. The passed the night before the festival atom in prayer, not far from the hermitage. In the meaning he had a vision. In the rays of the ricing sun, which after the chill of night came to revive his body, he suddenly perceived a stronge form.

A soraph, with outspread wings, flow toward him from the edge of the horizon, and buthed his soul in raphura mantterable. In the centre of the vision appeared a cross, and the scruph was nailed upon it. When the vision disappeared, he felt aburp sufferings mingling with the century of the first moments. Stired to the very depths of his being, he was maximally seeking the meaning of it all, when he perceived upon his body the stigmata of the Cracified.

^{) |} Cal., 01 oc. Bon., 189, 199.

Pau the amountainment Brother Lee upon the autocraph of St. Francis (Ort. Study, p. 467) and t Col., 94, 95; Bon., 491, 492, 493 (4 Son., 69, 70); Far. iii consid. Cf. Anct. iii, sor; A. 68., p. 649.—It be to be added that Thomas of Colomb Col., 95), as well as all the primitive dominants, describe the allgmate as being fleshy excreceeness, resulting in form and other the nalls with which the limbe of Jesus were pleased. No one speaks of those gaping, cantidineous wounds which were language institute. Only the mark at the side was a wound, whether a times examine a little blood. Fluidy, Thomas of Colomb anys that after the geraphic vision began to appear, conservat apparers signs charorum. Vide Appandix: Study of the Edginates.

CHAPPER XVIII

THE CANTICLE OF THE SHY

Autumn, 1224 Aulumn, 1225

The morning after St. Michael's Day (September 30, 1224) Prancis quitted Vorm and went to Portinnents, Ito was too much exhausted to think of making the journey on foot, and Count Orlando put a horse at his disposal.

We can imagine the emotion with which he bade adiou to the mountain on which had been unfolded the drama of love and pain which had consummated the union of his entire being with the Crucified One.

Amor, amor, Gem denderoso,
Amor veglio mertre,
To aluzzando
Amor, doles Clena, meo apuno,
Amor, amor, la merte le domando,
Amor, amor, le merte le domando,
Amor, amor, Clena el pleteso
Tu me le dul in la transformato
Papea ch' la va apusanndo
Non na e la me ch
Clena speranza mb
Orand va, dorad la moro.

So sang (lincopone dei Podi in the raptures of a like love.)

Phirty-sixth and last strophs of the song found in the collection of Bt. Fraude's works.

Amor de caribale Perche m' hai si ferilo?

If we are to believe a recently published document, the Brother Massec, one of those whice mained on the Verm, used a written account of the events of this day.

They set out early in the morning. Francis, after larving given his directions to the Brothers, had had a look and a word for everything around; for the rocks, the flowers, the trees, for brother lawk, a privileged character which was authorized to outer his cell at all times, and which came every morning, with the first glimmer of dawn, to remind bin of the hour of service,²

Then the little land ast forth upon the path bading to Monte Acuto. Arrived at the gap from whence one gote the last sight of the Vermi, Francis olighted from his house, and kneeding upon the earth, his face furned low-ard the mountain, "Adien," he said, "mountain of God, soured mountain, mous compilates, mous pinguis, mous in que bene placitum est Dea habiture; adien Monte-Vermi, may God blens thee, the Father, the Son, and the Huly Spirit; abide in peace; we shall never new one mother more,"

This not this arthesi oceno a delicious and poignant sweetness? The must ourely have aftered these words, in which suddenly the Halian does not sufflee and Fran-

I by the Able' Amond, of the close of the edition of the Finedil, Remote vol., 12 nm, 1899, pp. 1800-1802. We see but these more cognet the observed the obttor selection manuscript where he has drawn those closure, the observed where he has drawn those closures pages. Cortain in the atoms seem distributed in the outlier having without it before the council take of the thirteenth contary; on the other hand, the object of a forgery be not evident. An apochryphal place always betrays itself by come interested purpose, but been the steep is of an infantine shouldby.

^[2] Col., R. 101; Bon, 140; For B. compl.

S Parti san Francesco per Monte Acute perodocolo la via di Monte Arcoppo a del foresto. This roud from the Verna to Horgo time Supolem is far from heing the shortest or the easiest, for instead of heating directly in the plate it Horgon for long hours among the hills. In not all Francis be this clodes?

eis is obliged to resort to the mystical language of the breviary to express his feelings.

A few minutes later the rock of the ecstaey had disappeared. The descent into the valley is rapid. The Brethers had decided to spend the night at Monte-Casale, the little hermitage above Borgo San-Sepolero. All of them, even those who were to remain on the Verna, were still following their master. As for him, absorbed in thought he had become entirely oblivious to what was going on, and did not even perceive the noisy enthusiasm which his passage aroused in the numerous villages along the Tiber.

At Borgo San-Sopolero he received a real evation without even then coming to himself; but when they had some time quitted the town, he seemed suddenly to awake, and asked his companion if they ought not soon to arrive there.

The first evening at Monto Casale was marked by a miraclo. Francis healed a friar who was possessed.² The next morning, having decided to pass several days in this hormitage, ho sent the brothers back to the Verna, and with them Count Orlando's horse.

In one of the villages through which they had passed the day before a woman had been lying several days between death and life unable to give birth to her child. Those about her had only learned of the passage of the saint through their village when be was too far distant to be overtaken. We may judge of the joy of these poor people when the rumor was spread that he was about to return. They went to meet him, and were terrihly disappointed on finding only the friars. Suddenly an idea occurred to them: taking the bridle of the horse consecrated by the touch of Francis's hands, they carried it to the sufferer, who, having build it upon her landy, gave birth to her child willout the alightest pain.

s tel., b, 41; Bon., 141; Fisr. w. consid.

2 1 Cel., 63 and 64; Fior. iv. consid.

This miracle, established by narratives entirely anthoutic, shows the degree of cuthusiasm felt by the people for the person of Francis. As for him, after a few days at Monte-Casole, he set out with Brother Inc for Città di Castello. He there healed a woman suffering from frightful nervous disorders, and remained an onlire menth preaching in this city and its environs. When he once more set forth winter had almost closed in. A pengant lent him his neg, but the roads were so bud blad they were mucble to reach any next of shelter has fore nightfall. The unluppy travellers were obliged to pass the night under a rock; the shelter was more than rudinculary, the wind drifted the snow in apon them, and meanly froze the unlucky peresent, who with atominuble outlis heaped curves on Francis; but the latter replied with much cheerfulness that he tende him at last lorget light the cold and his bad ligner.

On the morrow this saint reached Portingentia. He sooms to have made only a brief half there, and to have set forth again almost immediately to evangelize Southearn Umbria.

It is impossible to follow him in this mission. Brother Elias accompanied him, but so feeble was he flat Elias could not concent his unensiness us to his life.²

Ever since his return from Syria (August, 1920), he had been growing continually weaker, but his fervor had increased from day to day. Nothing could check him, neither suffering nor the entreaties of the Brothers; sended on an ass he would conclined go over three or four villages in one day. Such excessive trid brought on an infirmity even more painful than my he had hitherto suffered from: he was threatened with loss of sight.

¹⁴ Col., 70; Fine. in consid.

⁹ I Col., 100; 60; Hon. 208. Ferhaps we must refer to this circuit the visit to Colano. 2 Col., 9, 30; Sprc., 22; Bon., 156 and 157.

Meanwhite a sedition land forced Honorius L.I. to leave Rome (end of April, 1225). After passing a few weeks at Tivoli, he established himself at Rieti, where he remained until the end of 1226.

The pope's arrival had drawn to blue city, with the entire pointificat court, several physicians of renown; Cardiont Ugoliid, who had come in the pope's brain, henring of Francis's nochedy, summoned him to Rieli for treatment. But notwillustanding Brother Etins's entreaties Francis hesitated a long time as to accepting the invitation.³ He seemed to him that a sick man has but one thing to do; place himself purely and simply in the lunds of the heavenly Publics. What is pain to a soul that is fixed in God 1.3

Hins, however, at hist overenne his objections, and the journey was determined upon, but first Francis desired to go and take leave of Chara, and enjoy a fillle rest near her.

The remained at St. Damian much longer than he had proposed to do * (end of July to beginning of September, 1225). This arrival at this beloved monstery was marked by a terrible aggravation of his malady. For lifteen days he was so completely blind that he could not even distinguish light. The care lavished upon him produced no result, since every day he passed long hours in weeping terms of penilence, he said, but also of regret. Ah, how different they were from those teams of

^{§ 1} Cel., 97 and 98; 2 Cel., 3, 197; Bon., 205 and 206.

² Richard of St. Gormano, oun. 1225. 13f. Polilinst, 7400 ff.

^{3 1} Col., 98 and 49 ; 2 Col., 3, 437; Fior., 19,

^{§2} Col., 8, 110 ; Rule of 1921, cap. 40.

⁸ Sea the reference to the nurreer after the Cantillo of the San-

^{* 9} Cal. , 8, 138,

his momenta of inspiration and emotion, which had flowed over a countenance all illumined with joy! They had seen him, in such moments, take up two hits of wood, and, accompanying himself with this rustic violin, improvise French songs in which he would pour out the abundance of his beart.

But the radionee of genius and hope had become dinuned. Ruchel weeps for her children, and will not be comforted because they are not. There are in the tours of Franciscthis mune quin non and for his spiritual sons.

But if there are irremediable pains there are none which may not book once elevated and softened, when we endure them at the side of these who tave us.

In this respect his companions could not be of much help to him. Mural considerious are possible only from our pears, or when two hearts are united by a mystical passion so great that they mingle and understand one another.

"Ah, if the Bridhers knew what I suffer," St. Francis said a few days before the impression of the stigmats, "with what pity and compression they would be moved!"

But they, seeing him who had laid chreefulness upon them as a duty becoming more and more and and keeping about from them, imagined that he was textured with temptations of the devil.

Clara divided that which could not be aftered. At St. Danian her friend was looking lack everall the past; what memories lived again in a single glancel. Here, the olive-been to which, a brilliant cavalier, he had fastened his horse; there, the stone beach where his friend, the priest of the pour chapel, used to sit; youler, the hiding-place in which he had taken refuge from the pater nal wrath, and, ahove all, the sanctuary with the mysterious crucifix of the decisive hour.

Chis incident appeared to the nutions so possibler that they one plantical it with an atomics enterms. 2 Cal., 9, 67; Spec., 110s.

Sprc., 198a ; 2 Col., 8, 58.

In living over these pictures of the radical past, Francis aggravated his pain; yet they spoke to hince of other things than death and regret. Chara was there, as steadfast, as ardent as ever. Long ago transformed by admiration, she was now transfigured by compassion. Sented at the feet of him whose she loved with more than earthly love she felt the serences of his sent, and the failing of his heart. After that, what did it autter that Francis's tears became more abundant to the point of making him blind for a fortnight? Scothing would come; the sister of consolution would give him peace once more.

And first she kept him near her, and, herself taking part in the labor, she made him a large cell of reeds in the monastery garden, that he might be entirely at liberty as to his movements.

How could be refuse a hospitality so theroughly Franciscan? It was indeed only too much so: legious of rats and mice infested this retired spot; at night they ran over Francis's bed with an infernal uprear, so that he could find no repose from his sufferings. But he soon forget all that when near his sister-friend. Once again she gave back to him faith and courage. "A single suffering," he used to say, "is eaough to drive away many shadows!"

Tattle by little the num of the former days began to show himself, and at lines the Sisters would hear, mingling with the marmar of the clive trees and pines, the ceho of matamilian songs, which seemed to come from the cell of reeds.

One day he had seated himself at the monastery table after a long conversation with Clara. The meal had hardly begun where suddenly he seemed to be rapt away in cestary.

¹⁶ Landato sia to Signore I" he eried on coming to himself. The had just composed the Cantielo of the Sun!

$TEXT^{-3}$

TROPHUNT LADIOFS CREATURARUM
QUAS PEOTT BEATOS FRANCISCOS AO LADIOEM ET HONOREM DEI

COM ESDET INFORMUS AD SANOTUM DAMIANUM.

Altrigimic annipotente, bon rignere, the such lands to glovin a l'onare et sum bonedictions, Arl to sale, ultissimo, se konfune et milly hama ene digne te mentovare.

Landalo nie, mi signore, cum trate lo tue creaturo spotialmento necsor to trato sole, la qualo jorno, et illumini per tui; Et ella è bella e radionte cum grande splendore; do to, alticsimo, porto cignificatione.

Laudato ai, mi signore, per sero luna e le stelle, in celu l'Ai formate clarite et protione et belle,

- Eundata ni, na niguore, per frato vento et per nere ef militic et neremi et anne tempo, per le quale a le tue creature dai anstentumente.

- I have combined Cobacch narrative with that of the Conformillos. The details given in the latter document appear to no entirely worthy of faith. It is easy to see, however, why Cobacc amitted them, and it combit to difficult to explain how they could have been later invested, 2 Unit, 3, 1984, Conform., 426, 2; 1905, 1; 1816, 2; 280a, 2; 8pc, 190a if, ; For., 10.
- ¹ After the Assless Met., 338, 4° 338. Vide p. 354. Father Paulic du Mugliune har already published it after this manuscript: Stockrampendies of Son Fernesco, Rome, 2 vola., 185m., 1874–1876. The Conformities, 2025, 2 203a I, give a version of it which differs from this only by hedgeddeant variations. The followed philologue Munacl has established a very remarkable critical lext to his Presionaria indiana dai princi seed. Clits of Gastello, fas. 1, 1920, 200, pp. 29-34. This thermognity scriptions work dispenses one from indicating manuscripts and critical mane at length.

Landato si, mi signore, per sor acqua, la quale è multo utile et humele et pretiosa et easta.

Laudato si, mi siguore, per frate focu, per lo quale ennallamini la nocte, ed ello à bello et jucundo et robustoso et forte.

Landato si, mi signore, por sora nostra matre terra, la quale ne sustenta et governa ot produce diversi fructi con colorite flori et herba.

Landato si, mi signore, per quilli ke perdemase per lo tuo amoro of sostongo infirmitate of tribulations. boati quilli ko sostorrano in paco, ka da te, altissimo, sirmo incoronati.

Landato si, mi signore, per sora nostra morte corporale, do la qualo nullu homo vivente po skappare: guni a quilli ko marrano no le peccata mertali ; licati quilli ke se trovarà no le tuo sanctissime voluntati, ka la morto secunda nol farrà malo, Tandato of bonodiceto mi signore of rengratiate et serviteli cum grande lumilitate.

TRANSLATION.

O most high, almighty, good Ford God, to thee belong praise, glory, honor, and all blessing l

Praised to my Lord God with all his creatures, and specially our brother the sun, who brings us the day and who brings us the light; fair is he and shines with a very great splendor: O Lord, he signifies to us thee l

Praised be my Lord for our sister the moon, and for the stars, the which he has set clear and levely in heaven.

Praised be my Lord for our brother the wind, and for air and cloud, calms and all wouther by the which thou upholdost life in all creatures.

⁾ Matthew Arnold, Essays in Criticism, First Series. Macmillan & Company, 1883.

Praised being Lord for our sister water, who is very serviceable unto us and hundle and previous and clean.

Preised to my Lord for our trother fire, through whom then givest in light in the darkness; and he is bright and pleusant and very mighty and strong.

Praised for my Lord for our mother the earth, the which dolls austain as and keep us, and bringeth forth divers fruits and flowers of many colors, and grass.

١

Praised be my Lord for all those who pardon one another for his love's sake, and who endure weakness and tribulation; blessed are they who peaceably shall endure, for them, O most Highest, shall give them a grown.

Praised by my Lord for our sister, the death of the hody, from which no non-excapath. We to him who dieth in mortal sin! Blessed are they who are found walking by thy most holy will, for the second death shall have no power to be them harm.

Praise ye and Ideas the Lord, and give thanks unto him and serve him with great humility.

Juy had returned to Francia, joy as deep as ever. Bur a which week he forecook his broviory and passed his days in repealing the Cantiele of the Sun.

During a night of electerances he had heard a voice saying to him," If then hadet faith as a grain of mushard seed, then woulded only to this mountain, 'Be then removed from there,' and it would move away." Was not the mountain that of his authorings, the temptation to murmur and despair? "The it, hard, according to thy word," he had replied with all his heart, and immediately he had felt that he was delivered."

He might have perceived that the mountain had not greatly changed its place, but for several days he had turned his eyes away from it, be had been able to forget its existence.

For a moment he thought of summoning to his side Brother Pacifico, the King of Verse, to retouch his canticle; his idea was to attach to him a certain number of friers, who would go with him from village to village, preaching. After the sermon they would sing the Hynn of the Sun; and they were to close by saying to the crowd gathered around them in the public places, "We are God's jugglers. We desire to be paid for our sermon and our song. Our payment shall be that you persovere in penitonce."

"Is it not in fact true," he would add, "that the servants of God are really like jugglers, intended to revive the hearts of men and lead them into spiritual joy?"

The Francis of the old raptures had come back, the layman, the poet, the artist.

The Canticle of the Creatures is very noble: it lacks, however, one straphe; if it was not mon Francis's lips, it was surely in his heart:

He pealed, Lord, for Shiter Chen; thou hast made her allow, active, and segnatus, and by her thy light shims in our hearts.

¹ Spec., 124a. Of. Miscellanea (1880), iv., p. 88.

OHAPPER XIX

THE LAST YEAR

Buptourbur, 1995 - Earl of Doptombor, 1996

Where did Updini think when they told him that Francis was planning to need him friers, transformed into downlatores Domini, to sing up and down the country the Cantiele of Brother Sun? Perbaps he never heard of it. The prolégé finally decided to accept his invitation and left St. Damina in the course of the month of September.

The landscape which lies before the eyes of the traveller from Assisi, when he suddenly emerges upon the plain of Rich, is one of the most beautiful in Europs, From Terri the read follows the sincous course of the Veline, passes not far from the famous cascades, whose clouds of mist are visible, and then plunges into the destiles in whose depths the forcest rashes noisily, checked by a vegetation as translant as that of a virgin forest. On all sides uprise walls of perpendicular racks, and on their creats, several hundred yards above your head, are found fortresses, among others the Castle of Miranda, more giddy, more fantastic than any which Castleys Durch fancy over dreamed.

After four hours of walking, the defile opens out and you flud yourself without transition in a broad valley, aparking with light.

Itieli, the only city in this plain of acveral leagues, appears for away at the other extremity, commanded by hills of a theroughly trepical aspect, behind which rise the mighty Apennines, almost always covered with snow.

The highway goes directly toward this town, passing between tiny lakes; here and there roads lead off to little villages which you see, en the hillside, between the cultivated fields and the edge of the forests; there are Stroncone, Greccio, Cantalice, Poggio-Buscone, and ten other small towns, which have given more saints to the Church than a whole province of France.

Between the inhabitants of the district and their neighbors of Umbria, properly so called, the difference is extreme. They are all of the striking type of the Sabine peasants, and they remain to this day entire strangers to new customs. One is born a Capuchin there as elsewhere one is born a soldier, and the traveller needs to have his wits about him net to address every man he meets as Reverend Father.

Francis had often gene over this district in every direction. Like its neighbor, the hilly March of Ancena, it was peculiarly prepared to receive the new gespel. In these hermitages, with their almost impossible simplicity, perched near the villages on every side, withent the least care for material comfort, but always where there is the widest possible view, was perpetuated a race of Brothers Miner, impassioned, preud, stubborn, almost wild, whe did not wholly understand their master, who did not eatch his exquisite simplicity, his impossibility of hating, his dreams of social and political renovation, his poetry and delicacy, but whe did understand the lover of nature and of poverty. They did more than understand him; they lived his life, and from that Christmas festival observed in the woods of Greecie down to to-day they have remained the simple and popular representatives of the Strict Observance. From them comes to us the Legend of the Three Companions, the most life-like and true of all the portraits of the Poverolle, and it was there, in a cell three paces long, that Gievanni di Parma had his apocalyptic visions.

¹ The following is the list of monasteries which, according to Rodelfo di Tossignano, accopted the ideas of Angele Clarene before the end of the thirteenth century: Ferme, Spolete, Camerine, Asceli, Rieti, Foligne, Nursia Aquila, Amelia: Historianum seraphica religionis, libritres, Venice, 1586, 1 vol., f°, 155a.

The news of Francis's arrival quickly spread, and long before he reached Rieti the population had come out to meet him.

To avoid this noisy welcome he craved the hospitulity of the priest of St. Fabian. This little church, now known under the name of Our Lady of the Forest, is somewhat aside from the read upon a grassy mound about a league from the city. He was heartly welcomed, and desiring to remain there for a little, prelates and devetees began to flock thither in the next few days.

It was the time of the early grapes. It is easy to imagine the disquietude of the priest on perceiving the ravages made by these visitors among his vines, his best source of revenue, but he probably exaggerated the damage. Francis one day heard him giving vent to his bull humor. "Father," he said, "it is useless for you to disturb yourself for what you cannot hinder; but, tell me, how much wine de you get on an average?"

"Fourteen measures," replied the priest.

"Very well, if you have less than twenty, I undortake to make up the difference."

This premise reassured the worthy man, and when at the vintage he received twenty measures, he had no hesitation in believing in a miracle.¹

Upon Ugolini's ontreaties Francis had accepted the

¹ Spec., 129b; Fior., 19. In some of the stories of this period the evidence is clear how certain facts have been, little by little, transformed hospitality of the bishop's palace in Ricti. Thomas of Colume endarges with delight upon the marks of devetion havished on Francis by this prince of the Church. Unhappily all this is written in that pompons and confused style of which diplomats and occlosiastics appear to have by nature the secret.

Francis entered ado the condition of a relia in his lifetime. The mania for moulets displayed itself around him in all its excesses. People quarrelled not only over his clothing, but even ever his baic and the parings of his mils.

Did these morely exterior demonstrations disgust him? Did he semetimes think of the contrast between these honors effected to his body, which he picturesquely called Brother Ass, and the subversion of his ideal? We cannot tell. If he had feelings of this kind these who surrounded him were not the men to understand them, and it would be idle to expect any expression of them from his pen.

Soon after he had a relapse, and asked to be removed to Monte-Colombo, a hermitage an hour distant from the city, hidden amidst trees and senttered rocks. He had already retired thither several times, notably when he was proparing the Rule of 1223.

The doctors, having exhausted the therapeutic arsonal of the time, decided to resort to centerization; it was decided to draw a red of white-hot iron across his ferelical.

When the poor patient saw them bringing in the brazier and the instruments be had a moment of terror; but into miracles. Camparo, for example, the miracle of St. Urbano in Bonq 68, and 1 Col., 61.—See also 2 Col., 2, 10; Roc., 158 and 150.

Cl Cal., 87; 2 Col., 2, 11; Conform., 148a, 2; Ros., 90. Tipon this visit see 2 Col., 2, 10; Ros., 158 and 150; 2 Col., 2, 11; 2 Col., 3, 36.

^vThe present Italian name of the monastery which has also been called Monte Rainerio and Fonte Polands.

immediately making the sign of the cross over the glowing iron, "Brother tire," he said, "you are beautiful above all creatures; be favorable to me in this hour; you know how much t have always toved you; he then consteous to-day."

Afterward, when his compusions, who had not had the courage to remain, came luck he said to them, smiling, "Oh, cowardly folk, why did you go uway? I felt no pain. Brother doctor, if it is necessary you may do it again."

This experiment wan no more successful than the other remedies. In vain they quickened the wound on the forehead, by applying planters, valves, and even by making incinious in it; the only result was to increase the pains of the authors.

One day, at Rieti, whither he had again been carried, he thought that a little numic would relieve his pain. Calling a friar who had formerly been clover at playing the guitar, he begged him to borrow one; but the friar was afraid of the seamful which this might cause, and Francia gave it up.

Cod took pity more him; the following night he sent un invisible anget to give him such a concert as is never heard on earth. Prancis, henring it, lost all bodity feeling, say the Fibretti, met at one moment the melody was so sweet and penetrating that if the angel had given one more stroke of the how, the cick man's scall would have left his body.

It seems that there was none amelicration of his state when the destern left him; we find him during the months of this winter, 1225-1226, in the most remote hermitages of the district, for as soon as he had a little strength he was determined to begin preaching again.

¹ I Col., 101; 2 Pol., 3, 102; Bon., 67; Spec., 1348.

^{* 2} Col., 8, 16 ; Bort., 18t.

^{58.} O. consid. Of Roger Russia, Open territoria (up. Mon. Herm., 1, 28, p. 577). B. Franciscus Jussit fratei sytharisto at word, quaterns mens excitaretur ad harmonias calestes (etc. Graevim musics super amues scientias et spec-

He went to Peggio-Busenne¹ for lim Christmus festival. People flocked thither in crowds from all the comtry round to see and hear him. "You come here," he said, "expecting to find a great saint; what will you think when I tell you that I ato must all through Advent?" At St. Eleutheria, at a time of extreme cold which tried him much, he had sown some pieces of staff into his own tunic and that of his companion, so as to make their garments a little warmer. One that his lare he proposed to line his master's tunic. Francis rejoiced much over it, but would permit this excessor consideration for his bady only on condition that the piece of fur should be placed on the outside over his chest,

All these incidents, almost insignificant at a first view, show how he detested hypocrisy even in the smallest things.

We will not follow him to his dow Greecio, nor even to the hermitage of St. Urlamo, perched on one of the highest peaks of the Satine. The accounts which we

¹ Village three hours' walk northward rom Rhdl. Frauda's call still regulation in the mountain, three-purfers of an hour from the place.

^{2.2} Cht., 8, 71 ; rd. Spre., 44a.

^{*} Chapid attill attitulting, a few infantes' widle from Rbitl. 2 Cel., 3, 70; Spec., 45a, 43a.

^{4 2} Cal., 2, 14 ; Huic, 467; 2 Cel., 3, 40; Bon., 58; Spir., 1226, b Wathling, ann. 1918, n. 11, rightly planes St. Drbano in the county of Narni. E-Evennodi St. Urbano is about half an hour from the village of the same name, on Mount San Panerazia (1920 m.), three leaguest with of Narni. The panerana is one of the threat in Central Italy. The Bulbandian allowed thousanders to be belief over by an inferested assortion when they planed San Urbano near to test (pp. 8237 and 624a). 1 Cel., 61; Ban., 68. (Vibb Bidl Cum alique of May 15, 1218, where mention is reach of San Urbano.)

have of the brief visits he made there at this time tell us nothing new of his character or of the history of his life. They simply show that the imaginations of these who sorrounded him were extraordinarily overheated; the least incidents immediately took on a miraeulous coloring.

The documents do not say how it cause about that he decided to go to Sienna. It appears that there was in that city a physician of great fame as an ocalist. The treatment he prescribed was no more successful than that of the others; but with the return of spring Francis made a new effort to return to active life. We find him describing the ideal Franciscan monastery, and another day explaining a passage in the Bilde ten Dominican.

Did the latter, a dector in theology, desire to bring the rival Order into ridicale by showing its founder inexpable of explaining a somewhat difficult verse? It appears extremely likely. "My good father," he said, "how do you understand this saying of the prophet Ezekiel, 'If thou dost not warn the wicked of his wickedness, I will require his soul of thee?' I am acquainted with many men whem I know to be in a state of mortal sin, and yet I am not always representing them for their vices. Am I, then, responsible for their souls?"

Ak first Francis excused himself, alleging his ignorance, but urged by his interloculer he said at last: "Yes, the true servant unconsingly redukes the wicked, but he does it most of all by his conduct, by the truth which shines forth in his words, by the light of his example, by all the radiance of his life."

Ho soon suffered so grave a relapse that the Brothers

¹ As much may be said of the apparition of the three virgles between Campilla and Sau Quicks. 2 Col., B. H7: Hod., BB.

Spec., 19b; Conform., 160a, 1.

³² Col., 8, 46; Hon., 168; Spec., 111b; Ezok, xxxIII., 0.

thought his lask hour had come. They were especially affrighted by the hemorrhages, which reduced him to a state of extreme prostration. Brother Clies hastened to him. At his arrival the invalid felt in himself such an improvement that they could acquiesce in his desire to be taken back to Umbria. Toward the middle of April they seleont, going in the direction of Cortons. It is the easiest route, and the delightful hermitage of that city was one of the best ordered to permit of his taking some repose. If e doubtlers remained there a very short time: he was in haste to see once more the skies of his mative country, Portimenta, St. Daminu, the Carreri, all those public and hamlets which one nees from the terraces of Assisi and which recalled to him so many sweet memories.

Tustend of going by the nearest read, they made a long circuit by Cubhic and Nocera, to avoid Perugia, fearing some attempt of the inhabitants to get possession of the Saint. Such a relic as the body of Prancis lacked little of the value of the sacred nail or the sacred lance.\(^1\) Battles were fought for less than that.

They made a short halt near Nocera, at the hermitage of Bagnara, on the stopes of Monte-Pennine. His companious were again very much disturbed. The swelling which had shown itself in the tower limbs was rapidly grining the upper part of the hady. The Assistant learned this, and wishing to be prepared for whatever might happen sout their mon-at-arms to protect the Saint and hasten his return.

Bringing Francis back with them they stopped for food

⁴ Two years after, the King of France and all like court kissed and revered the pillow which Francis had used during his illness. 1 Cel., 120.

⁹ Bugnara is near the sources of the Topico, about an hour east of Nocora. These two localities were then dependents of Asslel.

at the launlet of Baleinne,' but in vain they begged the inhabitants to sell them provisions. As the escent were confiding their discountiture to the friers, Francis, who knew these good pessents, mid: "If you had asked for food without offering to pay, you would have found all you wanted."

Ho was right, for, following his advice, they received for nothing all that they desired.

The arrival of the party at Assisi was bailed with frantin joy. This time Francis's fellow-citizens were sure that the Saint was not going to die nounwhere olse."

Customs in this matter have changed too much for us to be able theroughly to comprehend the good fortune of possessing the body of a saint. If you are ever so unlucky as to mention St. Andrew before an inhabitant of Analfi, you will immediately find him beginning to shout "Envira San Andrea! Everira San Andrea!" Then with extraordinary volubility he will relate to you the legend of the Grande Protettore, his miracless past and present, those which he might have done if he had chosen, but which he refrained from doing out of charity because St. Jamarius of Naples could not do as much. He gestionships, throws himself about, hastless you, more enthusiastic over his relie and more exemperated by your coldness than a soldier of the Old Churd before an enemy of the Emperor.

In the Chirteenth contary all Europe was like that.

We shall find here several incidents which we may be tempted to consider shocking or even ignoble, if we do not make an effort to put them all into their proper surroundings.

And not Surtlane. Halelane all extets, about half may between Necoor and Assist.

² 2 Oct., 8, 98; Rom., 98; Spec., 176; Conform., 200a, 2f.

^{*2} Gel., 8, 33; I Gel., 115, is still more explicit: "The multitude hoped that he would die very mean, and that was the addicat of their joy."

Francis was installed in the bishop's palace; he would have preferred to be at Portinneala, but the Brothers were obliged to obey the injunctions of the populace, and to make assurance doubly sure, guards were placed at all the approaches of the palace.

The abode of the Saint in this place was unch longer than bad been anticipated. It perhaps lasted several months (July to September). This dying man did not consent to die. He robelled against death; in this centre of the work his auxieties for the future of the Order, which a little while before had been in the background, now returned, more agenizing and terrible than ever.

"We must begin again," he thought, "erente a new family who will not forget lumility, who will go and serve lopers and, as in the old times, put themselves always, not merely in words, but in reality, below all men."

To feel that implicable work of destruction going on against which the most submissive cannot keep from protesting: "My God, my God, why? why hast then forsaken 100?" To be obliged to look on at the still more dreaded decomposition of his Order; he, the lark, to be spied upon by saldings watching for his corpsethere was quite enough here to make him mortally sad.

During these hist weeks all his sighs were noted. The disappearance of the greater part of the legend of the Three Companious certainly deprives us of some touching stories, but most of the incidents have been preserved for ms, notwithstanding, in documents from a second hand.

Four Brothers had been especially charged to lavish care upon him: Leo, Angelo, Rulino, and Massoo. Wo already know them; they are of these intimate friends of the first days, who had heard in the Franciscan gospel a cult to toyo and liberty. And they too began to complain of everything.

One day one of them said to the sick man: "Pather, you are going away to leave us here; joint out to us, then, if you know him, the one to whom we might in all security confide the forelen of the generalship."

Alas, Francia did not know the ideal Brother, espable of assuming such a duty; but he took advantage of the question to akeleh the pertrait of the perfect minister-general.

We have two impressions of this portrait, the one which has been retouched by Celano, and the original proof, much shorter and more vague, but showing us Francia desiring that his successor shall have but a single weapon, an multerable boye.

It was preductly this question which suggested to him the thought of leaving for his accessors, the generals of the Order, a letter which they should pass on front one to mother, and where they should find, not directions for particular cases, but the very inspiration of their activity."

To the Reversed Father in Pheist, N Minkers Goueral of the until of the Brethers Miner. May that bless them and keep then in his hely love.

Pathence in all Heigs and everywhere, this, my Brother, is what I specially recommond. Even If they oppose these if they welke thee, thou shouldst be grateful to these and desire that it should be thus and not otherwise.

In this will be resulted thy love for time and for me, les servant and thine; that there shall not be a single friar to the world who, having should as reach as one can she, and country before three, shall go away without having received thy pardon. And if he does not ask it, do then ask it for him, whether he wills or not.

^д 1 Сећ., 163 г Spro., Вак

^{* 2} Col., B, 110; Spec., 97a; Conform., OBb, 1, and 225b; 2; 2 Col., B, 117; Spec., 130a.

^{*} For the lext vide Conform, Bull, 9; 1991, 9; 1994, 4.

And if he should return again a thousand times before thee, love him more than negrolf, in order to lead him to well-doing. Have pity always on those Brothers.

These words show plainly enough how in fermer days Francis had directed the Order; in his dream the ministers-general were to stand in a relation of pure affection, of tender devotion toward those under them; but was this possible for one at the head of a family whose branches extended over the cutire world? It would be hazardons to say, for among his successors have not been wanting distinguished minds and noble hearls; but save for Glovanni di Parma and two or three others, this ideal is in slump contrast with the reality. St. Bounventura himself will drag his master and friend, this very Cliovanni of Parma, before an ecclesiastical tribunal, will cause him to be condemned to perpetual imprisonment, and it will need the intervention of a cardinal outside of the Order to seems the commutation of this semtenco.4

The agenies of grief endured by the dying Francis over the decadence of the Order would have been less poignant if they had not been mingled with self-represented for his own cowardice. Why had he deserted his post, given up the direction of his family, if not from idleness and selfishness? And now it was too late to take back this step; and in hours of frightful anguish he asked himself if (ted would not hold him responsible for this subversion of his ideal.

"Ah, if I could go once again to the chapter-general," he would sigh, "I would show them what my will is."

Shultered as he was by fever, he would suddenly rise up in his bed, crying with a despairing intensity:

¹ Tribul., Archiv., H., pp. 285 ff.

"Where are they who have ravished my brothron from me? Where are they who have of their newny my family?"

Alas, the coal criminals were morror to him than he thought. The provincial ministers, of whom he appears to have been thinking when he thus apoke, were only instruments in the hands of the choice Brother Elias; and he what che was he doing but putting his intelligence and address at Caplinal Ugolini's survice?

For from finding any consolation in those around him, Francis was combantly testined by the confidences of his companions, who, impelled by mintaken real, aggravated his pain instead of enhuing it.

Progressing Father, "said one of them to him omeday," but many people have strongly thought what I am going to say to you. Yoo know low, in the early days, by Gol's grace the Reder wideof in the patient perfection; for all that removers possety and love, as well as for all the rest, the Brothers were left one heart and one seed. But for sugar time past all that in entirely changed it is true that people often excuse the Brothers by saying that the Order has grown too large to keep up the dd observances; they even see far as to claim that infilelities to the Rule, such as the building of great momentaries, and a means of cliffication of the people, and so the principle and pleasing to you; but then, people ask, why do you tolerate theory."

"Golf forgive you, brother," regited Prancis. "Why to you lay at my door things with which I bave nothing to do? So long as I had the direction of the Order, and the Brothere personance in their vorce flow I was able, in upite of weakness, to do what was modified. But when I naw that, without earing for my example or my leaching, they walked in the way you have described. I coulded them to the Larl and to the midshere. It is true that when I reinfield the discretion, alluging my inseparately as the motive, if they lead earlied to the way of my wishes I should not have desired that before my death they such have had any other admister than myself; though ill, though its dorn, even, I should have found strongth to perform the duties of my cloarge. But this charge is wholly spiritual; I will not become an executioner to strike and punish as political governors must,"

Francis's complaints became so slurp and bitter that, to avoid scandal, the greatest pradence was exercised with regard to those who were permitted to see him.²

Disorder was everywhere, and every day brought its contingent of subjects for sorrow. The confusion of ideas as to the practice of the Rule was extreme; occult influences, which had been working for several years, had succeeded in veiling the Framiscan ideal, not only from distant Brothers, or those who had newly joined the Order, but even from those who had lived under the influence of the founder.

Under circumstances such as those, Francis dictated the letter to all the members of the Order, which, as he thought would be read at the opening of chapters and perpetuate his spiritual presence in them.⁴

In this letter he is perfectly true to himself; as in the

¹ Those words are herrowed from a long fragment cited by Ubertial di Gasall, as coming from Brother Leo: Arbor vit. cruc., lib. v., cap. 3, it is unrely a lift of the Legend of the Three Companions; it may be found textually in the Tribulations, laur., f" lift, with a few more soulconess at the end.—Of. Conform., 19th, 2; 148a, 2; 5pec., 8h; 26b; 50a; 180b; 2 Col., 3l, 118.

² Tribut. Laur., 17h.

³ Soe, for example, Brother Richer's question as to the blocks: Ubartini, Low, vit. Cf. Archiv., III., pp. 75 and 177; Spec., 8a; Conform., 71b. 2. Soo abor: Ubertini, Archiv., III., pp. 75 and 177; Tribut., 18a; Spec., ib.; Conform., 170a, E. It is curious to compare the assemble as it found in the documents with the version of it given in 2 Col., 3, 8.

^{*}Anolal MS., 3818, f. 28a 31a, with the enterior: Do lietera et ammonitione localissimi patrix nostri Francisci quam misit fratribus ad capitalum quando crat fufirmus. This billor was wrongly divided into three by Rodolfa all Taselgumo (f. 237), who was followed by Woolding (Epistolor x., xi., xii.). The text is found without this semadom division in the manuscript elter and in Firmamentum, f. 21; Spec., Marin, III., 217a; Oberlini, Arbor vit. crus., v., T.

past, lor desires to influence flor. Brothers, not by repreaches but by fixing their eyes on the perfect holiness.

To all the revered and well-behaved throthers Miner, to Brother A., . . ., 1 whicher general, he bord, and techn ministenegement who shall be after blue, and to all the ministers, constellans, and priests of this fraternity, humble in the bill, and to all the simple and absolute Brothers, the oblest and the most recent, Brother Francis, a mean and perhaling man, your little corvant, given streeting f

Hear, my hards, you who are my some and my brothers, give our to my words. Open your hearts and shey the voice of the Sou of that. Keep like commandations with all your hearts, and perfectly abserve the commands. Praise him, for he is good, and ghorify him by your works.

Ond has nort you through all the world, that by your words and example you may lear witness of bim, and that you may teach all man that he alone is all powerful. Persovers in discipline and abadhums, and with an homest and then will keep that which you have promised.

After this opening Francis immediately passes to the essential uniter of the letter, that of the love and respect the to the Sacrament of the alter; faith in this mystery of love appeared to him indeed as the calvalion of the Order.

Was ho wrong? How can a man who truly believes in the real presence of the Cleat-Man between the fingers of him who lifts up the heed, not consecrate his life to this Cod and to hedinese? One has some difficulty in imagining.

It is true that legions of devalues profess the most absolute faith in this degrae, and we do not see that they are less bad; but faith with them belongs in the intel-

This fulfiel (given only by the Araba Mrt.) has not fulful to excite surprise. It appears that there might to have been simply as N . . . This letter then would have been replaced by the capylet, who would have used the initial of the satulater general in charge at the time of his writing. If this hypothesis has may weight it will all in fix the manuscript (Alberto of Pisa minister from 1939-1930) Almon of Faversham, 1240 (Alberto of Pisa minister from 1939-lectual sphere; it is the abdication of reason, and in sacrificing their intelligence to God they are most happy to offer to him an instrument which they very much prefer not to use.

To Irrneis the question presented itself quite differently; the thought that there could be any merit in believing could never enter his mind; the fact of the real presence was for him of almost concrete evidence. Therefore his faith in this mystery was an energy of the heart, that the life of Cod, mysteriously present upon the alter, might become the sent of all his actions.

To the enchuristic transubstantiation, effected by the words of the priest, he added another, that of his own hourt.

Und offern himself to me no to bis children. This is why I beg you, all of you, my brothern, kneeding your fact, and with all the live of which I am mapable, to lacke all possible respect for the body and blood of our Land Jama Christ.

Then addressing himself particularly to the priests:

Hearken, my brothers, if the blessed Virgin Mary is justly honored for baying carried decar to ber womb, it dobn the Baptist trendled beaximi bo dared nat touch the bords head, if the sapulabre in which for a little time he by is regarded with each great adviation, ch. how hely, pure, and worthy ideald be the priest who londed with his bands, who randyog into ids unoith and into his hourt, and who distributes in others the Heing, glarified down, the eight of whom makes angels rejoined Undecounted year dignity, brother priests, and he holy, for he is hely, Oh I what great wrotahodness and what a frightful ladeadty to have blue there present leafers you und to think of other things. Test coult mad by atemsk with unpazoment, but the whole earth trauble, let the heavons thell with joy when the Christ, the Son of the Hylag Hod, designeds upon the alter into the hemistof the priest. Oh, weatherful profundity i Oh, annaing general. Oh, Irlumph of humility to See, the Master of all things, And, and the Soo of And, launbles blusself for one sulvation, ayon to disgulating blumelf under the appearance of a bit of broad,

Contemplate, my brothers, tide hundlity of Gud, and endarge your bearts before blue; homble yourselves as well, that you, even you, may be lifted up by blue. Keep nothing for yourselves, that he may receive you without reserve, who has given bimself to you without reserve.

We see with what vigor of tove Francis's heart had hid hold upon the idea of the communion.

He closes with long counsels to the Brothers, and after having conjured them faithfully to keep their promises, all his mysticism treathes out and is annumed up in a prayer of admirable simplicity.

God Almighty, electual, dighteons, and uncreiful, give to an paper wretches to do for thy sake all that we know of thy will, and to will always what pleases thee; so that howardly partified, enlightenoil, and kindled by the the of the Hely Sphit, we may follow in the footprints of thy well beloved Son, our tord Jesus Christ.

What reparates this prayer from the offert to discorn duty made by choice spirits apart from all revealed religion? Very little in Iroth; the words are different, the action is the same.

But Prancis's adjeitudes reached for beyond the limits of the Order. His langest epistle is addressed to all Christians; its words are so living that you fancy you have a voice speaking behind you; and this voice, naually as more as that which from the reconstain in Califee proclaimed the law of the new times, becomes here and there multterally aweet, like that which consider in the upper classifier on the night of the first one harist.

As Jesus logal the cross that was standing in the shadows, so Francis forgets his sufferings, and, overcome with a divine andness, thinks of humanity, for each monder of which he would give his life; he thinks of his spiritual sons, the Brothers of Penitence, whom he is shout to leave without having been able to make them feel, as he would have had them feel, the love for them with which he burns: "Father, I have given them the words which then limst given me. . . For them I pray Γ

The whole Franciscan gospel is in these words, but to understand the fascination which it exerted we must have gone through the School of the Middle Ages, and there listened to the interminable tournaments of dialectics by which minds were dried up; we must have seen the Church of the thirteenth century, honeycombed by simony and havny, and only able, under the pressure of heresy or revolt, to make a few futile efforts to scotch the ovil.

To all Christians, marks, storbes, or byman, whether men or women, to all what dwall is the whole world. Brother Francis, their most substitute scretter, presents bis duty and whiles the tree poses of heaven, and shears have by the land.

Boing the servitor of all non, I um bound to serve them and to also points to them the wholesome words of my Muster. This is why, seeing I um too weak and ill to whit coult one of you in particular, I have resulved to coult you my meanage by this latter, and to offer you the words of our ford Josen Christ, the Word of God, and of the Holy Spirit, which are spirit and life.

It would be precite to expect here new ideas either in fact or form. Francis's appeals are of value only by the spirit which animates them.

After having briefly recalled the chief features of the gospel, and argently recommended the communion, I rancis addresses himself in particular to cartain categories of heavers, with special comsols.

Lat the purhedly, governors, and those who are placed in anthority, exercise their functions with morey, as they would be judged with morey by that.

Munka in particular, who have renormed the world, are bound to do more and leater than simple Christians, to renorme all that is not names may to them, and to have in hatred the views and should fine hody.

They should have their enemies, do good to them who hate them, observe the precents and comments of our Redeemer, renormed them.

solven, and subdue their bodies. And no monk is bound to obedience, if in obeying he would be addiged to commit a fault or a sin.

Let us not be wise and bearned according to the licele, but simple, humble, and pure. . . . We should never desire to be above utlans, but rather to be below, and be chey all men.

He closed by showing the foolishness of those who sot their hourts on the possession of earthly goods, and concludes by the very realistic picture of the death of the wicked.

His money, like little, this learning, all that he believed binned for pagesons, all one taken from little; like relatives and his friends to whom he has given his friends will come to divide it among thereselves, and will end by saying; "Chases on him, for he raight have given us more and he has not done it; he might have massed a larger facture, and he has done unthing of the kind." The worms will eat his body and the moon will consume his soul, and that he will lose both soul and make

I, Brother Finnels, your time very ter, I beg and receive with humility and love that is in God, ready to his your feet, to receive with humility and lave there and all other words of our Lord Jesus Christ and to conform your conduct to them. And let Basse who devently receive them and understand them possesses the others. And if they thus personers muto the end, may they be blessed by the Father, the Son, and thu Budy Spirit. Amon.

If Francia over number Rule for the Phird Order it must have very nearly resembled this opishe, and matilithis problematical document is found, the letter shows what were originally these resemistions of Brothers of Ponitomes. Everything in these long pages looks toward the development of the mystic religious life in the heart of each Christian. But even when Francis diclated them, this high view and becomes a Utopia, and the Third Order was only one battalion more in the arraics of the papace.

We saw thus the epiation which we have just examined proceed definitely from a single inspiration. Whether he is leaving justinetions for his successors, the unidators-general, whether he is writing to all the present and future members of his Order, to all Christians or even to the clergy, Francis has only one aim, to keep on preaching after his death, and perhaps, too, by putting into writing his message of peace and love, to provide that he shall not be entirely travestied or misunderstood.

¹ This equation also was nucklifully divided. Into two distinct latters by Robillo dl Tresignano, f. 174a, who was followed by Wachling. See Assist MS., 938, 23a-28a j. Conform., 137a, 1 ff.

Considered in connection with those sorrowful hours which saw their birth, they form a whole whose import and meaning become singularly energetic. If we would find the Franciscan spirit, it is here, in the Rule of 1221, and in the Will that we must seek for it.

Neglect, and especially the storms which later overwhethed the Order, explain the disappearance of several other documents which would east a glimmer of poetry and joy over these sad days; Francis had not forgetten his sister-friend at St. Damina. Hearing that she had been greatly disquieted by knowing him to be so ill, he desired to reassure her: he still deceived himself as to his condition, and wrote to her promising soon to go to see her.

To this assurance he added some affectionate counsels, advising her and her companions not to go to extremes with their uncerations. To set her an example of cheer-

The letter to the charge only repeats the thoughts already expressed upon the wordilit of the hely accrament. Workmember Franches weeping out the churches and toploring the priests to keep them obsult this epidate has the same object: It is found in the Assist MS., BBS, for 3115-325, with the cubric: Do reverentia Corporis Domini et de munditio alteris nel omnes elevices. Basepit: Attendiums onnes. Explicit: feverint exemplari. This, therefore, is the letter given by Wadding xill., but without address or salutation.

YWe need not design of finding them. The weblies of the monasteries of thereon are escodly radimentary enough, but they are preserved with pleas erea.

fulness he added to this letter a Tande in the valgar tengue which he land himself set to music.1

In that chamber of the opiscopal palace in which ho was as it were imprisoned be had achieved a new victory, and it was doubtless that which inspired his joy. The Bishop of Assisi, the irritable Guide, always at war with somebody, was at this time quarrelting with the podestà of the city; nothing more was needed to excite in the little town a profound disquiet. Guide had excommunicated the podestà, and the latter had issued a prohibition against acting and buying or making any contract with ecclesination.

The difference grow more bitter, and no one appeared to dream of attempting a reconcitation. We can the better understand Francis's grief over all this by remembering that his very first effort had been to bring peace into his native city, and that he considered the return of Italy to union and concord to be the essential aim of his apostohate.

Wher in Assisi would be the tinal dissolution of his dream; the voice of events crying brutally to him, "Thou hust wasted thy life!"

The drops of this cup were spared him, thanks to an inspiration in which breaks forth mow him natural play of imagination. To the Cantiele of the Sun he added a new strophe:

He praised, Lard, for those who forgive for leve of thee, and lear trials and iribulations; happy they who persevers in peace, by thee, Most high, chall they be occurred.

Then, calling a frint, he charged him to beg the governor to betake himself, with all the notables whom he could assemble, to the paved square before the hishop's palace. The magistrate, to whom legend gives the nolder part in the whole affair, at once yielded to the saint's request.

⁴ Spec., 1176; Gonform., 186a 1; 185b, 1. Of. Text. D. Clarw, A. 88a, Aug., 11., p. 747.

Whom he arrived and the lisher bad ones forth from the palme, two friers cannot forward and said: "Brother Franch for made to the proise of that a hymn to which he prays you to listen pionaly," and immediately they began to sing the Hymn of Brother Sun, with its new structure.

The governor listened, standing in no attitude of prefound attention, coplinally waighing, for for dearly loved the Ideacot Francis.

When the singing was ended, "Know in truth," and he, "that I dostruth forgive the heat blahop, that I wish and might be fook upon him as my hard, for if one had even assessmeled my leadner I should be ready to partion the nurchans." With these words be throw himself at the idelaple food, and wild: "I am ready to do whatever you would, for the love of our land Joses Christ and the servant Franch,"

Then the blakep, taking him by the band, litted liber up and said, With my position it would become me to be humble, but show I am naturally for quick to wrath, thou must pardon up. "1

This amexpected reconcitiation was immediately looked upon as miraculous, and incremed still more the reverence of the Assisans for their fellow-citizen.

The summer was drawing to a close. After a few days of relative improvement. Francish sufferings became greaker than ever: incapable of movement, he even thought that he aught to give up his archest desire to see St. Danian and Portimenta once more, and gave the brothers all his directions about the latter sanctuary:

"Never abundentia," he would repeat to them, "for that place is truly mered: it is the home of Gud."

. Phila story in given in the θpcs_{eff} 199b, as from eye-witnesses. . Of,

Conform., 184b, 1 ; 208a, 1,

² I Cal., 100. Those recommendations at to Porthments were amplified by the Zulanti, when, under the generability of these entire (Bull Is qui evelesium, Murah II, 1245), the Inellien of Assisi was substituted for Santa Muria digit Augeltus mater et caput of the Order. Vide Spec., 32h, 40h 71a; Conform., 144a, 2; 219a, 1; 3 Sec., 56; 2 Cel., 1, 42 and 13; thun, 24, 25; nor the Appendix, the Study of the Includence of August 2.

These med to him that if the Brothers remained attached to that bit of earth, that chaped ten feet long, those that cheel lasts, they would there find the living reminder of the poverty of the early days, and could never wander for from it.

One evening he grow worse with frightful rapidity; all the following night he had honournages which left not the slightest loope; the Brothers hastening to him, he dictated a few lines in form of a Will and gave them his blessing; "Adien, my children; remain all of you in the fear of God, which always united to Christ; great trials are in store for you, and tribulation draws nigh. Happy are they who persevere as they have begun; for there will be seemed and divisions among you. As for me, I am going to the Lord and my God. Yes, I have the assurance that I am going to him where I have served."

During the following days, to the great surprise of those who were about him, he again grow sumowhat belter; no one could understand the resistance to thath offered by this body so long were out by unifering.

To himself legan to hope again. A physician of Arozzo whom he knew well, having come to visit him, "Good friend," Francis asked him, "how much longer do you think I have to live?"

"Buther," replied the other reassuringly, "Dris will all joss away, if it pleases God."

"I am not a cuckoo," replied Francis smiling, using a popular saying, "to be afraid of death. By the grace of the Holy Spirit I am so intimulely united to God that I am equally content to live or to die."

"In that case, father, from the medical point of view, ³ 2 Gel., 108. As will be seen thelow, p. 307) the reconsider of Gelands narrative seems to respire to be taken with some reserve. Of Spec., 1166; Conform., 225s, 2; Ban., 211.

Non nom cuculus, in Italian cuculo.

your disease is incurable, and I do not think that you can last langer than the beginning of autumn."

At these words the poor invalid stretched out his hands as if to call on God, crying with an indescribable expression of joy, "Welcome, Sister Douth!" Then be began to sing, and sent for Brothers Angelo and Leo.

On their arrival they were made, in spite of their emotion, to sing the Cantiele of the Sun. They were at the last decology when Prancis, checking them, improvised the greeting to death:

Bu praised, Lord, for our Sister the Death of the body, where me man may escape; also for them who die in a state of mortal sin; happy they who are found conformed to thy most hely will, for the second death will do to them no turns.

From this day the palace rang unceasingly with his songs. Continually, even through the night, he would sing the Canticle of the Sun or some other of his favorite compositions. Then, when wearied out, he would beg Angelo and Two to go on.

One day Brother Elies thought it his duty to make a few remarks on the subject. He feared that the nurses and the people of the neighborhood would be scandalized; aught not a saint to be absorbed in meditation in the face of doubt, to await it with fear and trembling instead of indulging in a gayety that might be misinterpreted? Perhaps Bishop Guido was not entirely a stranger to those represedes; it seems not improbable that to have his palace crowded with Brothers Minor all these long weeks had finally put him a little out of humor. But Francis would not yield; his union with God was too sweet for him to consent not to sing it.

Churc., 1996; Fior. iv. consid. It is to be noted that Chido, instead of waiting at Assist for the certainly inqueding duals of Francis, went away to Mont Cargano. 2 Cel., it, 143.

They decided at last to remove him to Portinucula. His desire was to be fulfilled; he was to die beside the humble chapel where he had heard God's voice consecrating him apostle.

His companions, hearing their precious burden, took the way through the dive yards across the plain. From time to fine the invalid, unable to distinguish anything asked where they were. When they were half way there, at the hospital of the Cracigeri, where long ago he had tended the leper, and from whence there was a full view of all the houses of the city, he begged them to set him upon the ground with his face toward Assisi, and raising his hand he hade action to his native place and thessed it.

CITAPPER XX

FRANCIS'S WILL AND DEATH

Ead of Replumber - October 3, 1228

The last days of Francis's life are of radiant beauty. He wont to meet death, singing, says Thomas of Colano, annuing up the impression of these who saw him then.

To be once more at Portingenhauter so long a detention at the bishop's palace was not only a real joy to his heart, but the pure air of the forest must have been much to his physical well-heing; does not the Cauticle of the Greatures seem to have been made expressly to be sung in the evening of one of those autumn days of Umbria, so soft and luminous, when all nature seems to retire into herself to sing her own hymn of love to Brother Sun?

We see that Francis has come to that almost entire cossition of pain, that renewing of life, which so often procedes the approach of the last canadrophe.

Ho took advantage of it to dietate his Will.3

UMartem cantando suscepit. 2 Col., 3, 139.

²The lext here taken as a bach in that of the Assist MS., 888 (f° 16a-18a). The also to be found in Firmamentum, f 10, col. 4; Speculum, Morin, tract. III., 8a; Walding, ann. 1228, 46; A. 88., p. 668; Amont, Lagenda. Trium Swierum; Appendix, p. 110. Everything in this document proclaims 16s authenticity, but we are not reduced to internal proof. It is expressely cited in 1 Col., 17 (before 1230); by the Three Comparisons (1246), 3 Sec., 11; 20; 29; by 2 Cel., 3, 98 (1247). These proofs would be more than sufficient, but there is another of even greater

It is to these pages that we must go to find the true note for a sketch of the life of its author, and an idea of the Order as it was in his dreams.

In this record, which is of an incontestable unthonticity, the most selemn manifestation of his thought, the Poverella reveals himself absolutely, with a virginal candor.

His lumility is here of a sincerity which strikes ome with awe; it is absolute, though no one could dress that it was exaggerated. And yet, wherever his mission is concerned, he speaks with tranquil and serves assumes. Is he not an ambassador of God? Does he not hold his message from Christ binaself? The generic of his thought here shows itself to be at once wholly divine and entirely personal. The individual conscience here proclaims its savereign authority. "No one showed me what t ought to do, but the Most High himself revealed to me that I ought to live conformably to his hely gospal."

When a man has once spoken than, submission to the Church has been singularly encrosched upon. We may love her, hearken to her, venerate her, but we feel ourselves, perhaps without thring to avow it, superior to her. Let a critical hour come, and one finds himself heretic without knowing it or wishing it.

"All, you," eries Angelo Clareno, "St. Francis promised to oboy the paperand his successors, but they cannot said must not communal anything contrary to the conscious or to the Rule."

For him, as for all the spiritual Franciscams, when there value: the ball Que element of Reptember 29, 1930, where Gregory IX, often it textually and declares that the felans are not learned to observe it,  Promittet Franciscus chedication papes cet successoribus qui men possuat nee debent cis precipers aliquid qued sit contra animam et regulam, ... trekie., i, p. 1013.

is conflict between what the inward voice of God ordains and what the Church wills, he has only to obey the former.

If you tell him that the Church and the Order are there to define the true signification of the Rule, he appeals to common souse, and to that interior certitude which is given by a clear view of truth.

The Rule, as also the gospel, of which it is a summary, is above all ecclesiastical power, and no one has the right to say the last word in their interpretation.

The Will was not slow to gain a moral authority superior even to that of the Rule. Giovenni of Parma, to explain the predilection of the Josephinites for this document, points out that after the impression of the stignata the Holy Spirit was in Francis with still greater plonitude than before.

Did the immunerable weets which disturbed the Church in the thirteenth century perceive that these two writings—the Rule and the Testament—the one apparently made to follow and support the other, substantially identical as it was said, proceeded from two opposite inspirations?—Very confusedly, no doubt, but guided by a very sure instinct, they saw in these pages the banner of liberty.

They were not mistaken. Even to day, Minkers, moralists, mystics may arrive at solutions very different from those of the Umbrian prophet, but the method which they employ is his, and they may not refuse to acknowledge in him the precursor of religious subjectivism.

Quod si quando a quocunaque . . . pontifice aliquid . . . mandavetur quod esset contra fidem . . . et envitatem et fructus ejus tuno abediet Deo magis quans hominibus. D., p. 561.

⁹ l'at [Regula] et stat et intelligitur super cos , . . . Cum spei flatuciu puco frucurur cum conscientim et Christi spiritus testimonio corto. 1b., pp. 508 and 565.

Archiv., H., p. 274.

The Church, too, was not mistaken. She immediately understood the spirit that unimated these pages,

Four years later, perhaps to the very day, September 28, 1230, Ugolini, then Gregory IX., redemnly interpreted the Rule, in spite of the precantions of Francis, who had forbidden all gloss or commentary on the Rule or the Will, and declared that the Brothern were not bound to the observation of the Will.

What shall we cay of the bull in which the pape alleges his familiar relations with the Saint to justify his consmentary, and in which the cleared passages are so distorted as to change their sense completely. "One is stapefied," eries Oberlini of Casali, "that a text so clear should have need of a commentary, for it milliers to large common sense and to know grammar in order to understand it." And this strange monk dures to add: "There is one miracle which that himself cannot do; it is to make two contradictory things true."

Certainly the Church elevated by mistress in her own house; it would have been nothing wrong had Gregory IX, created an Order conformed to him views and ideas, but when we go through Shamles's folion and the thousands of bulls accorded to the spiritual some of him who in the clearest and most nohum massner had forbidden them to ask any privilege of the court of Romo, we cannot but feel a litter sudness.

Thus upheld by the papacy, the Brothers of the Common Observance made the Zehadi abarply expinte their attachment to Francia's had requests. Cosar of Spayor Ad minidatum illud ver dichars non teneri: quad sino consensu bratenia maxina ministracam, quas molecescr tangebat chligare negatit neo snecessorem sama quamodolfiet chligarit; cum non habeat imperium par in parem. The addism la landy spectage; Francis was not on a par with hitemecassors; he did not set as ministeregorieral, but so familier. Arbso vil. cone., lib. v., cap. 3 and b.— lice above, p. 18b.

died of violence from the Brother placed in charge of him; the first disciple, Bernardo di Quintavalle, hunted like a wild beast, passed two years in the forests of Monte-Sefro, hidden by a wood-cutter; the other first companions who did not succeed in flight had to undergo the severest usage. In the March of Aucona, the home of the Spirituals, the victarious party used a terrible violence. The Will was confiscated and destroyed; they went so far as to burn it over the head of a friar who persisted in desiring to observe it.

WILL (LITERAL TRANSLATION).

See in what manner God gave it to me, to me, Brether Francis, to begin to do penitence; when I lived in sin, it was very painful to me to see lepers, but God himself ied me into their midst, and I remained here a little while. When I left them, that which had seemed to me litter had become sweet and easy.

A little while after I quitted the world, and God gave me such a faith in his churches that I would kneel down with simplicity and I would say: "Wo adore thee, Lord Jesus Christ, here and in all thy churches which are in the world, and we bless thee that by thy hely cross thou hast rausomed the world."

Besides, the Lord gave me and still gives me so great a faith in priests who live according to the form of the holy Roman Church, because of their sacerdotal character, that even if they perseented me I would have ecceurse to them. And even though I had all the wisdom of Solomon, f I should find poor secular priests, I would not prouch in their parishes without their consent. I desire to respect them like all the others, to love them and honor them as my lords. I will not consider their shus,

¹ Tribul., Lanr., 25b; Archiv., i., p. 632.

⁹ At the summit of the Apenniues, about half way between Camerine and Noeera (Umbria). Tribul., Laur., 26b; Magl., 135b.

³ Declaratio Ubertini, Archiv., iii., p. 168. This fact is not to be questioned, since it is alleged in a piece addressed to the pope, in response to the liberal friers, to whom it was to be communicated.

⁴ Feci moram cum illis., MS., 333. Most of the printed texts give miseracordiam, which gives a less satisfactory meaning. Of, Miscollanea iii. (1888), p. 70; 1 Cel., 17; 8 Soc., 11.

for in them I see the Son of God and they are my hords. I do this because here below I see wething, I perceive nothing energonally of the most high Son of Ried, if not like most bely liedy word flind, which they exceive and they alone distribute to others. I device above all things to honor and venerate all these most hely suysterion and to keep them presions. Whenever I find the energy annual of desire or his words in indesent places, I desire to take them away and I pany that others take them away and put thou in some decent place. We ought to home and never all the thred-ephase and those who presum the minds hely word of God, as dispensing in supplying and life.

When the least gave message to others no one showed me what I aught to do, but the Most High bineself revented to me that I aught to live monading to the model of the hely gespel. I caused a chort and simple formula to be written, and the least pape continued it for me.

Those who presented themselves to observe this bind of life distribented all that they might have to the poor. They contented themselves with a lunier patched within and without, with the cord and broading and we desired to tuve mathing more.

The checki wild the office like other clerks, and the laymon Pater noster,

We lived to live in poor and abundance clearedness, and we want ignorant and authorizable to all. I worked with any hande and would nonlinual toda, and I will also that all other friend work at some home about trade. Let those whee love none hours one, not for the purpose of recolving the poles of their toil, lest for their good example and in the fillenges. And when they do not give in the price of the work, let us report to the table of the Lord, legging our bread from door to done. The lard revealed to use the solution which we negle to give: "limit give you peaked."

Let the Brothere take great care not to receive characters, habitations, and all that men build for these, except as all is to accordance with the buly poverty within we have vowed in the Bab, and let them not resolve hospitality in them except as atrangencial physician.

I absolutely interdict all the hostiers, in whatever place they may be found, from soking any built from the court of Rome, whollow directly or indirectly, under pretext of church we convent or moles pretext of premittings, nor even for their personal protection. If they are not resolved anywhere for them go claswhere, their doing possence with the located in of their.

I desire to alwy the inhibitor-general of this frateristy, and the gauralian where he may please to give me. I desire to pad toyeelf controly into his hands, to go newhere and do nothing against his will, for he have my herd, Though I be simple and III, I would, however, have always a clork who will purform the office, as it is said in the Rule; let all the office passiving to the Rule. It is easily their gracilina and to do the office passiving to the Rule. If it come to possible their them are any who do not the office secontling to the Rule, and who desire to make any either change, or if they are not fatholics, let all the Brothers, wherever they may be be bound by chedicine to present them to the nonrest custode. Let the controls he benefit by chedicine to keep blue well gravited like a man who is in brother night and day, so that he may not emaps from their hunds until they personally place him in the minister's hands. And but the minister he bound by obedicines to send blue by frothers who will guard blue as a primary day and night until they shall have placed him in the hands of the best Bibliop of Ooth, who is the hard, the probacter, and the corrector of all the Fraternity.

And let the Brothers not say: "This here now Rule;" for this is a reminder, a warning, an exhibitation; it kerny Will, that I, little Brother Franch, make for you, my idensed Brothers. In order that we may almore in a more outhelic way the Rule which we promised the Lord in Rule.

Lat the ministers-general, all the other unidates and the mustules be hold by abedience to add nothing to and take untiling from those words. Let them always keep this writing near them, lesside the Rule; and in all the almpters which shall be held, when the Rule is comblet those words be read also.

I interdisk sheedately, by obschines, all the Brethers, whelea ambigmen, to introduce glosses in the Rule, or in this Will, under protext of explaining it. But since the Lord has given me to speak and to write the Rule and these words in a clear and shaple manner, without continuity, understand them in the came way, and put them in proclaes until the end.

And may whoover shall have observed these things be unwined in heavier with the ideedings of the heavenly Futher, and an earth with those of his wall-believed Son and of the Holy Spirit the consuler, with the realistance of all the heavenly virtues and all the adults.

And I, little Bridher Francis, your serviter, confirm to you see far as I am while this most lady benediction. Amen.

After thinking of his Brothers Francis thought of his dear Sisters at St. Damina and made a will for them.

It has not come down to us, and we need not wonder;

¹¹ is nyldout that horony is not here inquestion. The Brothers who were infinited with it were to be delivered to the Bhurch.

the Spiritual Brothers might the away, and protest from the depths of their retrents, but the Sisters were completely marmed against the muchinations of the Comnum Observance.

In the host words that he addressed to the Charisses, after calling upon them to persovers in poverty and union, he gave them his benediction. Then he recommended them to the Brothers, supplicating the latter never to forget that they were members of one and the same religious family. After having done all that he could for those whom he weembout to leave, he thought for a moment of timeself.

He had become acquainted in Rome with a pious lady manual Giacomium di Settischi. Though rich, ohe was simple and good, entirely devoded to the new ideas; even the somewhat singular characteristics of Francis pleased her. He had given her a lamb which had become her inseparaldo companion.

Unfortunately all that concerns her has millered much from later retemblings of the legend. The perfectly natural conduct of the Saint with women has much our harmaged his biographera; hence heavy and distorted commentaries tacked on to epicades of a delicious simplicity.

Bufore dying Francis desired to ace again this friend, Obrian IV, published, Detelor 19, 1963, Potthest (1989), a Role for the Chaisses while completely changed the character of this Order. Detelor was the continual protector Glovanid degli Maint (the future Nicholae III), who by way of presention forloads the Reethern Minur nuder the governal petualies to dissinate the Sisters from accepting it. "It different ranch from the flest Hube," rad Chertial dl Casal "as black and white, the covery and the Justph." Achor. (it. crue, lib. Vercap. vi.

^{*} V. Test, H. Chirus; Conform, 195a 14 Pipou, 117b.

^{* 9} Col., ii, 192,

⁴ Bon, 119.

whom he smilingly called Brother Giacomine. He caused a letter to be written her to come to Portiumcula; we can imagine the dismay of the narrators at this far from monestic invitation.

But the good lady had anticipated his appeal: at the moment when the messenger with the letter was about to leave for Rome, she arrived at Portimenta and remained there until the last sigh of the Saint! For one moment she thought of sending away her suite; the invalid was so calm and joyful that she could not helieve him dying, but he himself advised her to keep her people with her. This time he felt with no possible doubt that his captivity was about to be anded.

He was ready, he had finished his work.

Did he think then of the day when, cursed by his father, he had renounced all earthly goods and cried to God with an ineffable confidence, "Our Father who art in heaven!" We cannot say; but he desired to finish his life by a symbolic act which very closely recalls the scene in the bishop's palace.

To caused himself to be stripped of his clothing and hid upon the ground, for he wished to die in the arms of his Tady Poverty. With one glance he embraced the twenty years that had glided by since their union: "I

The Hollandists deny thin whole story, which they find in opposition to the prescriptions of Francia himself. A. SS., p. 684 ff. Hot it is difficult to see for what defect authors who take great palm to explain it could have had for inventing it. Spec., DBa; Fior. iv.; consid.; Conform., 240a.—I have borrowed the whole account from iterated of linese: Do Landibus, f. 133b.—It uppears that Charantina settled for the rest of her life at Archi, that she saight gain addication from the first compounded of Franciscan fragrance!) The exact date of her death is not known. Since was burded in the lower church of the healiles of Assist, and on her tomic was engraved: Hie jacit Jacoba sancte reddingue romana.—Vide Feetint: Storie delta basilies. p. 48.—Cf. Jacobilli: Vite dei Sancte delta Umbria, Fallgua, 3 vols., 4to, 1047; l., p. 214.

have done my duty," he said to the Brothers, "may the Christ new teach year years $\Gamma^{\pm\pm}$

This was Thursday, October 1.2

They laid him back upon his bed, and, conforming to his wishes, they again sung to him the Cantiele of the Sun.

At times he added his voice to those of his Brothers, and came back with preference to Psalm 142, Fore men ad Dominum chameri.

With my video Lery unto the Lord, With my voice I implore the Lard, I mar out my complaint before blue 1 lell ldm att mydlshers. When my spirit is east down within me-Thou knowed my path. Bjøm tho way where I walk They have laid a source for mo, Cast thing eyes to the right and look) No one recognises his : All refuge to lost for mo, No one takes thought for my mail. hord, unto thee Lery; Lony: Thou art my rofugo, My postion in the bank of the Hyling, Un attentivo in my cilos f For I am vory andmppy, Dellver ma from those who parens mal For they are stronger than 1, Bring my soul out of its prison That I may praducibly name. The righteens shall compare his about When then best done good units me!

The visits of death are always adoms, but the end of the just is the nest univing sursum cords that we can

¹ 2 Oct., 3, 139; Roa., 269, 240; Conform., 1711, 2.

²² Col., 9, 139; Came me videritis . . . sicut me mulius tertius undum vidistis.

^{* 1} Col., 1997 2 Col., 9, 189.

^{* 1} Col., 109; Bon., 212.

hear on earth. The hours flowed by and the Brothers would not leave him. "Alas, good Pather," said one of them to him, muchle longer to contain himself, "your children are going to lose you, and be deprived of the true light which lightened them: think of the orphans you are leaving and forgive all their faults, give to them all, present and absent, the joy of your hely benediction."

"See," replied the dying man, "Clod is calling me. If forgive all my Brothers, present and absent, their offences and faults, and absolve them according to my power. Tell them so, and bless them all in my name."

Then crossing his arms be hid his hands upon those who surrounded him. He did this with peculiar emotion to Bernard of Quintavalle: "I desire," he said, "and with all my power I arge whomsoever shall be minister-general of the Order, to love and honor him as myself; let the provinciale and all the Brothers act toward him as toward me,"

He thought not only of the absent Brothers but of the future ones; love scabounded in him that it wrung from him a groun of regret for not neeing all those who should enter the Order down to the end of time, that he might lay his hand upon their brown, and make them feel those things that may only he spoken by the eyes of him who loves in Clod.⁸

He had lost the notion of time; believing that it was still Thursday he decired to take a last meal with his disciples. Some bread was brought, he broke it and gave it to them, and there in the poor cabin of Portinnenta, Cl Cal., 109. Cf. Epist. Elia.

^{}Tribut Laur., 22b. Nothing befor shows the listeric value of the chronicle of the Tribulations then to compare its story of these moments with that of the following documents: Confirm., 48b, 1; 185a, 2; Pior., 6,; Spec., 86a.

^{* 9} Cal., 0. 180 ; Spec., 110b ; Conform., 224b, 1.

without after and without a priest, was colobrated $100\,$ Lord's Support

A Brother read the Grepel for Holy Thursday, Autodiem festion Poscher: "Before the feast of the Passaver, desine knowing that his hour was come to get from this world be the Pather, having layed his own who were in the world he layed them unto the end."

The sun was gilding the create of the mountains with his last rays, there was silence around the dying one. All was ready. The migel of death neight come.

Suturday, October 3, 6226, at nightfull, without pain, without struggle, he breathed the last sigh.

The Brothern were still gazing on his face, hoping yet to eateh some eigh of life, when immoscrable larks alighted, singing, on the thatch of his cell, as if to salute the woul which had just taken flight well give the bittle Poor Man the canonization of which he was most worthy, the only one, doubtless, which he would ever have coveled.

On the merrow, at down, the Assistant came down to hake persention of his body and give it a triumplant functual.

By a pione impiration, instead of going straight to the city they went around by St. Danium, and thus was realized the promise made by Francia to the Sisters a few weeks before, to rame once more to see them.

^{ 20} Col., H. 148). A diagdo conquarticon helwoon this stray he the Speculum (1166) and that he the Conformities (2246, 1) becoming to show how in cortain of its parts the Speculum represents a state of the begond surrefor to (1185).

^{*} Bone, 244. This well last loss transformed later a chaped and may be found a few yards from the little charele of Postimordia. Church and disput are more bulletond under the great the liter of Santa Maria displi Augult. See the pletture and phen, A. 193., p. 1944, or better all in P. Barmbas and dem Elsass, Disfimenta ester disschicte U. L. E. v. des Engeln. Rixheim, 1984, I vol., 8vo., pp. 214 and 312.

Their grief was heart-rending.

These women's hearts revolted against the absurdity of death; but there were tears on that day at St. Damian only. The Brothers forgot their sudness on seeing the stigmate, and the inhabitants of Assisi manifested an indescribable joy on having their relic at last. They deposited it in the Church St. George.

Toss than two years after, Sunday, July 26, 1228, Gregory IX, came to Assisi to preside in person over the ceromonies of canonization, and to by, on the morrow, the first stone of the new clurch dedicated to the Stig-mulized.

Built under the inspiration of Gregory IX, and the direction of Brother Elias, this marvellous basitica is also one of the documents of this history, and perhaps I have been wrong in neglecting it.

Go and look upon it, proud, rich, powerful, then go down to Partimenta, passeaver to St. Damian, hasten to the Carcori, and you will understand the abyss that separates the ideal of Francis from that of the pontiff who canonized him.

^{1 (} Cal., 116 and 117; Hen., 219; Conform, 185a, 1.

a Tarday in the cloture of the convent St. Chra. Vide Miscellanea 1, pp. 44-48, a very interesting study by Prof. Carattell upon the collin of St. Francis.

CRITICAL STUDY OF THE SOURCES

SUMMARY

- I. St. Francisk Works.
- П. Вюскарика Риорицу Во Олько.
 - 1. Proliminary Note.
 - 2. First Tafo by Phomes of Colano.
 - 3. Review of the History of the Order 1230-1244.
 - 4. Logend of the Three Companions.
 - 5. Fragments of the Suppressed Portion of the Legend.
 - 6. Second Life by Thomas of Colune. First Part.
 - 7. Second Life by Thomas of Colone. Second Park
 - 8. Doenmonts of Secondary Importance:

Blography for Uso of the Choir.

Tafo in Vorac.

Biography by Giovanni dl Coperano.

Tife by Brother Julian.

- 0. Lagond of St. Bonavontura.
- 10. De Laudibus of Bornard of Bease.

III. DIPLOMATIC DOCUMENTS.

- 1. Donalion of the Verus.
- 2. Registers of Cardinal Ugolini.
- 8. Bulla.

1V. Chrionfelberg of the Ohden.

- 1. Chroniele of Brother Giordano di Giano.
- 2. Eccleston: Arrival of the Prints in England.
- 3. Chronicle of Fra Militalemi.
- 4. Chronicle of the Tribulations.
- 5. The Fioretti and their Appendices.
- 6. Chronicle of the XXIV, Generals.
- 7. The Conformities of Barbeloumon di Plan.
- £, Glassberger'a Ulcranielo.
- 9. Chronicle of Muck of Linbon.

V. Onnonclaim not or the Omera,

- T. alaoques do Vitry.
- 9. Thomas of Symbolo,
- & Divers Chronfelers.

CRITICAL STUDY OF THE SOURCES

THERE are few lives in history so aluminately provided with documents as that of St. Framis. This will perhaps surprise the reader, but to convince himself to his only to run over the preceding list, which, however, has been made as succinct as passible.

It is admitted in learnest circles that the essential elements of this hiegraphy have disuppeared or have been entirely altered. The exaggeration of certain religious writers, who accept everything, and among several accounts of the same fact always choose the longest and most marvellous, has led to a like exaggeration in the contarry sense.

If it were necessary to point out the results of these two excesses as they affect each event, this volume would need to be twice and even four lines as large as it is. Those who are interested in these questions will find in the notes larief indications of the original documents on which each therestive is based.

To close the subject of the errors which are current in the Franciscan documents, and to show in a few lines their extreme importance, I shall take two examples. Among our own contemporaries no one has so well spoken on the subject of St. Francis as M. Remui; he nomes tack to him with affecting picty, and he was in a better condition than any one to know the sources of this history. And yet he does not hesitate to say in his study of the Cantiele of the Sun, Francis's best known work; "The authenticity of this piece appears certain, but we must observe that we have not the Italian original. The Italian text which we possess is a translation of a Portagnese version, which was itself translated from the Spanish."

¹ If any student finds blusself andseraced by the extreme carity of cortain works cited, I shall make it my daty and pleasure to send them to blue, as well as a copy of the italian manuscripts.

And yet the primitive Italian exists? not only in numerous manuscripts in Italy and France, particularly in the Mazarine Labrary,? but also in the well-known bank of the Conformities.

An error, grave from quite another point of view, is made by the summenuther when he denies the authorizing of St. Francis's Will; this piece is not only the addust expression of its author's religious feeling, it constitutes also a nort of autobiography, and contains the solenn and searcely disguisest revocation of all the concessions which had been wring from him. We have already near that its authoritity is not to be cladlenged. This double example will, I hope, suffice to show the necessity of beginning this study by a conscientions examination of the sources.

If the entirent historian to whom I have alluded wars

¹ G. Ronan : Nonvelles étades d'Institute religiouse, Parle, 1981, 6vo, p. 991.

[&]quot;New story, pp. 1911 18.

³ Mazachao Labrary, Mcl. BER: Speculars perfections 8, Franchel; the Cantrolo is found at fe, 51. Cf. M3., BEO (dule of 1950). That text was published by Restaura. In the Remarksche Studien, Halle, 1971, pp. 118–122. The Technology ring of Fe, 31 A.

^{*} Confiner (Silian, 1546) 2026, 28. For that matter it is correct that Dida, in the Croniche desired continuities that do S. Fermeister (Venice, 1606, it vols. The Translated after the Castilian version of the conk composed in Perluguese by Mark of Idelem, was fadjob enough to rander into Italian (Ide translation of a translation).

^{*} Nen pages Blift ff.

still living, he would have for this page his large and benevolent smile, that simple, Oui, oui, which once made his papils in the little hall of the Collège de France to tremble with emotion.

I do not know what he would think of this book, but I well know that he would love the spirit in which it was undertaken, and would easily parden me for having chosen him for seape-gont of my wrath against the learned men and biographers.

The deconvents to be examined have been divided into five enlegories.

The first includes St. Francis's works.

The second, hiegraphics properly so called.

The third, diplomatic documents.

The fourth, chronicles of the Order.

The lifth, chronicles of authors not of the Order.

1

ST, FRANCIS'S WORKS

The writings of St. Francis no assuredly the best source of acquaintance with him; we can only be surprised to find them so neglected by most of his biographers. It is true that they give little information as to his life, and furnish neither dates nor facts, but they (Collected first by Wadding (Antwerp, 1621, 4to), they have been puddlated away times since then, particularly by Da la Haye (Paris, 1641, 1). These two editions having become scarce, were republished—be a very anomital actory manner—by the Abbi Herry; S. Francisci Assisiatis opera mania (Paris, 1880, 4to). For want of a more exact edition, that of Pathor Bernardo da Flyizzano la the most confui; Opascoli di S. Francesco d'Assisi, 1 vol., 12ma, pp. 564, Flacacco, 1880. The batta text la accompanied by an Indian translation.

2 Mie Briefe, die unter seinem Numen gehen, mögen theilweise ücht sein. Aber sie trogen kaum etwas zur nüheren Konntniss bei und können do better, they murk the stages of his thought and of his appritual development. The legendagive as Francis as he appeared, and by that very fact suffer in some degree the compulsion of circumstances; they are obliged to head to the exigencies of his position as general of an Order approved by the Church, as miracle-worker, and as said. His works, on the contrary, show as his very soul; each phrase has not only been thought, but lived; they bring as the Poverellein emotions, will alive and pulpitating.

Secution in the writings of the Franciscans we find any atterance of their newter, it unconsciously betrays itself, someting out suddenly in a sweet, jour tone which pendrules to your very beaut, awakening with a thrill a sprite that was sleeping there.

This bloom of love endning St. Francis's words would be an admirable criterion of the authenticity of those opascules which tradition attributes to him; but the work of testing is neither long nor difficult. If after his time injudicious attempts were here and there made to begor him with miracles which he did not perform, which he would not even have wished to perform, me attempt was ever much to burden his literary effects with false or impussitions pieces. The lost proof of this is that it is not nutil Wadding. That is to say, until the seventicenth contany. That we find the first and only revious attempt to collect these precious momentals. Several of them have doller find gans ausser Acht Reiben." Matter, Die Auftinge des Minorblewadens, Problang, 1 vol., 8vo. 1985, p. it.

Theres leave been often attributed to Bt. Francis which do not belong to little, but there are unimberational errors and made without purpose. The desire for literary exactness is relatively of resent date, and it was easier for these who were ignorant of the author of certain Franidasa writings to attribute them to St. Francis than to admit their lgemeanes or is make these researches.

been lost, but those which remain are enough to give us in some sort the relatation of the legends.

In these pages Francis gives himself to his readers, as long ago he gave himself to his companions; in each one of them a feeling, a cry of the heart, or an aspiration toward the Invisible is prolonged down to our own time.

Wudding thought it his duty to give a place in his collection to several suspicious pieces; more than this, instead of following the oldest manuscripts that he had helove him, he often permitted himself to be led astray by sixteenth-century writers whose smallest concern was to be critical and accurate. To avoid the tedious and entirely negative task to which it would be necessary to proceed if I took him for my starting-point I shall confine myself to a positive study of this question.

All the pieces which will be enumerated are found in his collection. They are semetimes ent up in a singular way; but in proportion as each document is studied we

There example, the first Italia; probably also a few conticles; a letter to the Brothers he France, Eoch, it; another to the Brothers he Bologia; "Peadirerat per litteram in que fuit pluriacum latinum," Eoch, ib.; a letter to Antony of Padna, other than the one we have, since on the witness of Colaco it was addressed; Bratri Antonia episcopo mee (2 Col., 3, 99); cortido lettera to St. Clara; "Scripsit Clara et severibus ad consolutionem litteram in qual debat herriteinnem suam et absoluche," oto. Conform., f". 185a, 1; of, Test. B. Clara, A. SS., Augusti, t. ii., p. 707; "Plura scripta tradidit gobis, no pust morten suam declinaremus a pumpertato;" normal lettera to Cardinal Ugolini, 3 Soc., 07.

It is not to negligence alone that we must attein to the loss of many of the epistics: "Quant nephas est copiure, in provincia Marchio et in pluribus atiis locis testamentum beati Francisci mundaverant (prelati ordinis) districte per obsticutiam ale omnibus auferi et combusi. It uni fratri devoto et sancte, cajus nomen est N. de Rocannto combuserunt diesem testamentum super caput summ. Et toto constu facrant solliciti, aunultes scripta heati patrix austri Francisci, in quibus sua intentio do observanta regulo declaratur." Ubertino di Casuli, apunt Archio., iii., pp.

108-100.

abull find sufficient indications to enable us to make the necessary coefficientions.

The archives of Sacro Convento of Assisi (possess a nanuscript whose importance is not to be overestimated. It has already been many times studied, and bears the number 338.

It appears, however, that a very important detail of form him been overlooked. It is this: that No. 338 is not one mainiscript, but a collection of manuscripts of very different periods, which were put together because they were of very nearly the more size, and have been fediated in a peculiar manner.

This artificial character of the collection alrows that each of the pieces which compose it recent to be examined by itself, and that it is impossible to my of it as a whole that it is of the thirteenth or the fourteenth contary.

The park that interests as in perfectly heanegrouses, is formed of three perchancul backs (fed. 12a 44b) and contains a part of Francis's works.

-). The Rule, definitively approved by Tranorius ΠT_n November 20, 1223 (fol. 12a 16a).
 - 9. St. Francia's Will ! (fed. 16a 18a).
 - 31. The Admonitiona's (fel. 18a 9311).
 - 4. The Letter I will Christians (fol. 331) 38u).

Haly is fan ubliging to mittels, and modegists, and acholurs and in duthour the favor of disposing to a more provides insureer tide truck, the most preclaim of all Undofa - Kren with the indefittigable bindiness of the curator, M. Alessandra, and of the numbelepatity of Assisi, it is very difficult to profit by these treasures heaped up to a dark room without a table to write apon.

¹In particular by Black , His kistorischen Hondschriften von S, Francesco in Assist. Archiv , 1, 1, 4 р. 404.

A Blue pages Hall IV.

^{*}Boo pages 259 R

^{*} Hen paga 7925 45.

5. The letter to all the members of the Order assembled in Chapter-general ((ed. 28a-31a).

6. Comesel to difference on the respect to be paid to the Enclosists (fot., 315–325).

7. A very short piece preceded by the rubric: "Of the virtues which adore the Virgin Mary and which eight to adore the hely seul" (fot. 32h).

8, The Landes Creaturarum, or Cantido of the Sun C

(fol. 33a).

- 9. A paraphrase of the Pater introduced by the rulerie: Incipiunt landes quas ardinavit, B. pater noster Franciscus et dicebat ipses ad omnes horas dici et noctis et ante officium B. V. Marier sie incipieus: Sanctissime Pater (fol. 34n).
- 10. The office of the Passion (34b-43a). This office, where the psalme are replaced by several series of biblical verses, are designed to make him who repeats them follow, hour by hour, the emotions of the Crucified One from the evening of Hoty Thursday.
- A. rulo for friam in retreat in hermitages? (fol. 43n-43b).

* Son paga 327.

*I give it entire:  Regina sepientia, Dominus to solvet, ena trasorore securia paca simplicitate. Dominus seneta pumpertus, Dominus to solvet, enas tra-sorore menete kamilitate. Dominus seneta caritas, Dominus to solvet, came tra-sorvers seneta obsolicatio. Senetissimos victutes nacaes, consolvet Dominus, a quo centis et proceditis. Its nuthonticity is generatived by a nitation by Colano: 3 Col., 3, 149. Cf. 1995 and 427a.

* Son pages 304 f.

- * I shall not reser to tide; the text is in the Conformities 1986 2.
- *Plar unthoutiefty of this service, to wideh there is not a single allusian in the biographics of St. Francis, is rendered sectain by the life of St. Clura:  Officiam crucis, prout crucis amater Franciscus instituerat (Clura) didicit et affecta simili frequenticit. A. 98., Augusti, t. 11., p. 761a.
- ¹ It implies: Hill qui volunt stare in herenia. This taxt is also found in the Conformitted, 146a, 1.—Of. 2 Col., 9, 43; 100 p. 97.

t Son pugen 1999 ff.

A glance over this list is enough to show that the works of Francis here collected are addressed to all the Brothers, or are a sort of encyclicids, which they are charged to pass on to those for whom they are destined,

The very order of these pieces shows in that we have in this manuscript the primitive library of the Brothers Minor, the collection of which each minister was to earry with him a copy. If was truly their vinticing.

Matthew Paris tells us of his annazement at the sight of these foreign ments, clothed in patched tuning and energing their books in a nort of case suspended from their nacks.

The Assisi manuscript was without doubt dectined to this service; if it is eitent on the subject of the journeys it has made, and of the Brothers to whom it has been a guide and an implication, it at least brings as, more than all the legends, into intimacy with Francis, makes as theil in unison with that heart which never admitted a separation between joy, love, and poetry. As to the date of this manuscript, one must used a be a palengrapher to determine. We have already framed a hypothesis which, if well grounded, would carry it back to the meighborhood of 1240.

the contents were to countenance this early date. In fant, it contains neveral pieces of which the Manual of the Brother Minor very early rid itself.

Very soon they were content to have only the Raheto keep company with the breviery; connetinuer they added the Will. But the other writings, if they did not full sustingly into neglect, cossed at least to be of daily usage.

Those of St. Francis's writings which are not of general interest or do not concern the Brothers naturally find no place in this collection. In this now category we must range the following documents:

- 3. The Rule of 1221.
- 2. The Rule of the Chrisses, which we no longer possess in its original form.
 - 3. A scot of special instruction for ministers-general,3
 - 4. A latter to St. Chra.4
 - 5. Another letter to the same.
 - 6. A letter to Brother Leo.
 - 7. A few prayers.
- 8. The henediction of Brother Leo. The original autograph, which is preserved in the treasury of Sacro Convente, has been very well reproduced by holiograph.
 - 1 Hot pigo 983,
- 9 Seo 100go 167.
- 4 San 10000 348 B.

- 4 Son page 230,
- A Shar jurge 1997,
- 4 See page 203,
- 1 a. Sanctus Dominus Dons noster. Of Spec., 126a; Firmamentum, 186, 2; Conform., 2026, 4.
 - h. Ara Damina saneta. Cf. Spec., 127a; Conform., 138a, 2.
 - v. Sancta Maria rirgo. Of. Spec., 1200; Confarm., 2020, 2,
- "Vide 8. Françola, la die, Paris, 1885 (1966), p. 253. The authentidity of this banediation appears to be well emblished, when it was already jealously generaled during the life of Thomas of Colum. No one less over dround of requiring blotoriest proof of this writing. In this perhaps a mbdukery. The middle of the client is taken up with the lone-diction which was diotated to Brother Law: Beneficot lab Dominus et custodiat to, marmbut faviem suom tibi et misercotne tui convertat cultum some ad to et det tibi paceus. At the ballous, Franch added the letter tun, T, which was, so to openic, like algorithm (flow, 61; 408), and the words t Beneficat Lee Dominus benedicat to.

Thon when this memorial became a part of the roles of the Solut, Brother Lee, to anthoutiente it in a measure, solded the following males; toward the indiduct the fractis Franciscus scripsit mane sure islam benedictionem with fratri Leoni; toward the close; Simili made ferit island signom than our capite name sun. Int the most reducible annotation is found at the top of the sheet; that or Franciscus duchas annis unto mortem suam first quadrages innot to be afterno ad housem thates Virginis Maries matris Des et best Michael archangelia festa assump-

An to the two fumous hymno Amor de varitade and In foco l'amor mi mise, they cannot be attributed to St. Francis, at least in their present form.

It belongs to M. Monoci and his numerous and learned combitons to throw light upon these obdicate questions by publishing in a scientific manner the earliest monusments of Italian poetry.

I have already opoken of several fracts of which assured traces have been found, though they themselves are lost. They are much more unnerons than would at first be supposed. In the missionary seed of the early years the Brothers would not concern themselves with collecting documents. We do not write our memoirs in the fulness of our youth.

We must also remember that Portionents had neither archives nor library. If was a chapet ten pacen long, with a few huts gathered around it. The Order was lenguar old before it had seen any other than a single back; a New Testament. The Brothers did not even keep this one. Francis, having nothing class gave it to a pear wearan who asked for almo, and when Pietro di Catania, his vienr, expressed his ourprise at this prodigality: "Has she not given her two sens to the Order?" replied the master quickly.

tionis sauctis Marias Virginis usque ad festura saucti Machael septembris et facta est super cum munus Domini per exsimene et allacationem seva-phym et impressionem stigmatum an corpore suo. Eveit has landes ex alio latere entule scriptas et mono, sua scripsit gratius agens Domina de bene-ficio sihi collata. Vido 2 Vol., 2, 19.

¹ Wadding gives the text according test, Hernardine da Siena. Opera, L. iv., seeme 16, extraord, et seeme fevia seeta Parasseeres. Amoud: Lagganda trium scierum, p. 146.

³ Wadding has drawn the text from Bt. Recuarding, less vit, servin ly, extraord. It was also reproduced by Amond, los, vit, p. 105. Two very enrings versions may be found to the Allscotlamer, 1889, pp. 40 and 100.

5 2 Col., B, 35. The took place under the election of Pietro di Calania; consequently isotropic September 29, 1220, and March 10, 1221.

II

BIOGRAPHIES PROPERLY SO CALLED

L. PICKGMINAGY NOPE

To form a somewhat exact notion of the documents which are to accupy us, we must put them back into the midst of the circumstances in which they appeared, study them in detail, and determine the special value of each one.

Here, more than anywhere else, we must beware of facile theories and hasty generalizations. The same life described by two equally trathful contemporaries may take on a very different coloring. This is especially the case if the man concerned has aroused enthusiasm and wrath, if his immost thought, his works, have been the subject of discussion, if the very men who were commissioned to realize his ideals and carry on his work are divided, and at odds with one mother.

This was the case with St. Francis. In his lifetime and before his own eyes divergences manifested themselves, at first secretly, then in the light of day.

In a rapture of leve he went from cottage to cottage, from costle to costle, preaching absolute poverty; but that brown the enthusiasm, that unbounded idealism, could not last long. The Order of the Brothers Minor in process of growth was open not only to a few choice spirits atlanto with mystic fervor, but to all men who espired after a religious reformation; pious laymen, names undeceived as to the virtues of the ancient Orders, priests shocked at the vices of the accular clergy, all brought with them anintentionally no doubt and even unconsciously too much of their old man not by degrees to transform the institution.

Francis perceived the peril coveral years before his death, and made every effort to avert it. Even in his dying hour we see him summoning all his powers to declare his Will caree again, and see clearly as possible and to conjure his Bothers never to teach the Rule even under protext of commenting upon or explaining it Alan! four years had not rolled away when Gregory IX, at the prayer of the Brothers themselves, became the first one of a long series of poslitic who have explained the Rule.

Poverty, as Francia understood it, soon because only a memory. The mexampled success of the Order brought to it not merely new recenits, but maney. How refuse it when there were no many works to found? Many of this friara discovered that their master had exaggerated many things, that idealess of meaning were to be observed in the Hule, for example, between connects and precipits. The door once opened to interpretations, it became impossible to close it. The Franciscan family began to be divided into opposing parties often difficult to distinguish.

At first there were a few restless, undisciplined monwho grouped themselves around the older frings. The latter, in their character of first companican of the Saint, found a moral authority after greater than the official authority of the ministers and grandings. The people furned to them by instinct as to the true continuers of St. Francis's work. They were not far from right.

They had the vigor, the volumence of absolute convictions; they could not have temporized that they desired to do so. When they emerged from their hermitages in the Apennines, their eyes shining with the fever of their ideas, alsorbed in contempdation, their whole being spake of the radiant visions they enjoyed; and the amazed and subdued multitude would kneel to kiss the prints of their feet with hearts mysteriously stirred.

¹ Bull Qua congati of Replember 28, 1200. Bus p. 300.

A larger group was that of those Brothers who condemned these methods without being any the less saints. Born far away from Umbria, in countries where nature seems to be a step-mether, where adoration, far from being the instinctive act of a happy soul soaring upward to bless the heavenly Father, is, on the contrary, the despairing cry of an atom lost in immensity, they desired above all things a religious reformation, rational and prefound. They droamed of bringing the Church back to the purity of the ancient days, and saw in the vow of poverty, understood in its largest sense, the bost means of struggling against the vices of the clergy; but they forget the freshness, the Italian gayety, the sunny poetry that there had been in Francis's mission.

Full of admiration for him, they yet desired to onlarge the foundations of his work, and for that they would neglect no means of influence, certainly not learning.

This tendency was the dominant one in Franco, Germany, and England. In Italy it was represented by a very powerful party, powerful if not in the number, at least in the authority, of its representatives. This was the party favored by the papacy. It was the party of Brother Elias and all the ministers-general of the Order in the thirteenth century, if we except Giovanni di Parma (1247–1257) and Raimondo Ganfridi (1289–1295).

Iu Italy a third group, the liberals, was much more numerous; men of medicerity to whom monastic life appeared the most facile existence, vagrant monks happy to secure an aftermath of success by displaying the new Rule, formed in this country the greater part of the Frauciscan family.

We can understand without difficulty that documents emanating from such different quarters must bear the impress of their origin. The men who are to bring us their testimony are combutants in the strapple over the question of poverty, a strapple which for two contains agitated the Church, aroused all semacioness, and which had its monsters and its marry is.

To determine the value of these witnesses we must first of all discover their origin. It is evident that the mirratives of the necessary comise party of the right or the left can have but idender value where controverted points are concerned; whose the conclusion that the authority of a mirrator may vary from page to page, or even from line to line.

These considerations, as aimple that one almost needs to beg pardon for aftering them, have not, however, guided those who have atudied St. Francisch life. The most learned, like Wadding and Papini, have brought together the narratives of different biographers, here and there pruning these that are too contradictory; but they have done this at random, with neither rule nor method, guided by the impression of the moment.

The long work of the Hallamlist Snyoken is vitinted by an ambiguin fault; fixed in his principle that the oldest documents are always the load, he takes his stand upon the first Life of Thomes of Celano as upon an impregnable rock, and judges all other legends by that one?

When we connect the documents with the disturbed observable with the disturbed observable which twonght them into being, some of their natherity, others which have been neglected, as being in contradiction with witnesses who have become as to my official, amblenly recover

¹ It is modifies to say that I have neclected to put myself in apposition to that principle, one of the most frailful of criticism, but still it should not be entidezed about.

The learned works that have appeared in Germany in this years our in the same way. They will be found when in the healy of the work.

credit, and in fact all gain a new life which doubles their interest.

This altered point of view in the valuation of the sources, this criticism which I am inclined to call reciprocal and organic, brings about profound alterations in the biography of St. Francis. By a phenomenon which may appear strange we ond by sketching a portrait of him much more like that which exists in the popular imagination of Italy than that made by the learned historians above mentioned.

When Francis died (1226) the parties which divided the Order had already entered into conflict. That event precipitated the crisis: Brother Elias had been fer five years exercising the functions of minister-general with the title of viear. He displayed an amazing activity. Interached in the confidence of Gregory IX, he removed the Zelanti from their charges, strongthened the discipline even in the most remote provinces, obtained numerous privileges from the curia, and with incredible rapidity prepared for the building of the double basiliea, destined for the repose of the ashes of the Stigmatized Saint; but notwithstanding all his efforts, the chapter of 1227 set bim aside and chose Giovanni Parenti as minister-general.

Furious at this cheek, he immediately set all influences to work to be chosen at the following chapter. It even seems as if he paid no attention to the nomination of Giovanni Parenti, and continued to go on as if he had been minister,¹

Very popular among the Assisans, who were dazzlod by the magnificence of the monument which was springing up on the Hill of Hell, new become the Hill of Paradise, sure of being supported by a considerable party in the Order and by the pope, he pushed forward the work on the basilies with a decision and success perhaps unique in the annals of architecture.)

¹ Eccl., 18. Voluerunt ipsi, quos ad capitulam concesserat venire frater Helias; nam omnes concessit, etc. An. fr., t. i., p. 241. Of. Mon. Germ. hist. Script., t., 28, p. 564.

All this could not be done without arousing the indignation of the Zeulots of poverty. When they saw a monumental poor-box, designed to receive the alms of the faithful, upon the tunds of him who had forbidden his disciples the more contact of money, it seemed to them that Francis's prophecy of the speatury of a part of the Order was about to be fulfilled. A tempest of revolt swapt over the hermitages of Pubria. Must they not, by any means, prevent this abomination in the hely place? . They know that Elies was terrible in his severities, but his opponents felt in themselves contage to go to the last extremity, and suffer everything to defeat their convintions. One day the poor box was found shaftered by

To this degree of intensity the struggle had arrived.

Althis crisis the first begand appeared.

Brother Less and his friends.

CTho double of Princis recurred on October 3, 1920. The Murch 20, 1928, Eliconequived the site for the besilter. The Instrumentum distinctions is all preserved at Acade. Place So. 1 of the Iwalfih pade age of Instrumenta disease pertinently as Security Consentance. It has been published by Thodo. From term 1820, p. 359.

cm duty 17th of the came year, the day after the canonization, Bregory 1X, adonally hild the first shore. Less than two years afterward the favor church was finished, and on May 25, 1730, the body of the Saint was carried there. In 1730 the Pipper church was finished. It was already described with a first section of the crucilly ever thereta Pleane pointed Effect life size, knowing at the foot of the crucilly ever the attention of the church the charge with resolved the fargons helds where choses will delight all the campainth resolved the fargons helds where choses will delight all the campaint thurth. Thus, then, three mentics and a helf before the campaint thus, Effect the site of the basilies. The act of commission commonwell at the sect of May, 1229 pt Col., 123 and 124, 137, Pulliust, 811405.

⁾ Spra., 187a. Cf. An fr., B. p. We and mobi-

11. Pluot lier by Thomas of Celano!

Thomas of Celano, in writing this logond, to which he was later to return for its completion, obeyed an express order of Pope Gregory IX.2

Why did he not apply to one of the Brothers of the Saint's immediate circle? The talent of this author tophic Bulliordists followed Hoctext (A. 88., Octobris, 4, 16., pp. 688-728) of a manageript of the Cistorsian abboy of tengiont in the discuss of Bulesons. It line close twen published in Remodin 1806, without the names of the collins (to reality by the Convent Futher Binebil), under the Mac: Secuplici vici B. Promeisci Assisiatis vita dual auctors B. Thomas do Cohena, monarding to a manageript (of Failerone, in the March of Amouns) which was stated in the visinity of Terul by hygands from the Brithing alongool with bringing it, back. The mesonal text was reprindimed at Roune In 1980 by Camon Amoud : Vita primers, Prancisch conture B. Planua de Celana, Banua, Opografia della pace, 1880, In 8vo, 42 pp. The citations will follow the divisions under by the Ballandists, but in many important pressages the Rheshil Amoul text gives better readings than that of the Bollandbate. The latter has been been and there retanahad and filled out. See, for example, I Gel., 24 and 34. As for the minimeripte, thather Double thinks that the added of these which are lenewn to that at the colonic; Archive de hi ceroner de Aragon, Ripoth, a. 41 (Archiv., 1 4., p. 148). There become he the National Lie luncy of Parin, Latin above, No. (BPC, which includes a surlous note) O Apad Perusiaan felie daganus papa Gregorias nomus glariosi secundo pontificus su' crino, qui ete kal, mertii (Estruory 25, 1990) legendem hano recepit, constanted at centuit fore tenendom." Another minimiscipt, which moulto attention, both however of its up, thirteenth century, and luments of the correction is the text, and which appears to large essapert the researches of the students of the Franchenne, is the one owned by the Écule de Médletre et Montpellier, No. 30, la vellure felie : Passionale vetus ecclesia S. Henigai divionensis. The story of Colume ecouplus In it the for, Miln 2716. The text ends shruptly be the middle of paragraph 119 with aupiciocostemblant. Except for this final broak it homorphoto. Cf. Archiven Pertz, t. vII., pp. 195 and 199. Vide General ontalogue of the measure tiple of the public libraries of the departments, ե, ե, դե ԶՁե

2 Vide I Col., Prof. Juliente domino et gloricco Papa Gregoria, Calano wrote it after the camendaction (July 16, 1228) and before February 26, might explain this choice, but besides the fact that liferary considerations would in this case hold a secondary place. Brother Lea and neveral others proved later that they also knew how to hundle the pen.

1220, for the date indicated above raisen no difficulty.

If Celano was put in trust with the official biography, it is because, being equally in sympathy with Gregory IX, and Brother Elins, his absorber had kept bin out of this conflicts which had unorbed the last years of Francia's life. Of an icenia temper, he belonged to the entegory of those south who easily persuade themselves that obselience is the first of virtues, that every superior is a saint; and if unbackity be is not, that we should now the less not as though he were,

We have some landwedge of his life. A untive of Colasno in the Abruzzi, he discreetly observes that his family was mable, even adding, with a fourth of artless aimplicity, that the meder had a possible regard for mobile and educalled Brothern. He entered the Order about 1216, im the return of Francis from Spain.

At the chapter of 1924 Chear of Speyer, charged with the mission to Germany, took him mining these who were to accompany him? In 1923 he was moned onstodo of Mayoneo, Worms, Cologue, and Spoyor, April of the saum year, when Cassar returned to Haly, devenied with the longing to not St. Francia again, he commissioned Colano to excente his functions until the arrival of the new provincial.3

We have no information as he where he was after the elimpter-general held at Spayor September 8, 1923.

¹ I. Cal., 56. Perhaps be was the secof that Thomas, Point of Colane, to whom Rycondt dl. 8. Bermans an offen made allusion by bis chrode ole: 1919 1998. Becaling two letters of Friederlick H. to Hemorlio III. on April 24 and 25, 1228, published in Winekelinaam: deta imperi inedita, t. L., p. 202, * (Hord., 19.

^{*}Glord., Hi and HI.

must have been in Assisi in 1228, for his account of the canonization is that of an eye-witness. He was there again in 1230, and doubtless clothed with an important office, since he could commit to Brother Giordano the relics of St. Francis.

Written in a pleasing style, very often poetic, his work breather an affecting admiration for his here; his testimory at once makes itself felt as sincere and true; when he is partial it is without intention and even without his knowledge. The weak point in this biography is the picture which it outlines of the relations between Brother Elian and the founder of the Order: from the chapters devoted to the last two years we receive a very clear impression that Elian was unused by Prancis to succeed him.

Now if we reflect that at the time when Celana wrote, Glovnini Parenti was minister-general, we at once perceive the bearing of these indications. Every opportunity is soized to give a preponderating importance to Elian. It is a true manifesto in his favor.

Hayo we reasen to blume Celune? I think not. We ⁽Glord., 50.—Of. Glasslerger, nuc. 1290.—The question whether in is the author of the Dies ear would be out of place here.

²This is so true that the majority of bibberisus lave been brought to believe in two generalates of Class one to 1227-1230, the other is 1236-1238. The latter Non-creeded of Forderich 11. (1230) gives the main bleas Receive paper iste quenchine religiosame et timeratum fratrem Holyam, industrium crelinis fratrum advanum obsipso beste Francisco patro ordinic originationis sure tempore constitutum. In adiam nostrum deposait. Halling Undoolber: Hist, dipl. Fred. H., 4. v., p. 346.

The tanamed only sure, 1 Col., 49.

^{11.154,} ub. (19, 105, 100). The account of the Renediction is especially significant. Super-quent impair (Franciscus) tenes dexterom medical Super-frations. Helena, linguisms. Et ego sic colo, sit. 1 Cal., 108. These last words obviously disclose the intention. Cf. 2 Cal., 9, 169.

must simply remember that his work might with justing be called the legend of Gregory IX. Elice was the pupils man, and the largeraphy is worked apetron the information be gave. He could not avoid dwelling with populin sulidaction upon his intimacy with Francis.

On the other hand, we cannot expect to find here such details as might have routained the preferrious of the alversacies of Elias, these unruly Zealots who were already proudly adorning themselves with the title of Companions of the Soint and endeavoring to constitute assert of agiritnal aristocracy in the Order. Among them were four who during the last two years had not, so tresay, quitted Francis. We can imagine how difficult it was not to speak of them. Celano carefully omits to mention their names under prefest of sparing their modesty; Sout by the praises his ished upon Gregory IX., Brother Elins, St. Chara, and even upon very accombary persons, ha shown that his discretion is for from being always as abert.

All this in very serious, but we must ned exaggerate il-There is an evident partiality, but it would be unjust to go farther and believe, no men did lider, that the heat part of Francis's life was an active struggle against the very person of Eline. A struggle there sarely was, but it was against temtencies where spring Francis did not perceive. The carried with him to his tombe his defusion as to his ro Inhagor,

For that matter this defect is after all accordary so far as the physiognomy of Francis himself is concerned. In Colamo's Life, as in the Three Companions or the Fioretti, ¹⁴ Poly 100; of Hit and India Brather Leads not even named in the whole work. Nor Angelo, Bluminalo, Masseo ciller !

⁽¹⁾ Col., Prof., 78-76; 99-104; 423-423. Next to St. Frauds, Gregory IX, and firether Eliza (CCol., 49), 1857 (1957) 1160 (1969) are in the foreground.

^{*1} Col., 18 and 19; 140 and 147, he appears with a smile for all joys, and floods of tears for all wors; we find everywhere the restrained emotion of the writer; his learn in subjected by the moral beauty of his here.

111. Shaves of the History of the Order from 1230-1244

When Thomas of Colano closed his legond by perceived more than anyone the deficiencies of his work, for which he had been able to collect but insufficient material.

Plias and the other Assistan brothers had ledd him of Prancis's youth and his netivity in Umbring but knosides that he would have preferred, whether from pradence or from love of peace, to keep silence upon cortain avents, there were long periods upon which he had not received a single item of information.²

He therefore seems to indicate his intention of resuming and completing his work,"

This is not the place to write the history of the Order, but a few facts are necessary to put the documents into their proper surroundings.

Elected adminter-general in 1232, Brother Elias Look advantage of the fact to labor with indominate emergy toward the realization of his own ideas. In all the provinces new collections were organized for the Basilien of Assiai, the week upon which was probed with an activity which however injured neither the strength of the edition

Offices which accurred during the observe of Francia (1990-1991). He averlooks the difficulties met at Rome to seching the approbation of the first Rule; he as arions these connected neither with the second nor the third, and makes no althohem to the electrodamen which provoked them. He tereguized them, however, having fixed in infimory with Pagar of Spayer, the collaborator of the second (1921).

⁹ For example, Francish journey to Spain

²⁴ Cal., 1, 193. Et sola que necessaria magis occurrant ad processas Intentiones calmeters. It is to be abserved that in the prologic buspeaks in the singular.

nor lke beauty of its details, which are as finished and perfect as those of my monument in Europe.

We may conscive of the enormous some which it had been necessary to raise in order to complete such an enterprise in scenlard a time. More than that, Brolher Eliza exacted absolute obedience from all his subordinates; saming and removing the provincial ministers according to his personal views, he neglected to convoke the chapter general, and sent his emissaries under the mane of visitors into all the provinces to scentre the execution of his orders.

The underste party in Germany, France, and England very soon found his yoke insupportable. It was land for them to be directed by an Italian minister resident at Assisi, a small town quite aside from the highways of civilization, entirely a stranger to the accentic movement concentral in the universities of Oxford, Paris, and Bobern.

In the indignation of the Zelanti against Eline and his contempt for the Rule, they found a decisive support. Very soon the minister had for his defence nothing had his own energy, and the favor of the pope and of the few Halian moderates. By a great increase of vigilance and severity he represent neveral attempts at revolt.

His adversaries, however, ancreaded in establishing secret intelligence at the court of Home; even the popels confessor was gained; yet in spite of all these circumstances, the success of the conspincy was still uncertain when the chapter of 1939 opened.

Gregory IX., still favorable to Elim, presided. Four gave ambles courage to the conspirators; they throw their accountions in their enemy's face.

¹ In 1998 to lead sout Ellas to Cromona, charged with a mission for Frederick II. Faloudoid, ann. 1990. See also the reception given by Gregory IX, to the appellants against the General. Given., 63,

Thomas of Eccluston gives a highly colored narrative of what took place. Elias was proud, violent, even threatening. There were cries and vasiferations from both sides; they were about to came to blows when a few words from the pope restored siteaen. He had made up his mind to abundon his protegé. He asked for his resignation. Elias indigmently refused.

Gregory IX, then explained that in keeping him in charge he had thought himself acting in accordance with the wisher of the majority; that he had no intention to demind the Order, and, since the Brathers no longer desired Elim, he declared him deposed from the generalate.

The joy of the victors, may Errleston, was immense and inefficite. They chose Atherto di Pisa, provincial of England, to succeed him, and from that time bent all their efforts to represent Elian as a creature of Frederick 11.1 The fermer minister wrote indeed to the pape to explain his conduct, but the letter did not reach its destination. It must have reached the hands of his successor, and not been sent forward; when Alberto of Pisa died it was found in his timic.2

All the fury of the aged pontiff was unclusted against Elian. One must read the documents to see to what a height his anger could rise. The frier retorted with a virulence which though less wordy was far more over-powering.

Chao the letter of Frederick II, to Elles upon the translation of St. Elizabeth, May, 1230. Witholacam, Acta I., p. 200. 12. Hullurd-Britadien, Hist. dipl. 160: p. cc.

v The nutborities for this story are: Catalogus ministrorum of Bernard of Ressa, ap Electe, Zeitschrift, vol. 7 (1881), p. 1899; Speculum, 2076, and especially 167a 176a; Esal , 184 Glord., 91 Bit, Speculum, Morin., trant 1., for 1896.

A Asserthat clium ipre prosdictus trater lleljus papum . . . frandem fivere de prenuis collecta ad succursum Terro Sancte, soripta

These events grined an indescribable notoriety all over Europe and threw the Order into profound disturbance. Many of the partissues of Elias because eagvinced that they had been deceived by an impostor, and they drew toward the groupe of Zenholo, who never remort to demand the abservance pure and simple of the Rule and the Will,

Thomas of Celano was of this number, With profound sadness he saw the immortalds influences that were merelly undermining the Franciscott institute and mouncing it with rain. Alteraly a refer to was going the rounds of the convents, singing the victory of Paris over Annini, that in, of learning over poverty,

The Zadots gained new comage. Purcendomed to the subfleties of evelopiedical politics, they did and wesecive that the people, while condomning Brother Elins, had in nowing modified the general course which he had marked out for the Order. The ministers general, Alberto di Pion, 1999 1940, Aymon of Faversham, 1940. 1944, Conscenting the Jesi, 1914-1917, were all, with different iduales of meaning, representatives of this mulerate party.

Thomas of Celimo's first legeral had become impose etiam ad beneplacituus suure ku varanna suu kullavo elevis et sine Fratenii assensu et eliam vedulas vacuas, set la latas, unitas urau ils suis tradent e e e et alla multa cuerrala sorpe mot decasno papa, peneus essaum la ecto, Mattle, Paris, Chem. May, ann. 1939, ap. Mon., they hist. Striple. t. 28, p. 182, 17, Philipp, a 2493

⁴ Vido Ryconell (II 9) Gormano, Obern , up Mov. G. v. Alet. Physiphy 4. III, p. 980, and, 1996. The latter of Frederick complaining of the depte althur of Elliss (1930) - Hallisof Dicholles, Rist Phill, v., pp. 346-346, -Of, the Hall, Attendits at petrom, at there adorf Polymary, 1930, ibld.,

pp. 337-730; Publicast, 10949

[†] He was without should one of the littlewest adversasies of the emperor. His village hiel here forest in 1924, by review of Frederick H , and the Inhabitionis transported to thelly, afterward 30 Marta, - Receased fall N Germann, be, etc., unn. 1924 and 1924.

sible. The preminence there given to Klius was almost a scandal. The necessity of working it over and completing it became electly evident at the elapter of General (1244).

All the Brothers who but anything to tell about Francis's life were invited to commit it to writing and send it to the minister Croscentius do Jesi. The latter immediately caused a truct to be drawn up in the form of a dialogue, commencing with the words: "Venerabilium pesto Patrum," So woon after as the time of Bornard do Borso, only fragments of this were left."

But happily several of the works which saw the light in consequence of the decision of this chapter have been preserved to us. It is to this that we owe the Legend of the Three Companions and the Second Life by Thomas of Colmo.

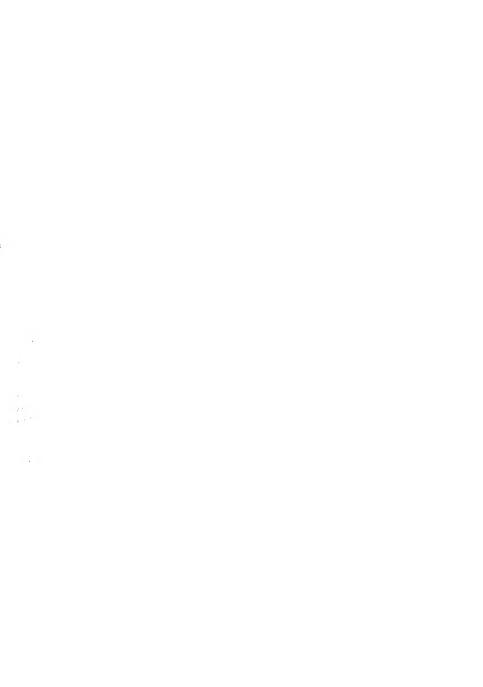

IV. LEGIEND OF THE THREE COMPANIONS 3

This life of St. Francis which line come down to us under the name of the Legend of the Three Companions

¹ Vida the prologue to 2 Cot, and Octho 3 Soc. Cf. Observer, ann. 1244, An. fr., H., p. 69. Speculion, Moda, 1964, 4, 416.

 Catalogus ministrarum, edited by Elarle; Zentschrift, t. 7 (1883), un, b. Cf. Spac., 20% — Mark of Idahou openhoof it a little more at length, link he gives the honor of it to Glavnoul of Param, ed. Dlob, t. fl., p. 48.—On the other hand, in manneerly 601 of the archives of the Sacra-Canvento at Assist to estalogue of the Money of the mouvent made in 1881) to found, fo. 46s, a mote of that work: A Dydoyns sanctorem fractions rum postition capes principions est: Traorabilist gesta patrum digensigns memoria, fluis rever, non-indique forms are quantum reperisse consistent.—In qualific courses quaternisature viii.

"The text was published for the that there by the Bellindish (A. 88), Obtains, t. 41), pp. 723-742), after a manuscript of this convent of this Brothera Minor of Lagrain. It is from this collished that we make our obtaining. The oblitions published in Italy in the course of this sentury, cannot be found, except the last, due to Abbé Amord. This one, unfortunately, is for faulty to serve so the leeds of a selectible study. It appointed in Riema in 1990 (ive, pp. 184) nucler the Itale Leyenda S.

We inturally expect to see the Three Companions relating to us with a very particular delight the imamorable features of the legends of which Greecie was the theatre; we turn to the end of the volume, expecting to find the story of the best years of which they were witnesses, and are test in surprise to find nothing of the kind.

While the first half of the work describes Francis's youth, filling out here and there Colmo's First Life, the second in devoted to a picture of the early days of the Order, a picture of incomparable freshness and intensity of life; but alreagely enough, after having told us so much at length of Francis's youth and then of the first days of the Order, the story abruptly teaps over from the year 4220 to the death and the emonization, to which after all only a few pages are given.

This is too extraordinary to be the result of chance. What has Imppered? If is evident that the Tagond of the Three Companions we we have it to-day is only a fragment of the original, which was no doubt revised, corrected, and considerably cut down by the authorities of the Order before they would permit it to be circulated.

¹⁸ Sue, 28-67,

^{3.8} Hor., 49. 73.

The minister general Gressenthau of Jest wer an avovad adversary of the Zealute of the Rule. The contrary blea has been held by M. Miller (Anfitype, p. 1901) but that beared scholar is not, it appears, aspaining with the reeliab of the Chroniele of the Tithulations, which have not a single doubt so to the personations which be directed against the Zealute (Archie, 1-3), pp. 257-260. Anyone who attempts to dispute the identical worth of this proof will their continuation in the bulls of Angort 5, 1944, and of Tetrancy 7, 1946 (Potthest, 1445) and 12007). It was Cressentias also, who obtained a bull stating that the Busilian of Assist was Coput at Mater indivis, while for the Zealute like rick partialist was Coput at Mater indivis, while for the Zealute like rick partialist to the Partiannals (Cres. 100) 3 see, 50; Buc., 28; 2 Geb., 1, 19; Conform., 217 (D. 150) also on Cressentiae, Ulusabergar, and, 1944, An. fr., p. 60; Bleardes, Rull, fr., 1, p. 50247 (Conform., 1316, L.)

If the authors and been intercupted in their work, and obliged to cut about the end, as might have been the case, they would have said so in their letter of curvey, but there are still other arguments in favor of our hypothesis.

Brother Leve having had the first and principal part in the production of the work of the Three Companions, it is often called Brother Leven Legend; now Brother Leven Legend; now Brother Leven Legend is neveral times cited by Chertini di Casali, arraigned before the court of Avignon by the party of the Common Observance. Evidently Chertini wealth laws taken good care not to appeal to an apocryptal dossiment; a falso citation would have been enough to bring him to confusion, and his ensuries would not have failed in unke the most of his improduce. We have at hand all the documents of the trial, attacks, replies, counter replies, and newhere do we see the Liberale accume their adversary of fabolical. For that matter, the latter unkes his citations with a precision that admits of no eavil.

M. Muller has been but into orrow through a blynder of Ecoloston, 9 (An fr., 6, p. 23). It is explicit that the elepter of Geoma (124) could not have promounced against the Becker the Ecolor published November 14, 124). On the centrory, it is transmitted who willed forth this Dichardio, against which, not willout respect, the 2 color found a has jurily of the chapter of Mets (1230) provided over by Glovanul of Partin, it doebled enough of any Dichardi's Chickey, it p. 270). This whose is found to be confirmed by a presign of the Speculant Madin (Ramon, Bull), it 62a: to her explicated Anglements from confirming dichardio D. Innovembi, p. 6, manual suspenses elect to Capitale Miller PESSI. Et proception est annuface are quite of the central for far quites against to the guidance.

Published with all necessary scientific opposities by F. Barlo, B. J., In the studies Zur. Forgeschickle des Concels von Vocane — "Dobie, II., pp. 353–416; 19., pp. 1–395

Non, for example, Archiv, M., p. 103 M. Of 40. Additive a rha et facta b. Prancisci slout est aliquando su legendo et sient a sells sancté patris ambies et in vedules sanctes nacionales fentais Isanes legs mano sun rome scriptis, ment ab apolicaté Francisci material. 16., p. 10.

He appeals to writings to be found in a press in the convent of Assiai, of which he gives sometimes a copy, sometimes an original. We are then authorized to conclude that we have been fragments which have survived the suppression of the last and most important part of the Legend of the Three Companions.

It is not surprising that the work of Francis's degrest friends should have been so seriously mulilated. It was the manifesto of a party that Crescentius was hanting down with all his power.

After the fleeting reaction of the generalite of Giovanni di Parma we shall not a man of worth like St. Bomventura moving for the suppression of all the primitive legands that his own compitation may be substituted for them.

It is truly diagratar that no one has perceived the fragmontary state of the work of the Three Companions. The prologue alone tright have suggested this idea. Why should it take three to write a few pages? Why this adomic cumineration of Brothern whose testimony and collaboration are asked for? There would be a surprising dispropertion between the effort and the result.

More than all, the authors may that they about not stop at rolating the miracles, but they desire above all to exhibit the intens of Francis and his life with the Brothers, but we murch in vain for any account of miracles in what we now large."

An Italian translation of this legend, published by

Here aurica patent, por sua [R. Francisci) verba repressa per sanctum frattem errum. Leonem erras serum tam de umudato sameti quitris quam etiam de devotione provideté trateis foremut selemniter consocipa, in libra qui habetur in armanie frattemo de Assisio et in catalis ejus, quos apud mo haben, manya erras lem frateix Louis conserutis. Archie, 50, p. 108, 96, p. 170.

A Rom, Prof. Non-rootenti narrare edum miracula Converautiones insignat et pri besseplaciti schantatem.

Father Stanishans Melchiorni, has saddenly given mean indirect continuation of this point of view. This monk is only its publisher, and has samply been able to discover that in 1577 it was taken from a very ancient manuscript by a certain Muzio Achillei di San Soyerino.

This Rollian translation contained only the last chapbers of the legend, those which tell of the death, the sligmate, and the translation of the remains. It was, then, made at a time when the supple and portion had not been replaced by a short summary of the other begans,

From all this two conclusions emerges for the critical 1. This final summary has not the same authority or the rest of the work, since the time when it was added is unknown. 2. Fragments of a begind by Brother lawer by the Three Companions scattered through later compalitations may be perfectly softheration.

In its present condition this legend of the Three Companions is the finest piece of Franciscan literature, and one of the most delightful productions of the Middle Ages. There is comothing indescribably sweet, confiding, chaste, in those pages, on energy of virile youth which the Fioretti suggest but nover attain to. At norm than six hundred years of distance the purest dream that ever theilled the Christian Church seems to live again.

These frims of Greecie, who, senttered ever the monstain, under the chade of the clive trees, passed their days in singing the Hymn of the Sun, are the true models of the primitive Pudvian Masters. They are all ulike; they are awkwardly possed; everything in and around them sine egainst the most elementary rates of art, and yet their memory parsons you, and when you have long forgetten the works of imprecable modern artists you recall without effort these areations of those maknown painters; for love cults for love, and those vapid personages have very true and pure hearts, a more than human love shines forth from their whole being, they speak to you and make you better.

¹ Leggenda di R. Permesero, tipoprofita Mornel et Raduloni, Revanalli, 1950, 1 vol., 6vo.

^{*}Bus Pathur Brankslaus's preface.

² H Bow., 199-70.

Such is this book, the first utterance of the Spiritual Prancisems, in which we already see the coming to life of some of these held dectrines that not only divided the Franciscan family into two headile branches, but which were to bring some of their defenders to the herotic's stake.

V. FRAUMENTS OF THE SUPPLEMENT PART OF THE LEGEND OF THE TURE COMPANIONS

We may new take a step forward and by he group the fragments of the Legend of the Three Computions, or of Brother Leo, which are to be found in later writings

We must here be more than ever on our guard against absolute theories; one of the most fruitful principles of historic criticism is to prefer contemporary documents, or at least these which are nearest those; but even with those it is necessary to me a little discretion.

Il acouse impossible to attack the reasoning of the Bolhandists, who refuse to know mything of legends written after that of St. Bouwentura (1260), under pretext that, eming after several other authorized biographies, he was latter situated then anyone for getting information and completing the work of his predecessors. In reality this is absurd, for it assumes that Bounventura undertook to write as a historian. This is to forget that he wrote not only for the purpose of editionion, but absens minister general of the Minor Brothers. From this fact his first duty was to keep eitent on many facts, and those not the least interesting. What shall we say of a biography where Francis's Will is not even mentioned?

The book laddo tittle of representing Bt. Francis as taking up the work of Jenus, interrupted (by the fault of the womber clergy) since the time of the aposites. The circumsche consider the members of the slorgy filles extrances. A time, 48 and 51. If, A Book, 48. Invent views. per quem evols Boninus vehit in tota musila fedem suncta Bookesia reformance. Cf. 3 Col., 3, 141. Videbatur recem fratci et omnium comitation turba quad Christi et b. Festocisci unt pursona forct.

It is easy to turn away from a writing of the fourteenth century, on the ground that the author did not see what was going on a hundred years before; still we must not forget that many books of the real of the Middle Ages resemble these edd mannions at which four or two generators have toiled. An inscription on their front offen only shows the touch of the last restorer or the last destroyer, and the names which are set forth with the greatest complaceancy are not always those of the real workmen.

Such have been many Franciscon books; to altribute them to any one nuther would be impracticable; very different hands have worked upon them, and such an analysm has its own charm and interest.

Turning them over—I had almost said associating with them—we come to see elearly into this tangled web, for every work of man boxes the trace of the hand that made it; this trace may perhaps be of an almost impropertible delicacy; it exists more the less, ready to reveal itself to practised eyes. What is more impersonal than the plactugraph of a landscape or of a painting, and yet among several hundreds of proofs the constour will go straight to the work of the operator he prefers.

These reflections were onggested by the careful study of a curious book printed many times since the sixteenth century, the Speculum Vilve'S. Francisci et sociorum ejus, A complete etudy of this work, its nources, its printed editions, the ministronic differences in the miniscripts, would by itself require a volume and an epitema of the history of the Order. I can give here only a few notes, paking for these the oblest edition, that of 1504.

The contasion which reigns here is frightful. Theidents in the life of Francia and his companions are brought together with no plan; several of them are repeated after the interval of a few pages in a quite different manner; * certain chapters are no awkwardly introduced that the compiler has forgotten to remove the number that they have in the work from which he borrowed them; * finally, to our great majorise, we find soveral lacipit.*

¹ Penetiis, repensis domini derdeni de Dinduken per Simonem de Lucre, 30 januarii, 1500 - Impresson Metis per desparem Hooffeder, Anno Domini 1500. These sum officiam are blentleaf, small Choos, of 240 follow body numbered. Udited under the same title by Sportherds, Antweep, 1620, 2 tomes to some volume, 8vo, 200 and 162 pages, with a mess of alterations. The most important numeracipi notembles that of the Vationa 4.274. There are two at the Massim Library, 904 and 1350, dated 1350 and 1360, one at Rectin (MA 1650), 415, 465, no. (98 666, 44). Vide Elimbe, Sentelecti, i vit (1850), p. 3020; Andesta fr., i, h, p. 81; Misselfance, 4966, pp. 119, 404. Cf. A. 801, pp. 550 652.

The chapters are numbered in the Best 32 fellow only, but them numbers teem with arrows, to 32th caput lix., 40th lix., 41th lix., 1bid., 1xii., 42a is , 11i is? Besides at five 48th and 47th there are two chapters taxl. There are two chapters taxl. There are two taxl., two laxii., two laxiii.

The example, the littery of the brigands of Montes Cambe, for 400, and 500. The remedies of Brothes Ellas to Francis, who be emittinally singling, 1966 and 1978. The visit of Glascoulon of Bullevill, 1988 and 1986. The antegraph beyodiction given to Brother Len, 1988, 1986.

At for 9th we need. Perform expitulated charitate et compassione et condervasione et professione et printalisa xxvl. 12f. 2lln. 19fa, 117b, 140a, 197a, 190b, 404b, 140b, where there are similar inflications.

[•] Un the Interpret Symptom enter to Promockel et mobilium glub. Vo. 7b: Incipit Specialism perfection is However, with a little perseverance we seem perceive a few equalities in the laley in the first place, here are neveral chapters of the legend of Bouaventura which seem to have been put in the van us if to protect the rest of the look. If we abstract them not the whole series of chapters from the Finiciti, we shall have diminished the work by nearly three quarters.

If we take away two more chapters taken from St. Bernard of Clairvary and these containing Franciscan prayers, or various affectations concerning the inclulgeness of Portinguals, we finally arrive at a next of residue, if the expression may be fugiven, of a remarkable hours geneity.

Here the style is very different from that in the ourrounding pages, cheesly recalling that of the Three Companions; a single thought impires these pages, that the corner-atoms of the Order is the love of poverty.

Why should we not have here some fragments of the original legend of the Three Companione? We find here nothing which does not fit in with what we know, nothing which suggests the embedlishments of a labe tradition.

To confirm this hypothesis come different passages which we find cited by Libertini di Casali and by Angela Charena as being by Erother Levy and an allentive comparison of the text shows that these authors can neither have drawn them from the Speculum nor the Speculum from them.

There is besides, one phases which agent from the inspiration and style, will suffice at the first plance because the common cargin of most of these pieces.\(^1 - Nos qui eam ipse faimes, \(^2 - We who have been with him.\(^2 - These arms in the constant.)\) words, which recur in almost overy insident,' are in unmy cases only a grateful tribute to their spiritual father, but sometimes, too, they have a touch of bitterness. These termits of Creecio and denty recult to mind their rights. Are we not the only, the true interpretors of the Saint's instructions—we who lived continually with him; we who, hour after hour, have meditated upon his words, his sighe, and his lymna?

We about search for it in various the other phores of the Openhaid and it reappears to the fragments of Brother Leavisted by Blordini di Passii and Angola Plarena.

We can understand that unch protonnions were not to the taske of the Common Observance, and that Grescentius, with an incontestable nutherity, has suppressed nearly all this legend.

As for the fragments that have been preserved to us, though they furnish many delaits about the last yours of St. Francis's life, they still are not those whose loss is no much to be regretted. The authors who reproduen thom were defending a rause. We now them little more than the incidents which in one way or mother concern the question of poverty. They had nothing to do with the other accounts, as they were not writing a bingraphy. But even within these narrow limits these fragments are in the first order of importance; and I lown not logitated to not their largely. It is needless to say that while meribing their origin to the Three Companions, and in particular to Brother two, we must not anagono that we have the very letter in the texts which ture come down to us. The pieces given by Ubortini di Casali and Augebi Claremi am actual citations, and deserve full confidence as much. As for those which are preserved to us in the Spernhan, they may often have been abridged, explanatory index may have alipped into the text, but nowhere decise find interpolations in the bud sense of the word.

[→] P₁₀ ath, Tha, 12a, tha, 10b, 24b, 23b, 29a, 29a, 13th, 43b, 44a, 48b, 11ba, 129a, 140a, 124a, 136a, 160a

² Done not Thomas do Colono my in the prologon of the Second Elfo: "Oceanus crypt, benigns some pater, of laboris highs non contemnenda unnavada..., sextro benedictions converses relitis, corrigends writes it superflux researches."

Finally, if we compare the fragments with the corresponding accounts in the Second Life of Colum, we see that the latter has often borrowed verbatim from Brother Lee, but generally be his considerally abridged the passages, adding reflections tore and there, especially retouching the style to make it more elegant.

PTho begond of Histor, was preserved by the Convent of Arabit; "One nia , , , fueront conscripta , , , per leaning , , , in libro out habetur in arma in frateura de Asisia" - Olios Bid, Archiv, Illa u listor, Brother ben seems to base gone move liste detail as to within beta; he confided them new memorality to the Chileson, @hnotable chies ques aquat une le têre, maner epicatem preteres. Leonies conwrightis," Bld. Cf. p. Phs. " Qual regester a sincte finthe Courally predicto et cica core audast o execto peatre Leone que present ent el regulane scripsit. Et los éposos in quelosoban volulis manu sua comweighte ques commontant in monasterie it Chair carbottenden modulit in legerata publica sections, receive grain aleques acoust till in quibus en tune destatio copular publica as costi abstruct molecost frutees ande temp nas in famous? Ablass, life v , cap b - Cl. Antip states, p. 148. Cl. Speculion, 406 . " Infra stripta certa, frates les socies et Confeme H. Francisch, Conrado de Offiche, diret et as habitisse co nea Heate Patris nodel Francisci, qua blem Frater Co radas rebilit, apad Rinetum Da พิเดียกการแบบ (เกาะเกาะ

Coursel di tillitic copied, then, both the look of firether her and his rotality be relied to it certain real information (Actor (it cent.) life Y, cup il), and an perhaps composed the collection reaction cited by the Culturality and of the ifte of Legacity Autique and reproduced in part to the Speadum.

The numbering of the chapters, which the Dipocalitic has aschwardly limited willoud miding that they were not in second with his own division adopted by Conrad di Officia.

It may well be that, after the Interdiction of his book and its confises that at the Barra Conventer, Brother has repeated in his retail a large part of the fucts already made, so that the same inchlant, while condig subdy from limiter has, could be presented ander two different forms, according as it would be excited from the book or the extul.

Such a comparison soon proves that Brother Loo's carratives are the original and that it is inpossible to see in them a later amplification of those of Thomas of Colame, as we might at first but ampted to think thom.

VI. SECOND LIFE BY PROMAB DE ORGANO?

First Part

In consequence of the decision of the chapter of 1244 genrels was begun to all quarters for acomarists of the

I Compace, for example, 2 Pet., 120: Vecalion of John the Shople, and Operation, f. 37a. From the resount of Phones de Calana, one does not independent what item John to St. Francis; in the Speanlam averything is explained, but Colonia loss not dured to depict Francis going about presching with a broom open the doubler to sweep the dirty sharedes.

* It was published for the that time at Rome, in 1806, by Ruther Roadil, following upon the First Life (vide above, p. 305, note 2), and restand in 1869 by Able Amord: Fits security 8. Francisci Assistensis austors B. Thomasto Colore of its discipulo. Rome, tipografia della pass, (800, 890, 162 pp. The clintians are from this last edition, which I collided at Acade with the most important of the rare manuscripts at promot known: Archivea of Sacra Conventa, M8, 636, on purchasent of the and of the thirteenth contrary. If I do not mistake, 180 mPilm, by 143; 103 numbered pages. Except for the fact that the book is divided into two parts instead of these, the last two forming only one, I have not found that it noticeably different from the text published by Amord; the chapters are divided only by a paragraph and a red lelter, but they have in the table which occupien the flat soccus pages of the volume the same titles is in the childed Amord.

This tisecond Life exampled the resourches of the Bolhondhila. It is impossible to explain how these embands ignored the worth of the manner tips which Father Theologis, keeper of the records of Andal, nonthered to them, and of which he affered them a vapy (A. 98., O.C., 1. 16., p. 5361). Father Boyshon was them thrown into inextriculable difficulties, and exposed to a fathere to understand the links of bloggraphies of the Francis arranged by the mondists of the Order; he was at the mine time deprived of one of the most fruitfal sources of hefuluting upon the actual works of the Point. Professor Miller (Distancial Region). His conclusions appear to no marrow and extreme. Cf. Analogood.

ì

for was perhaps alone at first, but little by little a group of collaborators formed itself anew about him.' Those forth nothing prevented his doing with that portion of the work of the Three Companions which Crescentius had suppressed what he had already done with the part he had approved.

The Legend of Brother Loo has thus come down to us, entirely worked over by Thomas of Cebaro, alridged and with all its freshmess grow, but still of expital inquitance in the always of the ranjor part of the original.

The events of which we present two accounts permit no to necessary the extent of our best. We find, in fact, in Celura's compilation all that we expected to find in the Three Companions: the incidents belong especially to the last two years of Francis's life, and the scena of many of them is either therefore or one of the hermilages of the value of Ricti; according to tradition, Brother Low was the here of a great number of the incidents have related and all the citations that Ubertini di Casali makes from Brother Lovés book find their correspondents here.

Müller suggeste 1. Defines, p. 1755, with the ascend part (counting three with the Amoni edition of the Besond Lite. 17, upistic Religion ested self-intule those not beyont; 27, this second part is not a collection of talgeous, using this most in the cense of one vertices enter which it had in the thickenth century. The twenty too a hapters of this second part have a marked only a they might be untilified. Periods a prophet, but not Francis or Remoderatives.

'In the Prologon 12 Col., 2, Prol 3 Instants patients the withor opening in the singular, while the Epilogue is written in the invoced a group of disciples.

2 Observing 2 Col., 25, h., 44; 25, 7; 10; 100 — 143-35, 2 Col., 25, 10; 14; 19; 10; 2, 3, 30; 77; 60; 49.0.

186 Francis gives him an antegraph, 2 Cel., 2, Dr. Cf. For, the consider life trade, 2 Cel., 2, W. Les products to him a famino, 2 Cel., 3, 21 ; cf. Conform., 406 — Fr. Lea With Relaying, 2 Cel., 3, 5.

"The text of Phortini di Carah may be found in the Archiv, t. Bi, pp. 58, 76, 76, 88, 189, 179, where Tatler Philospoints out the corresponding passages of 3 Cal.

This second part of the Second Life perfectly reflects the new circumstances to which it owes its existence. The question of Poverty dominates overything; the struggle between the two parties in the Order reveals itself on every page; the collaborators are determined that each event nurrated shall be an indirect lesson to the Liberals, to whom they oppose the Spirituals; the popes had commented on the Rule in the large sense; they, on their side, undertook to comment on it in a sense at encoliteral and spiritual, by the actions and words of its author himself.

History has hardly any part here except as the vehicle of a thesis, a fack which diminishes nothing of the historic value of the information given in the course of these pages. But while in Celand's First Life and in the Legend of the Three Companions the facts succeed one another organically, here they are placed side by side. Therefore when we come to read this work we are sensible of a fall; even from the titerary point of view the inferiority makes itself ernelly felt. Instead of a poem we have before as a catalogue, very cleverly made, it is true, but with no power to move as.

VIII. NOTES ON A FEW SECONDARY DOCUMENTS

a. Celano's Life of St. Francis for Use in the Choir

Thomas of Celano made also a short legend for use in the choir. It is divided into nine lessons and served for the Franciscan breviaries up to the lime when St. Bonaventura made his Legenda Minor.

That of Column may be found in part (the first three lessons) in the Assisi MS. 338, fol. 52a-53b; it is pre-coded by a better of energy: "Requestione frater Benedicte, at de legenda B. P. N. F. quardam exciperem et in novem lectionum seriem ordinarem ote. B. Franciscus de civitate Assisii ortus a parrilibus annis nutritus extitit insolvator."

¹¹ Is the nobject of thirty-coven parratives (1, 2 Cel., 3, 1-37), then come examples on the spirit of prayer (2 Cel., 3, 38-44), the temptations (2 Cel., 3, 58 64), true implices (2 Cel., 3, 64-79), humility (2 Cel., 3, 79 87), a dominated (3 Cel., 3, 88, 91), etc.

This work has no historic importance,

Life of St. Francis in Verse,

In the list of biographers have sometimes, been countril a poem in hexameter verse? the text of which was edited in 1882 by the lancented Cristofani.

This work there not furnish a ningle new historic note, It is the Life by Celana in verse and nothing more; the nuther's desire was to figure as a peed. It is superlustue, therefore, to concern ourselves with it.

v. Riography of St. Francis by Chavanni di Urperana.

One of the biographies which disappeared, no doubt in consequence of the decision of the elapter of 1266, is that of Giovanni di l'eperano. The resemblance of his name to that of Thomas of Celano has occasioned much confusion. The root presions information which we have respecting him is given by Hernard of Besse in the opening of his De Losdibus St. Francisci: "Plenum virtutilus B. Francisci vitem scripcit in Halin exquisita

I be Mainter, 1. 1., p. x1; F. Haranbê, Portionalis, p. 16. Of, Analotis for 3. II., p. xx1. Scirclingt for kath. Thirt, v.B. (1990), p. 807.

³ II. più untiles perma della vita sti S. Francisca d'Assisi ser itta inund all' unno 1230 per per la privas volta pubblic eta et tradetto da Antonio Celebyluni, Prato, 1983, 4 vol., 1986, 1997 pp.

Note, however, two actions of the Microflanes, one on the mame weight of this blography which is found in the theory at Versailles, I, Iv. (1988), p. 34 ff.; the effect on the settler of the poon, J. v. (1880), pp. 3.4 and 74 ff.

⁴ New Yorksin, p. 411t.

⁴ Vide Glassberger, ann. 1944; Anniceta, t. H., p. 88, 12f. A, 88, p. 645 ff.

vir etoquentice fr. Thomas jubente Domino Gregorio papa IX. et eum que incipit: Quasi stella matutina vir venerabilis Dominus et fertur Joannes, Apostolicæ sedis noturins".

In the face of so precise a text all doubt as to the existence of the work of Giovanni di Ceperano is impossible. The Reverend Father Deniffe has been able to throw new light upon this question. In a manuscript containing the liturgy of the Brothers Minor and finished in 1256 he found the nine lessons for the festival of St. Francis preceded by the title: Exe gestis ejus abtreviatis que sie incipiant: Quasi stella (Zeitschrift für kath. Theol., vii., p. 710. Cf. Archiv., i., p. 148). This summary of Ceperane's work gives, as we should expect, no new information; but perhaps we need not despair of finding the very work of this author.

d. Life of St. Francis by Brother Julian.

It was doubtless about 1230 that Brother Julian, the Tenton, who had been chapel-master at the court of the King of France, was commissioned to put the finishing touches to the Office of St. Francis.³ Evidently such a work would contain nothing original, and its loss is little felt.

IN. LEGENT OF ST. BONAVENTORA

Under the generalate of Giovanni di Parma (1247-1257) the Franciscan parties underwent modifications, in consequence of which their opposition became still more striking than before.

Manuscript in the Library of Turb, J. vl., BB, f. 95a.

Plenum cirtuilus S. Fruncisci vitam scripsit in Italia fratur Thomas in Francia voro frater Inlianus scientia et suvolilate conspictus qui ciam norturnali sancti officiam in lillera et cantu possait proter hymnos et aliquas antiphonus quo summus ipse Pontifex et aliqui de Cardinalibus in sancti proconium editorunt. Opening of the De laudibus of Bornard of Bosse. See below, p. 418. Imar. MS., f. 415n. Of. Olord., 58; Conform., 75b.

The Zelanti, with the minister general at their heal, on thusinatically adopted the views of Gioscehino di Piors. The predictions of the Calabrian abbot corresponded loo well with their immed convictions for my other course to be possible: they seemed to see Francis, as a new Christ, inaugurating the third era of the world.

For a few years these dreams moved all Europe; the faith of the describinites were accretent that it multitates way by it cover force; accepted like Salimbeni told themsolves that on the whole it was surely wiser and to be taken numbered by the great estactrophe of 1960, and hastened in crowds to the cell of Hydres to be iniliated by Hugues do Digne in the mysteries of the new times; as to the people, they wated, treathing, divided between hope and terror. Novertheless their advocaries did not consider themselves leaten, and the Liberal party still remained the most numerous. Of an angolic parily, Ginvanni di Parina believed in the consiputoneo of example; events showed how mistaken he was; at the chose of his term of office accordabs were not less flagrant than ten years earlier.

Between these two extreme parties, against which he was to proceed with equal vigor, shoot that of the Moderates, to which belonged St. Ronaventura?

A mystic, but of a formal and orthodox mysticism, has may the revolution toward which the Church was hadoning if the party of the eternal Gosped was tectrinouph; its

^{*} In proof of this is the scientist fetter, this templication matrim, addressed by Renaverduca, April 24, 1257, fromodiately after his close flow to the provincials and custodes upon the externation of the Order Text Specifics, Morti, tract 30, f. 245s.

^{* (}infinition), non-1939, p. 131. The Changes tellintellimium gives a fong and strangestic account of those execute. Instant, t. H., pp. 983 ff, 9. Cano entire extratores of smoothis feature Removations extrapolate polalited observatores to give a more trade and adjusted spirate to favorum throughout of five and polarite spirate to favorum throughout. Inc. p. 2001.

victory would not be that of this or that heresy in detail, it would be, with brief delay, the rain of the entire ecclesiastical editice; he was too perspicacions not to see that in the last analysis the struggle then going on was that of the individual conscience against authority. This explains, and up to a certain point gains him pardon for, his severities against his opponents; he was supported by the court of Rome and by all those who desired to make the Order a school at once of piety and of learning.

No sooner was he elected general than, with a purpose that nover knew hesitation, and a will whose firmness made itself everywhere fell, he took his steps to forward this deathle nim. On the very morrow of his nomination he sketched the programme of reforms against the Liberal party, and at the same time secured the summons of the deathimite Brothers before an ecclesiastical tribunal at Cilta-della-Pievo. This bribunal condemned them to perpetual imprisonment, and it needed the personal intervention of Cardinal Ottobonus, the future Adrian V., for Giovanni di Parma to be left free to retire to the Convent. of Greccio.

The first chapter held under the presidence of Bonaventuru, in the extended decisions of which we find everywhere tokens of his influence, assembled at Nurboune in 1260. He was then commissioned to compose a new life of St. Francis.

We easily understand the anxieties to which this de-

Hon., 3, 1. At the same chapter were collected the constitutions of the Order according to edicts of the preceding chapters; new ones were added to them and all were accuraged. In the first of the twelve rabeles the chapter prescribed that, upon the publication of the account, all the idd constitutions should be destroyed. The text was published in the Firmamentum trium ordinum, for 7b, and restored lately by Father Blurle: Archiv., t. vi. (1801), in his homelful work Die ültesten Redactionen der Ucneval-constitutionen des Franziskonerordens. Of Speculum Morin, fo. 195b of teact, no.

cision of the Brothers was an answer. The number of legends bud greatly increased, for besides those which we have first studied or noted there were others in existence which have completely disappeared, and it had become equally difficult for the Brothers who went forth on missions either to make a choice between them or to carry them all.

The course of the new historian was therefore clearly murked out: he must do the work of compiler and peace backer. He failed in neither. His back is a true sheaf, or rather it is a milletone under which the indefatigalds author lass pressed, somewhat at bazard, the sheaves of his prediscessors. Most of the fine he inserts them just see they are, contining bimself to the work of barvesting them and weeding out the tarea.

Therefore, when we reach the end of this voluminus work we have a very vague impression of St. Francis, We see that he were exist, a very great unist, since he performed an immuorable quantity of miracles, great and small; but we feel very much as if we had been going through a chop of objects of piety. All these statues, whether they are called St. Anthony the Aldred, St. Dominic, St. Theresa, or St. Vincent de Paul, have the same expression of reincing humility, of a somewhat shallow costaby. These are eather, if you please, miracle workers; they are not men; he who made them made them by rule, by process; he had put nothing of his heart in these ever howed foredwards, these lips with their wan unide.

Coal forbid that I should say or think that St. Homeventura was not worthy to write a life of St. Francis, but the circumstances controlled his work, and it is no injustice to him to say that it is fortunate for Francis, and especially for us, that we have another higgraphy of the Poverelle than that of the Beraphic Doctor.

Three years after, in 1263, he brought his completed work to the chapter-general convoked under his presidence at Pisa. It was there solemnly approved.

It is impossible to say whether they thought that the presence of the new legend would suffice to put the old ones out of mind, but it seems that ut this time nothing was said about the latter.

It was not so at the following chapter. This one, held at Paris, came to a decision destined to have disastrons results for the primitive Pranciscan documents. This decree, emanating from an assembly presided over by Bonaventura in person, is too important not to be quoted textually: "Item, the Chapter-general ordains on obedience that all the tegends of the Blessed Francis formerly made shall be destroyed. The Brothers who shall find any without the Order must try to make away with them since the legend made by the General is compiled from accounts of three who almost always accompanied the Blessed Francis; all that they could certainly know and all that is proven has been carefully inserted therein."

Pho Legando Minor of Bonaventura was also approved at this time; it to shaply no alcidgment of the Legando Mijor arranged for use of the choir on the featival of St. Francis and its octave.

Item preceipt. Comerdo capitalum per obrdicatum quod omnes legendo de B. Francisco olim factor delevatur et abi inveniri polerant extra ordinam ipsous fratres studeaut amarere, sun illa legenda quo freta est per Acception sit vongilata pront ipso habuit ab oro illorum qui oum B. Francisco quasi semper furrant et caucta cortitudinaliter sciverint et prohata ibi sint pesita diligenter." This precious tuxt has boon found and published by Father Rhaddl in his prefaca to the text of Colano: Seraphici virt Francisci retue due, p. xl. Wadding scoms to have known of R. at launt Indirectly, for he says: "Utramqua Historium, langiorem et brechtrem, abinit (Bounceatura) triennio post in comitis Pisanis patribus Ordinis, quas reverentur cum gratiarum actione, supurssus Alus Quintibilis (Bounceatura) triennio post in comitis Pisanis patribus Ordinis, quas reverentur cum gratiarum actione, supursus Alus Quintibilis (Bounceatura) triennio post in comitis, quas delicioni petichi für kath. Theol., t. vil. (1888), p. 1880.—"Communicaverat sunctus Franciscus plarima sociis suis et fratribus antiquis, quo oblivioni tradita sunt, tum quint que seripta crant in legonda prima, nova edita a

It would have been difficult to be more provise. We see the perseverance with which Bouwentura carried on his struggle against the extreme parties. This decree explains the almost complete disappearance of the manuscripts of Celano and the Three Companions, since in certain collections even those of Bouaverdara's legond are bardly to be found.

As we have seen, Beneventura nimed to write a nort of afficial or canonical biography; he succeeded only howelf. Most of the accounts that we already know have gone into his coffection, but not without at times suffering profound mathetices. We are not surprised in fluid him passing over Francis's youth with more discretion than Colano in the First Life, but we regret to lind him ornamenting and materializing some of the leveliest incidents of the realier legends.

It is not enough for him that Prancis hears the crusifix of St. Danian speak; he pares to by street on the mesorion that he heard it corpore is any thus and that no one was in the risquel at that moment! Brother Mounide at the chapter of Arles once M. Francis appearenparcia antis. He often ulaidges his predeversion, but this is not his invariable into - When his reaches the necental of the stigmata to devotes long pages to il, relates a most of consultation hold by St. Francis 48 to whether he rould conceal them, and addozeveral mineris due to these sured weards , faither on he returns to the antipot la show a cortain Girolamo, Knight of Assisials. miring to louch with his hands the miraculous usils? On the other land, loo uses a eignificant discretion where ever the companions of the Saint are in question. Ma frates. Bourseadora deleta el destreo la sont, armora lastra lam quil.

[「]肝面」, 快速 類様。

Hou., 場場。

names only three of the first eleven disciples, and no more mentions Brothers Leo, Angelo, Rufino, Massee, than their adversary, Brother Elins.

As to the incidents which we find for the first time in this collection, they hardly make us regret the unknown sources which must have been at the service of the famous Doctor; it would appear that the healing of Morico, restored to health by a low pollots of broad scaked in tho oil of the latan which burned before the ultar of the Virgiu, has little more importance for the life of St. Franeis than the story of the sheep given to Gacomina di Setteseli which awakened its mistress to summen her to go to mass." What shall we think of that other sheep, of Portinucula, which trastened to the choir whenever it heard the psalmody of the friers, and kneeled devoutly for the elevation of the Moty Snormont?

All those incidents, the list of which might be enlarged, betrays the working-over of the legend. St. Francia becomes a great thanmaturgist, but his physiognomy lases its originality.

The greatest fault of this work is, in fact, the vagueness of the figure of the Saint. While in Colume there are the large lines of a soul-history, a sketch of the affecting drawn of a man who attains to the conquest of himself, with Bounventurn all this interior action disappears before divine interventions; his heart is, so to speak, the geometrical locality of a cortain number of visitants; he is a passive instrument in the hands of God, and we really cannot see why he should have been chosen rather than another.

¹ Hernardo (Ben., 28), Egidio (Bon., 29), and Silvestro (Bon., 80)

ч Вои., 49.

⁸ Bon., 112.

⁴ Bon., 114.

Vide Ron., 115; 99, etc. M. Thode has enumerated the stories relating especially to Bourvectura: (Pranz von Assisi, p. 585).

And yet Bonaventura was an Italian; he had seen Dudain; he must have knell and celebrated the sacred mysteries in Portinneals, that cradte of the noblest of religious reformations; he had conversed with Brother Egidio, and must have heard from his lips an echo of the first Franciscan fervor; but, alse! nothing of that rapture passed into his book, and if the truth must be lold, I find it quite inferior to much later documents, to the Pionetti, for example; for they understood, at least in part, the soul of France; they felt the thredding of that heart, with all its acceptiveness, attrivation, indulgence, love, independence, and absence of carefulness.

X. Dr. Levening our Burtharin or Brown (

Bonavontura's work did not discourage the biographera. The historic value of their latent is almost unthing, and we shall not even attempt to catalogue flom.

Bornard of Bosse, a native probably of the south of France and secretary of Bonescentura, made a summery of the various legends. This work, which brings us no unthentic historic indication, is interesting only for the care with which the author less noted the places where

I Manuscript 1, iv. 3d, of the Bloars of the Philosophy of Turin. It is a discussion perchanged of Bos whose of the four-to-outh century, 12d ff. B comprises that the hisparghes of St. Prancis by it Homeworther and a legend of St. Plana afterwards at f. 10 the Relativities. The text will seem be published in the Instantant perchange of the Franciscope of the Franciscope of Quaracchit awar Victoria.

The tending it one quickly discover that he was specially well assignated with the convenience that Presidence Agestanda, and untell with one exceptibility that case cannot them.

^{*}Walding, our 1994, or 1. More passages proved best that have comparied. Representes a in his transfer. "Her come (the special ald of trother lighthesis obeyes of transfer access postine, the charles therealist therefore postional devotes the maintain eyo per Phrydense parter of Florida's come Morestra transfers theorythe that, to bota repose the Brothers who died in odor of sanctity, and relates a mass of visions all tending to prove the excellence of the Order.

Still the publication of this document will perform the valuable office of throwing a little light upon the difficult question of the sources. Several passages of the De taudibus appear again textually in the Speculum,² and as a single glance is enough to show that the Speculum did not copy the De taudibus, it must be that Bernard of Besse had before him a copy, if not of the Speculum at least of a document of the same kind.

III

DIPLOMATIC DOCUMENTS

In this category we place all the acts having a character of public authenticity, particularly those which were drawn up by the pontifical cabinet.

This source of information, where each document has its date, is precisely the one which has been most neglected up to this time.

Bernard do Besse is the anthor of many other writings, notably an important Catalogus Ministrorum generalism published after the Turin manuscript by Father Ehrle (Zeitschrift für kath. Theol., t. vii., pp. 338-362), with a very remarkable critical introduction (ib., pp. 328-387). Cf. Archiv für Litt. n. Kirchg., 1., p. 145.—Bartolommeo di Pisa. when writing his Conformitics, had before him a part of his works, for 148b, 2; 126a, 1; but he calls the anthor semetimes Bernardus de Biesa, then again Johannes de Biesa. See also Mark of Lisbon, t. ii., p. 212, and Hauréau, Notices et extraits, t. vl., p. 158.

* "Douique primes Francisci xii. discipules omnes sanctes fuisse audirimus preter unum qui Ordinem exions loprosus factus laquee vel ulter Judus interitt, no Francisco cum Christo vel in discipulis similatude deflecret," f" 00m.

# 9

most profoundly fashioned the Franciscan institute. We see also the pre-eminent part which the Order had from the beginning in the interest of the future pontiff, and we arrive at perfect accuracy as to the dates of his meetings with St. Francis.

III. Bulle

The pontifical bulls concerning the Franciscans were collected and published in the last century by the monk Sharden.' But from these we gain little help for the history of the origins of the Order.²

The following is a compendious list; the details have been given in the course of the work:

No. 1. August 18, 1218.—Bull Literature addressed to Ugolini. The pope permits him to accept domations of landed properly in behalf of women fleeing the world

1 Buttarium franniscanum sen Rom. Pontificum constitutiones epistole diplomata ordinihus Minorum, Clarissarum et Panitentium empessa, citilit Joh, Hyno. Sharaket and, min. conv., 4 vols., fol., Rome, t. i. (1750), t. H. (1761), t. H. (1763), t. Iv., (1768), - Supplementum ab Anwillinto de Lintura ord, min, obs. Roma, 1780,—Sharatea bad a comparativily ages task, basanse of the number of collections made before his. I shall mention only one of those which I have before me. It is, comparatively, very will ilme, and appears to have escaped the researches of the Franciscan bibliographers: Singularissimum eximitanque opus universis mortalibus sacratissimi ardinis screphici patris nestri Erancisci a Domina Jesu mirabili modo approbali necum a quemplaribus nostri Redemptoris sanctissimis vivariis romanis pantifloidus undtipliurie declarati notitiam habero supientibus profesto per necessarium. Speculum Minnrum . . . par Martinum Morin . . . Ronon, 1500. It is Syn, with unnulment follow, printed with comerkable care. It contains hasides the bulls the principal dissortations upon the Rule, alchorated in the thirtmenth century, and a Memoriale ordinis (flest part, fo 60-82), a kind of outalogon of the ministers-general, which would have preventual name of the errors of the historians, if it had been known,

The Bollumlists themselves lave entirely overlooked these sources of information, thinking, upon the authority of a single builty interpreted passage, that the Order last not obtained a single built before the solemn approval of Honorlus III., November 29, 1228.

(Chrisses) and to declare that these monastories are holden by the Apastolic Sec.

No. 2. June 11, 1219 Cum delecti filii. This bull aldersed in a general way to all prelates, in a nort of safe conduct for the Brothers Minor.

No. 3. December 19, 1219. Socrosancia romana, Privileges conceded to the Sisters (Christee) of Monticelli, near Florence.

No. 4. May 99, 1990. Providing the proper prays the prelater of France to give a kindly reception to the Brothern Minor.

No. 5. September 32, 1220. Cam secundum. Honorine III. prescribes a year of noviciate before the entry into the Order.

No. 6. December 9, 1220. Constitutus in prosentia. This bull concerns a priest of Constantinople who had made a vow to enter the Order. An there is question here of frater Lucies Marister fratrum Minorem de partibus Romania we have here indirect testimony, all the more precious for that remon, no to the period of the establishment of the Order in the Orient.

No. 7. February 13, 1991. New bull for the same priced.

No. 8. December 16, 1991. Signification est noble, Homorius 111, recommends to the Bishop of Rimini to protect the Brothers of Poniteness (Phirst Order).

No. 9. March 22, 12222 Devotionis vestro. Comession to the Franciscano, under certain conditions, in edostrate the efficient in times of interdict.

No. 10. March 29, 1999. Everyote Universitatis. Mission given to the Dominicane, Franciscane, and Brothers of the Troops of San tage in Liebon.

And not March 19t, as thereby a bas it. The original, which there had under my axes in the archives of Acrisi, bears in fact: Dilum Anagule XI. But nyaris postificates acrisi again such.

Nos. 11, 12, and 13.—September 19, 1222.—Sacrosancta Romana. Privileges for the monasteries (Clarisses) of Lucca, Siema, and Perugia.

No. 14. November 29, 1223.—Solet annuere. Solemn approbation of the Rule, which is inserted in the bull.

No. 15. December 18, 1223.—Fratrum Minorum. Concerns apostates from the Order.

No. 16. December 1,1224.—Cumillorum. Authorization given to the Brothers of Penitence to take part in the offices in times of interdict, etc.

No. 17. December 3, 1224.—Quia populares tumultus. Concession of the portable altar.

No. 18. August 28, 1225.—In hiis. Honorius explains to the Bishop of Paris and the Archbishop of Rheims the true meaning of the privileges accorded to the Brothers Mitter.

No. 19. October 7, 1225.—Vincae Domini. This bull contains divers authorizations in favor of the Brothers who are going to evangelize Morocco:

This list includes only those of Shardea's bulls which may directly or indirectly throw some light upon the life of St. Trancis and his institute. Shardea's nomenclature is surely incomplete and should be revised when the Registers of Honorius III. shall have been published in full.

The Abbé Herey has indeed published in five volumes what he entities the Opera omnia of Romains III., but he emits, without a word of explanation, a great another of letters, certain of which are brought forward in the well-known calcetion of Pottlast. The Abbé Pietro Presenti has undertaken to publish a componding of all the bulls of this paper according to the original Registers of the Vatican. I regest del Pantifica Onerio III. Roma, t. 1., 1884. Volume i, only has as yet appeared.

W

CHRONICLERS OF THE INDER

L. Chipolater of Theories Chapter of the Blash !

Born at Giano, in Umbria, in the mountainous district which closes the southern horizon of Assini, Brother Giordano was in 1921 one of the twenty-six friancylo, under the conduct of Casar of Speyer, not out for this many. He seems to have remarked attached to this proyinea until his death, even when most of the frium, uspus cially those who held cures, had been transferred, often to a distance of reveral mentles' journey, from one and of Burge to the other. It is not, then, surprising that he was often prayed to connect his manories to writing Ma dictated them to Brother Baldwin of Brambonburg in the spring of 1968. He noist have done it with juy, having ling before prepared bineself for the task. The riling with arthest simplicity how in 1921, at the chaptersoneral of Portioneals, be went from group to group questions ing us to their records and country the Brothers who ware going to set out on distant univious, that he might be able to may later, expecially if they came to suffer may typione. "I know them myself?"

A Chromos frateis designed of them. The test was published for the that time in 1070 by Dr. 16. Volgt under the titles. If the Discknikily-keiter dis Albanikinsten designed volgt en bis in the Albanikinspendic philosoph

[!] Good , BL

This chronicle bears the imprint of this tendency. What he desires to describe is the introduction of the Order into Germany and its early developments there, and he does it by enumerating, with a complacency which has its own coquetry, the names of a multitude of friers and by carefulty duting the events. These details, tedious for the ordinary reader, are precious to the historian; he sees there the diverse conditions from which the friers were recruited, and the rapidity with which a handful of missionaries thrown into an unknown country were able to branch ont, found new stations, and in five years cover with a network of monasteries, the Tyrol, Saxony, Bavaria, Alsace, and the neighboring provinces.

It is needless to say that it is worth while to test Giordane's chronology, for he begins by praying the reader to forgive the errors which may have escaped him on this head; but a man who thus marks in his memory what he desires later to tell or to write is not an ordinary witness.

Reading his chronicle, it seems as if we were listening to the recollections of an old soldier, who grasps certain worthless details and presents them with an extraordinary power of relief, who knows not how to resist the temptation to bring himself forward, at the risk sometimes of slightly embellishing the dry reality.

In fact this chronicle swarms with anecdotes somewhat personal, but very artless and welcome, and which on the whote carry in themselves the testimony to their authenticity. The perfume of the Fioretti already exhales from these pages so full of cander and manliness; we can follow the missionaries stage by stage, then when they are settled, open the door of the monastery and read in the very hearts of these men, many of whom are an brave as herees and harmbess we sloves.

¹ He names more than twenty four persons.

It does not seem to me that we can look upon the account of the 'seturylaw between Gregory IX, and Brother Glordane as rigorously account of the Glord, GB.

It is true that this chronicle deals especially with Germany, but the first chapters have an importance for Francis's history that exceeds even that of the biographers. Thanks to Giordano of Lisao we are from this time forward informed upon the crises which the institute of Francis passed through after 1219; he furnishes us the adidly historical loss which seems to be lacking in the documents communing from the Spirituals, and corroborates their testimony.

H. Bellingos, Ameryai or for Physical Program (

Our knowledge of Thomas of Eucliston is very slight, for he has left no more trace of himself in the history of the Order than of Simon of Eucliy, to whom he dedicates his work. A native no dealet of Yeak-drive, he means never to love quitted Eugland. He was twenty-live years gathering the motorials of his work, which customers the course of events from 1921 almost to 1980. The last facts that he relates belong to years very near he this date.

Of almost double the length of that of Giordana, Eccleston's work is far from furnishing as interesting reading. The former had zeen meanly exceptling that he described, and thence resulted a vigor in his along that we cannot find in an author who writes on the testimony of others. More than this, while Giordano follows a chronological order, Eccteston has divided his incidents under fifteen rabries, in which the same people continually reappear in a confusion which at length becomes very wearisome. Finally, his document is amazingly partial: the author is not content with merely proving that the English friers are spirits; he desires to show that the province of England surpasses all others by its fidelity to the Rule and its conrage against the upholders of new ways, Brother Elias in particular.

^{}Here developed Mer. toos as Anglotes, problemed under the title of Monnescota Evanstration with the earlies of Research test accomposition of Reliable Rest accomposition of Reliable that the test through the earlies of d d distributes $1000. This test is a produced without the solution d test for the Amelia the from example to produced without the solution d treated the Amelia from example to produce d without the solution d the test is a produced without the solution of the Amelia from example to produce a solution of the finite distributed as exactly of the distribute of the Monteposita theorem the metally passed, he seek asked to be sufficient and the Monteposita theorem the Historica by Mr. Lindsenmann, Hamover, 1889, tolic, pp. 1899, 1999.

But these few faults ought not to make us lose sight of the true value of this ducument. It embraces what we may call the heroic period of the Franciscan movement in England, and describes it with extreme simplicity.

Aside from all question of history, we have here enough to interest all those who are charmed by the speciacle of On Monday, September 10th, the moral conquest. Brothers Minor hinded at Dover. They were nine in munifor: a priest, a dearon, two who had only the lesser Orders, and five hymen. They visited Canterbury, London, Oxford, Cambridge, Lincoln, and loss than ten months later all who have made their mark in the history of science or of sunctity had joined them; it may suftico to muno Adam of Marisco, Richard of Cornwall, Bishop Robert Ctrossetête, one of the prundest and purest tigures of the Middle Ages, and Rager Bacon, that persecuted menk who several contaries before his time grappled with and answered in his lonely call the problons of authority and method, with a firances and power which the sixteenth contury would find it hard to surpone, Clock, 11; 18; 14; 15. Cf. Ecol., 14, where the author takes pains to may that Alberta of Pisa died at Rome, surrounded by English Brothers "Inter Anglicos."

It is impossible that in such a movement human weaknesses and possions should not here and there reveal themselves, but we owe our chronicler thanks for not hiding them. Thunke to him, we can for a moment forget the present hour, call to life again that first Cambridge chaped so slight that it took a carpenter only one day to build it listen to three Brothers chanting matins that same night, and that with so much unfor that quof them - so rickety that his two companions were obliged to carry him wept for joy: in England as in Huly the Pranciscan record was a goste lof peace and joy. Moral ngliness impored them with a pity which we no langer know. There are few historic incidents lines than that of Brother Geoffeey of Salisbary confessing Alexander of Bissinglance; the nodde position was performing this duly without attention, as if he were felling name sort of unitary; anddenly his conferms noticel into tenra making him blued with abome and forcing tears also from him. working in him so complete a revolution that he begged to be taken into the Order.

The most interesting party are those where Thomas gives us an intimate view of the friend; here drinking their large, there hastoning, in spite of the Rule, in large name on credit for two contrades who have been multiculed, or again stastering about Brother Sudamon, who had just come in nearly frezen with cold, and whom they readd not succeed in warning—single-pareis mas est cum comprime to force ast, says the pions narrator.³ All this is mingled with dreams, visions, numberless apparifions, which once more show as how different were the ideas most familiar to the religious minds of the thirkenth century from those which hand the famine and hearls of to-day.

The information given by Pecheston lears only halle

^{*} Book A 28 () * 1260 J. A CH V : 10 : 10 : 10 ; 10 ; 10 ; 14 ; M rectly on this book, but if he speaks little of Francis he speaks much at length of some of the men who have been most closely mingled with his life.

III, CHRONICIE OF FRA SAIJMBENI 1

As colchrated as it is little known, this chronicle is of quite secondary value in all that concerns the life of St. Francis. Its author, born October 9, 1221, entered the Order in 1238, and wrote his memoirs in 1282–1287; it is therefore especially for the middle years of the thirteenth contary that his importance is capital. Notwithstanding this, it is surprising how small a place the radiant figure of the muster holds in these long pages, and this very fact shows, better than long arguments could do, how profound was the fall of the Franciscan idea.

LV. THE CHRONICLE OF THE TRIMULATIONS BY ANGELO CARENO 2

This chronicle was written about 1880; we might therefore be surprised to see it appear among the sources

The Franchesan of Canracchi propured a new edition of it, which appeared in the Analesta Franchesana. This work is in manuscript in the Analesta Franchesana. This work is in manuscript in the Vationa under no. 7260. Vide Blirle, Zettschrift für kath. Theol. (1883), t. vii., pp. 707 and 708. The work of Mr. Clédat will be read with interest: De fratro Salembeno et de cjus chronica auctoritate, Puris, 4to, 1877, with fan almite.

The Horn Elvin has published it, but unfortunately not entire, in tim Archiv., t. ii., pp. 125-155, text of the close of the fifth and of the sixth tribulation; pp. 256-327 text of the third, of the foorth, and of the commonwement of the fifth. He has added to it introductions and orithal units. For the parts not published I will cite the text of the harrentian monuscript (Plut. 20, cod. 7), complied where possible with the trailent version in the National Library at Florence (Magliabecchina, xxxvii. 28). Sue also an article of Professor Tomo in the Archivio storico italiano, t. xvii. (1886), pp. 12-40 and 246-61, and one of Mr. Richard: Library of the Ecole des chartes, 1884, 5th tive. p. 525. Of. Toogo, the Eresia net media Evo, p. 419 ft. As to the text published by to be consulted for the life of St. Francis, dead more than a century before; but the picture which Chrono gives us of the early days of the Order gains its importance from the fact that in sketching it be made constant appeal to eye witnesses, and precisely to those whose works have disappeared.

Angelo Clarence earlier called Pictro da Fassannbronat from the name of his mative town, and nonetimes da Cingoli, doubthese from the little convent where he made profession, belonged to the Zelanti of the Murch of Aucona ast early as 1265. Hunted and persecuted by his adversacion during his whole life, he died in the other of canclity Jame 15, 1339, in the little hermitage of Santa Maxia at Aspro in the diagrees of Mursica in Basilicata.

Thanks to published documents, we may now, so to opeak, follow day by day not only the external circumstances of his life, but the inner workings of his soul. With him we see the true Franciscan live again, one of these men who, while decaring to remain the abedient non of the Church, cannot reconcile themselves to penult the domain of the documents olip away from them, the ideal which they have hailed. Often they are on the horders of hereby; in these attenance against had priests and unweathy positife there is a bitterness which the acetaries of the eixteenth century will not exceed. Of-Dollinger in the Restrict over the tenges Mette des Mitt billers, Mittleh, 1868, 2 vols, from H. Theil Pedescreeks pp. 417-427, 11 is of no nest. It can only logic entress, so it absorbed with proceedings. Whole pages are nonling.

Salesties, E. Hita pap doit grogi

^{*}Vida Archie, I., p. 1837 Et his tolian ex espacitate et malignit de ligenime posterion que rolaremat este partires, sed apersans no priverant derio, "et sog. 131, p. 1869 . . . Accision et symanique herrib aleque public regnat et fore tolians succest excluse corquis."

final appeal to the inward witness of the Holy Spirit; and yet Protestantism would be mistaken in seeking its ancestors among them. No, they desired to die as they had lived, in the communion of that Church which was as a stepmother to them and which they yet loved with that heroic passion which some of the ci-devant nobles brought in '93 to the lave of France, governed though she was by Jacobius, and poured out their blood for her-

Chareao and his friends not only believed that Francis had been a great Saint, but to this conviction, which was also that of the Brothers of the Common Observance, they added the persuasion that the work of the Stigmatized could only be continued by men who should attain to his moral stature, to which men might arrive through the power of faith and love. They were of the violent who take the kingdom of heaven by force; so when, after the frivolous and senile interests of every day we come face to face with them, we feel ourselves both humbled and exalted, for we suddenly find unhoped-for powers, an unrecognized lyre in the human heart.

There is one of Jesus's apostles of whom it is difficult not to think while reading the chronicle of the Tribulations and Angelo Clareno's correspondence: St. John. Between the apostle's words about love and those of the Franciscan there is a similarity of style all the more striking because they were written in different languages. In both of these the soul is that of the aged man, where all is only love, pardon, desire for holiness, and yet it aconotines wakes with a andden thrill—like that which utilized the seal of the seer of Patines—of indignation, wrath, pity, terror, and joy, when the future unvoils it self and gives a glimps—of the close of the great tribulation.

One excommunical etheretical allissimam orangelit pumpertatom, excommunicatus est a Denet hereticus corum Christo, qui est eterna et in communicatus est a Denet hereticus corum Christo, qui est eterna et in communicitis vertios." Arch., I., p. 568. "Non est potestas contra christim Dominum et contra exangelium." Ib., p. 569. He closes one of bis entere with a sentence of a mysticism full of serenity, and which lots us see to the bottom of the hearts of the Spiritual Brothers. "Totum tigitur stadium esse debri qual unum inseparabiliter simus per Franciscum in Ohristo." Ib., p. 564.

Charene's works, then, are in the strictest sense of the word partisan; the question is whether the author has designedly fabrified the facts or ractifated the texts. To this question we may boldly measure, No. He countils errors, requesively in the earlier pages, but they are not such as to diminish our confidence.

biles a good deachinite, he believed that the Order would have to traverse eigen tribulations before its final triumph. The positificate of dolor XXII, marked, he thought, the commencement of the seventh; he set hims self, then, to write, at the request of a friend, the history of the first ax.

His account of the first is naturally preceded by an introduction, the purpose of which is to exhibit in the reader, taking the life of St. Francis as a framework, the intention of the latter in composing the Rule and distating the Will.

Han between 1910 and 1950, Charene had at his service the testimony of several of the first disciples; he

This example in the list of the first six generals of the Dube,

The first (1240–1220) extends from the departure of St. Transis for Cappt up to his death. The second includes the generalite of Irollier Ellies (1242–1230); the third that of Krescontine (1244–1249), the fourth that of Researches (1244–1249), the fourth of Researches (1245–1244), the 48th connections with the epople of the connection of Lecon (1244) and extends up to the death of the implie for, Thomas (Lakess (1244)). And the sixth goes from 1200 in 1928.

found himself in relations with Angelo di Ricti,¹ Egidio,² and with that Brother Giovanni, companion of Egidio, mentioned in the prologue of the Legend of the Three Companions.8

His chronicle, therefore, forms as it were the continuation of that legend. The members of the little circle of Greecie are they who recommend it to us; it has also their inspiration.

But writing long years after the death of these Brothers, Clareno feels the need of supporting himself also on written testimony; he repeatedly refers to the four legends from which he borrows a part of his narrative; they are those of Giovanni di Ceperano, Phomas of Celano, Bonaventura, and Brother Leo.4 Bonaventura's work is mentioned only by way of reference; Clareno borrows nothing from him, while he cites long passages z a Quem (fratrem Jacobua do Massa) diriyonto mo fratro Johanno socio frutris profutt Egidii alderoluborani. His onim fruter Johannes . . . disti milil. . . . " Arch., fi., p. 270.

^{&#}x27;The date of the death is unknown; on August 11, 1253, he was presout at the double-lad of St. Okra.

² Died April 23, 1261.

misticaerant cas et aliqua commemoravi de hiis que didici in quatuor legandis quas ridi et legi." Arch., H., p. 185.-" Vitam pawperis et humilis wiri Del Trancisci trium ordinum famiatoris quataor solemnes porsano secipsorunt, fraires videlicet scientia et sanctitate practari, Johnwes et Thomas de Celane, frater Banaventura unus post Beatum Franciscant Goucculis Minister et vir mire simplicitatis et sanctitatis fratac Lea, quadem sancti Francisci socius. Has quatuor descriptiones son historius qui legerit . . " Laurent MS., pl. xx., o. 7, f° 1a. Did the Italian translator think there was an error in this quotation? I do not know, but he suppressed it. At f 12a of manuscript xxxvii., 28, of the Mughalacechina, we read : "Incominciano alcane croniche de ordine framiscatto, como la vita del povero e humilo servo di Dio Francesco fondatore del minorico ordine fu scripta da San Bonaventura e da quatro altri frati. Questa parha scripture ovverumente hystorie quello il quale diligentemente la leggiera, expeditamenta potra cognoscoro . . . la vocationo la mentita di San Francisco."

appreciated. It is indeed partisan; the documents of which we must be most wary are not those whose tendency is manifest, but those where it is skilfully concealed.

The life of St. Francis and a great part of the religious history of the thirteenth century will surely appear to us in an entirely different light when we are able to lill out the documents of the victorious party by those of the party of the vanquished. Just as Thomas of Celano's first legend is dominated by the desire to associate closely St. Francis, Gregory IX., and Brother Elias, so the Chronicle of the Tribulations is inspired from heginning to end with the thought that the troubles of the Order—to say the word, the apostasy—began so early us 1219. This contention finds a striking confirmation in the Chronicle of Giordano di Giano.

V. The Property

With the Fioretti we enter definitively the domain of legend. This literary gem relates the life of Francis, his companions and disciples, as it appeared to the popular imagination at the beginning of the fourteenth century. We have not to discuss the literary value of this document, one of the most exquisite religions works of the Middle Ages, but it may well be said that from the historic point of view it does not deserve the neglect to which it has been left.

The manuscripts and editions are well-nigh immunorable. M. Inigl Manzoni has strolled them with a carefulness that nuckes it much to be desired that he continue this difficult work. Studi sai Fieretti: Misserionen, 1888, pp. 116-119, 150-152, 102-108; 1889, 0-15, 78-84, 132-135. When shall we find some upp who can and will undertake to make a scientific edition of them? Those which have appeared during our time in the various cities of Italy are insignificant from a critical point of view. See Mazzoni Cuido, Capitoli ineditivici Fieretti di S. Francesco, in the Propagnatore, Bologus, 1888, vol. xxi., pp. 806-411.

Most suthing have failed in courage to revise the sensitioned lightly interest against it by the successors of Bullander. Why make anything of a book which Father Suyaken did not even deign to read!

Yet that which given these stories is a inestimable worth in what for want of a better term we may call their atmosphere. They are legendary, worked ever, exapperated, falso even, if you please, but they give no with a vivueity and intensity of coloring semething that we shall samely for in vain elsewhere. The surroundings in which Sit. Francis lived. More than any other biography the Pioretti transport use to Umbria, to the mountains of the March of Ancona; they make us visit the hermitages, and mingle with the life, half childish, half angelis, which was that of their inhabitants.

It is difficult to prenounce upon the name of the notion. His work was only that of gathering the flowers of his longest from existen and real tradition. The question whether he wrote in takin or Italian has been much discussed and appears to be not yet settled; what is certain to that though this work may be autorior to the Conformities, it is a little later than the Chronicle of the Tribulations, for it would be stronge that it made no mention of Angolo Clarenc, if it was written after his death.

This book is in fact, an essentially local selecting the author law in mind to exect a measument lathoglory of the Brothers Minor of the March of Ancous, This province, which is axidently his range does it not

A Video A. 694, p. 665. A Attractive from Judicine animalina pulme, VI. 5033. A Electric and Common conference.

^{*} Natistioning and Piras croppin Attackets and Docere value manus, ripling the Projection earlies. In time, in the storges that the Conformities have now from the Conformities have now from the Conformities are a visited to provide a supplied to the conformities.

I four operations have easily all the lifty also collegions which form the transmission of the lift of resemble the sky blazing with stars? The hely Brothers who dwelt in it, like the stars in the sky, lave illuminated and adorated the Order of St. Francis, filling the world with their examples and teaching." He is acquainted with the smallest villages, each having at a short distance its monustery, well upart, usually near a torrent, in the edge of a wood, and above, near the hill-top, a few almost inaccessible cells, the asylums of Brothers even more than the others in love with contemplation and refirement.

The chapters that concern St. Francis and the Umbrian Brothers are only a sort of introduction; Egidio, Manuec, Lea on one side, St. Clara on the other, are witnesses that the ideal at Portiumenta and St. Damian was indeed the name to which in later days Giachimo di Manua, Pietra di Monticulo, Conrad di Offida, Giovanna di Penna, and Giovanni della Verm endeavored to attain,

While most of the other legends give us the Franciscan bradition of the great convents, the Fieretti are almost the only document which shows it as it was perpetuated in the hermitages and among the people. In default of accuracy of detail, the incidents which are related here couldin a higher truth their tone is true. Here are words that were never attered, acts that never took place, but the send and the heart of the early Franciscans were surely what they are depicted here.

¹ Pho province of the March of Amount counted seven oustedlas: 1, Ascoll; 2, Camerine; 3, Ancona; 4, Just; 5, Furne; 6, Fano; 7, February Pho Floretti montion at best six of the monasteries of the enclodes of Forme: Mollove, 51, 53; Fallerone, 52, 51; Bruforte and Rollane, 40, 47; Massa, 54; Pouna, 45; Ferme, 44, 49, 51.

At each page we are rendeded of these groves which were originally the Indispensable appendage of the Franciscan mountaries: La selva of era allow allow as, M. degli Augli, 3, 10, 16, 16, etc. La selva d'un tropo descrio del val di Spoteto (Caroorl ?), 4; selva di Forano, 42. d' Mossa, 61, etc.

of Aucona, these wild flowers have a perfume and an originality which we look for in vain in the carefully cultivated flowers of a learned gardener.

APPENDICES OF THE FIGURETI

In the first of these appendices the compiler has divided into five chapters all the information on the stigmata which he was able to gather. It is easy to understand the success of the Fioretti. The people fell in love with these stories, in which St. Francis and his companions appear both more human and more divine than in the other legends; and they began very soon to feel the need of so completing them as to form a veritable biography.

The second, entitled Life of Brother Ginepro, is only indirectly connected with St. Francis; yet it deserves to he studied, for it offers the same kind of interest as the principal collection, to which it is doubtless posterior. In these fourteen chapters we find the principal features of the life of this Brother, whose mad and saintly freaks still furnish material for conversation in Umbrian menastories. These unpretending pages discover to us one aspect of the Franciscan heart. The official historians have thought it their duty to keep silence upon this Brother, who to them appeared to be a supremely indiscreek personage, very much in the way of the good name of the Order in the eyes of the laics. They were right from their point of view, but we owe a debt of gratitude to the Fioretti for having preserved for us this person-

Thin desire was so natural that the manuscript of the Augelica library lucindes many additional chapters, concerning the gift of Porthmonic, the indulgence of August 2d, the birth of St. Francis, etc. (Vide Anced, Fieretti, Rema, 1889, pp. 266, 878-386.) It would be an interesting study to sock the origin of these doenments and to establish their relationship with the Speculum and the Conformities. Vide Conform., 281n, 1; 121b; Spec., 92-90.

VI. CHORONICLE OF THE XXIV. GENERALS 1

We find here at the end of the life of Francis that of most of his companions, and the events that occurred under the first twenty-four generals.

It is a very ordinary work of compilation. The authors have sought to include in it all the pieces which they had succeeded in collecting, and the result presents a very disproportioned whole. A thorough study of it might be interesting and useful, but it would be possible only after its publication. This cannot be long delayed: twice (at intervals of liftcon months) when I have desired to study the Assisi number it was found to be with the Pranciscons of Quaracchi, who were proparing to print it.

It is difficult not to bring the epoch in which this collection was closed near to that when Bartolommeo of Pisa wrote his famous work. Perhaps the two are quite closely related.

This chronicle was one of Glassberger's favorite sources,

VII. THE CONFORMITIES OF HARTOLOMMICO OF PISA?

The Book of the Conformities, to which Brother Bartolonunce of Pisa devoted more than fifteen years of his life," appears to have been read very inattentively by ² Son Archie, t. 1., p. 545, an article of Pather Denifle: Zur Quellenkunde der Franziskener Geschichte, where he mentions at least eight manuscripts of this work. Gf. Ehrle: Zeitschrift, 1888, p. 824, note 8. I have studied only the two manuscripts of Florence: Riocavil, 279, paper, 243 fes, of two cola recently numbered. The Colex of the Laurentian Gaddhau rel., 53, is less careful. It is also on paper, 20 x 27, and counts 254 fes. of 1 column. F* 1 was formerly numbered 88. The order of the displace in not the same as in the preceding.

The citations are always made from the edition of Milan, 1510, 4to of 1550 follow of two columns. The last known of the subsequent aditions are those of Milan, 1513, and Bologna, 1590.

In hegan it in 1985 (fo 1), and it was anthorized by the chapter most of the authors who have spoken of it. In justice to them we must add that it would be hard to find a work more difficult to read; the same facts reappear from ten to fifteen times, and end by wearying the least delicate nerves.

It is to this no doubt that we must attribute the neglical to which it has been left. I do not heartife, however, to see in it the most important work which has been made on the life of St. Francis. Of course the author does not molerake historical criterion as we understand it to day, but if we must not expect to find him a historian, we can holdly place him in the front rank of compilers.

If the Bollandists had more thoroughly studied him they would have seen more clearly into the difficult quastion of the sources, and the authors who have come after them would have been spaced much subsection and interminable researches.

general August 2, 1993 of 1994s, D. Best-les, on C. 1595, L. his set down the date when he was width; J. H. was to 1990.

If he assisted the initiation considers the trial production by Walding in his list of ministers general. This the 2, 10 to 2, 1000, 2, 1000, 2. He was instruct on thirdings at Rologia, Rolog Piez, therein, and Piezenna Hopean had for many presented testings of the Pontosials and could these takes also also also be to be travel by collecting productions. Mark of Lisbon has performed for us a militar of the Hill. Vide Creaking the first Hill Light the performance Waldings with the Lisbon has performed for us a militar of the Hills. Vide Creaking the first Hills has been distinguished for the military of the Hills with the distinction of the Hills. For fasther distalls see Waldings and 1995, xii, xiii, and also all observable difficulties between which can be found in the sign atom Marin, Bound, 1999, f. 1999, 2014, of part three.

Starting with the thought that Francis's life had been a perfect imitation of that of Jesus, Bartolommee attempted to collect, without losing a single one, all the instances of the life of the Poverello scattered through the diverse logends still known at that time.

Its regretted that Bounvantura, while berrowing the mornitives of his prodocessors, bad often abridged them, and himself desired to preserve them in their original bloom. Botter situated than any one for such a work, since he had at his disposal the archives of the Sacro Convento of Assisi, it may be said that he has emitted nothing of importance and that he has brought into his work considerable pieces from nearly all the legends which appeared in the thirteenth and fourteenth conturies; they are there only in fragments, it is true, but with perfect accuracy.

When his researches were unsuccessful he avows it simply, without attempting to fill out the written testimonies with his own conjectures." He goes farther, and authorite the documents he has before him to a real test-

"However it is mesessary to note that not only are then considerable differences between the collitions published, but also that the first (that of Mitne, RelG) has been completed and revised by its editor. The judgments passed apar Raymond Canfrill, 104a, 1, and Baniface VIII., 1004, 1, and Raniface VIII., 1, and Raniface VIII., 1004, 1, and Raniface VIII., 1, and Raniface VIII., 1, and Raniface VIII., 1, and Raniface

* F "Ting 1 . C Cujus numen mu reperi." In 2: " Multaque non ex imilistrites sed quin en nuserro una valui omittendo." ing, laying uside those he considers uncertain. Finally he takes pains to point out the passages in which his only authority is oral testimony.

As he is almost continually citing the legends of Coham, the Three Companions, and Bonaventura, and as the citations prove on verification to be liberally neonrate, as well as those of the Will, the divers Rules, or the positival bulb, it seems natural to conclude that he was equally accurate with the citations which we cannot verify, and in which we find long extracls from works that have disappeared.

¹⁴ Itim, 1 Innormationes quas non scalle quia imprefectus repeil. Cf. 2006, 2 ; C.Dr. aliye contriv appressionaline ones expert scripturum quare has non yound?

⁽V. 100), 1; " The net and is grant quite chistop relient non-ridio" (R. 691), 2m., Fe. Heristons generally munistre radio magnetor Burtholomo divit ipsometerus.

^{*} The establish from Boussaulia case decidedly more frequent, Wa abouth the business of eigenstates the effect of the property of the Francis; the stayter from which flasteterance takes lib quotathings adment always trotlested, and, restrictly, follows the abl division in five parts. Operating the book at bassed at follo 48th t find moless than electronica to the Expende Malas In the lisal column. Taglyn an idea of the style of Bestelemanne of Pier Lab at give to ambiguou do rendered of a page of the book. See, for example, I tills (like h, page form x,, pars, n . Franciscus productors — In the fidul line hardes Monwendura " To Beneacestor's vi quarta parte mafor's legende dell qual to Principles stillbuthly interestibles have alleging small " Wextual eliation of Heissenburg, 15. There bases butther on . O Frince guille and b. E. gread personals de ledetus as topolite antique homa farmidischens, fans hiberis, etc. " The Mend estation of thousable of Prairely follows as I Colonie, BA, gives It as far us . " Inter prevalent quite trees or Klay" and be tosak the and of the quotation Hartologican uddo i "Hee legreste seekigner". In the most column paragraph beammences with the words a B. Prancial grade theory radiabil introblem et plas for tac (primer respect) loganetia - etcalur lagrante (circae Berlinum dicit d Layenda major parts forther H. Pameines cloquia eneral mor immita, no rive officer, who , while become apounds thereally with distant , We, and Hone, 48, Then come two chapters of Deimscraura afteen carrie, legioning with: In Amberious parte legende magnete dicht be, Phonocentura : Erat entm

The citations which he makes from Celano present no difficulty; they are all accurate, corresponding sometimes with the First sometimes with the Second Legend.

Those from the Lagend of the Three Companions are accurate, but it appears that Bartolommen drew them from a text somewhat different from that which we have.²

With the citations from the Legenda Antiqua the question is complicated and becomes a nice one. Was there a work of this name? Certain authors, and among them the Bollandist Suysken, seem to incline toward the negative, and believe that to cite the Legenda Antiqua is about the same as to refer vaguely to tradition. Others among contemporaries have thought that after the approbation and definitive adoption of Bomventura's Legenda Major rarbum cjus, etc. Textual quatation of Bon., 178 and 170. The page onds with another quotation from Bonaventura; Sie dicebut prout recibit Hunaventura in octava parte Legende majoris: Hae officium patri miscricordiarum. Vide Heavy, 102 and and 103 entire. This suffices without doubt to show with what precision the authorities have been quoted in tide work, with what attention and confidence ought to be exampled those portions of documents lost or mislaid which he has here preserved for in.

140, 315, 2; nt divit fr. Thomas in sua teyenda, of. 2 Cel., 3, 60.—
140, 31 Fr. in tey. fr. Thome, of. 2 Cel., 3, 60.—140a 1, of. 2 Cel., 8
16.—1425, 4; Fr. in tey. Thome capitalo de charitale, of. 2 Cel., 8, 115.
1445, 1; Fr. in tey. fr. Thome capitalo de cratione, of. 2 Cel., 3, 40.—
1445, 1, of. 2 Cel., 3, 45.—1445, 3, of. 2 Cel., 3, 78.—1765, 2, of. 2 Cel., 3, 70.—1826, 2, of. 2 Cel., 3, 11.—2415, 1, of. 2 Cel., 3, 141.—181s, 2, of. 1 Cel., 27.—14 is needless to my that these lists of quotations do not protond to be congleto.

² Fe 36b, 2. Ut enim habetur in leg. B Soc., cf. 3 Soc., 10.—40b, 1, cf. 3 Soc., 26 28,...38b 2, cf. 3 Soc. 8.—111a, 3, cf. B Soc., 25.—184a, 2, cf. 3 Soc., 4.—142b, 2, cf. 3 Soc., 57 and 58.—167b, 2, cf. 3 Soc., 3 and 8.—168a, 4, cf. 3 Soc., 10.—170b, 1, cf. 3 Soc., 30, 4.—175b, 2, cf. 3 Soc., 50, 4.—180b, 2, cf. 3 Soc., 4.—181a, 1, cf. 3 Soc., 5, 7, 24, 33, and 67.—181a, 2, cf. 3 Soc., 36.—230b, 2, cf. 3 Soc., 14, ct.—The reading of 3 Soc. which Bartalacataec had before his eyes was pretty much the same we have to day, for he says, 18ia, 2, referring to 3 Soc., 67: "Ut habetur quasi in fine leg. 3 Soc."

Legenda Antiqua. I would not exaggerate the value of an isotated instance, but it seems an altogether plausible hypothesis to make Courad di Offida the author of this compilation. All that we know of him, of his tendencies, his struggle for the strict observance, accords with what the known fragments of the Legenda Antiqua permit us to infer as to its author.

However this may be, it appears that in this collection the stories have been given us (the principal source being the Legend of Brother Lee or the Three Companions before its mutilation) in a much less abridged form than in the Second Life of Cehane. This work is hardly more than a second edition of that of Brother Lee, here and there completed with a few new incidents, and especially with exhortations to perseverance addressed to the persecuted Zealots.

VIII. CHRONICLE OF GLASSINGROEN 4

Fividently this work, written about 1508, cannot be classed among the sources properly so called; but it pre-

1 T" 1826, 2; of, 511, 1; 146, 1.

² Hu illed December 12, 1996, at Bustla, near Assist. See upon 1:hm Chron. Tribul. Archiv., B.; 311 and 312; Conform., 69, 119, and 458.

Atthough the library of the Diddleness of Portinuents was of all subjects the one must largely treated in the Conformities, 15th, 2-157a, 2, and once then Burtalenesse of Ples refer to it in the Legenda Antique. It weems, then, that this collection also was allent as to this notebrated pardon.

*Puldiched with extreme care by the Franciscan Fathers of the Observance in t. G. of the Analecta Franciscana, ad Chira Aquas (Quaracelli, near Florence), 1888, 1 val., orner 8vo, of xxxv1.-612 pp. This edition, as much from the critical point of view of the text, its correctness, its various readings and notes, as from the material point of view, is perfect and naken the more distrible a publication of the altradeless of the xxiv, generals and of Salimboul by the same collects. The heginning up to the year 1202 has been published already by Dr. Karl Evers under the title Analectical Fratrum Minorum historiam, beingdo, 1882, 4to of 80 pp.

Francia. Like a prudent num who has already seen many religions madmen, he is at first reserved; but soon this sentiment disappears, and we find in him only a humide and active admiration for the Apostolic Man.

He speaks of him in a letter which he wrote immediately after the taking of Damiesta (November, 1210), to his friends in Lorraine, to describe it to them. A few lines author to describe St. Francis and point out his irresistible influence. There is not a single passage in the Franciscan biographera which gives a more living idea of the apentolate of the Paverella.

He returns to him more at length in his Historia Occidentalis, devoting to him the thirty-meend chapter of this environe work.² These pages, vibrating with enthusiasm, were written during Francick lifetime,² at the time when the must enlightened members of the Church, who had believed themselves to be living in the evening of the world, in respect munditendentis ad vecusum, suddenly say in the direction of Umbria the light of a new day.

II THOMAS OF BUALANTS

An archdenean of the Cathedral of Spalato, who in 1220 was studying at Bologue, has left us a very living portrait of St. Francis and the memory of the impression which his preachings produced in that learned town.

Pulls letter may be found in (Bingers) Gesta Det per Francie, pp. 1140-1140.

^{*} Adeces is do Vitelaco I Calidao quarum priar Orientalis, alter Occidentalis Historias mentine inscribitur studio Fr. Maschi Duari exufficina Dal-thazaris Helleri, 1607, 1600, 480 pp. Chapter xxxII. Alls pages 149-858, and in entitled The reduce et peudicatione fratrum Minorum. See almyo, p. 229.

⁴ This appears from the passage: Vilenus primes ordinis fundatorem mayestrum cai temporam rummo Priori suo annes olii abedlunt. Loc. ett., p. 352.

All is inserted in the treather of Significa on the bishops of Relogues Caroli Physones de spik-squa Bosonieusibus libri quinque cum nolls L. C.

Something of his enthusiasm has passed into his story; we feel that that day, August 15, 1220, when he met the Poverello of Assisi, was one of the liest of his life.

III. DIVERS CHROSELIAN

The continuation of William of Tyro? brings us a new account of Francisconttempt to compute the Soudan. This narrative, the longest of all three we have on this muljied, contains no feature essentially new, but it gives one more witness to the historic value of the Franciscan legends.

Finally, there are two chronicles written during Francisca life, which, without giving anything new, speak with menurey of his foundation, and prove how rapidly that religious renovation which started in Hudrin was being propagated to the very cube of Europa, Thu anonymous chronicles of Mondo Europa, in fact write about 1225, and tells in, not without regret, of the brills init conquests of the Franciscana.

Burchard, 'Abbot Polimento' d'Eroborg (died in 1926), who was in Rome in 1914, leaves us a very curious criticions of the Ooler.

The Brothers Miner appeared to him a little like in as thudex branch of the Pieu Meic of Lyons. He even desires that the pope, while approxing the Franciscaus, Rollin, a most which complex cols 403 500 of 1, 10 of his Opera counts, Milan, 1762-1797, 6 vots, C. We find our fragment in cut 439, [&]quot;This parrage will be found above, p. 241.

I Unificial Lycenses and Continuals boils and Abstrain in Marthus; Ampholics Collecte, the pp 504 579. The place conventing Francis in cole, 606 696.

^{*} Charmiters Months these deat prevent Peterstong mean Halto, milliothy Thrombonolites in the Mon-Havin Aist, their t, t 98, pp. 180-226, 229.

¹ HireActed et Command Conjungation of Armanian and Artito Abel and L. Welland, upon I Man. Form. Ant., 8, 23, pp. 2021-2031. The minustry of Unipergram halfmay between Flin and Augalung. Vide p. 376.

should do so with a view to satisfy, in the measure of the possible, the aspirations manifested by that heresy and that of the Humiliati.

It is impossible to attribute any value whatever to the long pages given to St. Francis by Matthew Paris.¹ His information is correct wherever the activities of the friers are concerned, and he could examine the work around him.² They are absolutely fantastic when he cames to the life of St. Francis, and we can only feel surprised to find M. Haso and opting the English monk's account of the stigmata.

The notice which he gives of Francis contains as many errors as sentences; he makes him born of a family illustrious by its nobility, makes him study theology from his infancy (hoc didicerat in litter is at theologicis disciplinis quibus ab attale barera incubacrat, usque ad notition perfectum), etc.⁴

It would be useless to enlarge this list and mention those chroniclers who simply noticed the foundation of the Order, its approbation, and the death of St. Francis,⁵ or those which spoke of him at length, but simply by copying a Franciscan legend.⁶

Matthei Parisiensis monachie Albanousis, Historia major, edition Watta, Landau, 1040. The Brothers Miner are first mentioned in the year 1207, p. 223, then 1227, pp. 880-449.

² Sac the article, Minores, in the table of contents of the Mon. Gorm, bist. Saript., t. xxvIII.

¹ Pranz von Assisi, p. 168 ff.

See alove, p. 97, ide story of the audlence with Innecent III.

O For example, Chronica Albrici trium fontium in Portz: Soript., t. 28, ad ann. 1207, 1226, 1228. Vide Fragmont of the chron. of Philippe Mouskut (4- bafore 1246). Recueit des historiers, t. xxii., p. 71, lines 30347-30360. The number of annalists in this contany is appalling, and there is not one in ten who has omitted to note the foundation of the Minor Brethers.

For example, Vincent de Beauvais (-f. 1264) gives in his Speculum historida, Illa 29, cap. 47-49, Illa 80, cap. 99-111, nearly every story given

APPENDIX

SHITICAL STUDY OF THE STIGMATA AND THE INDULGENCE OF ADOLST 3

I. THE STREET

A dissertation upon the possibility of miracles would be out of place here; a historic sketch is not a treatise on philosophy or dognatics.

Still, I owe the reader a few explanations, to enable him with thorough understanding to judge of my manner of viewing the subject.

If by mirrelo we understand either the suspension or subversion of the laws of nature, or the intervention of the first cause in certain particular cases, I could not concerle it. In this negation physical and logical reasons are secondary; the true reason—let no one be surprised—in entirely religious; the mirrele is immoral. The equality of all before God is one of the postulates of the religious connectanances, and the mirrele, that good pleasare of God, only degrades him to the level of the capricious tyrants of the earth.

The existing claurches, making, as nearly all of them do, this action of miracle the very essence of religion and the bacin of all positive faith, involuntarily render themselves guilty of that emisculation of manliness and morality of which they are passionately complain. If God intervenes that irregularly in the affairs of men, the latter can hardly do otherwise than seek to become courtiers who expect all things of the severeign's force.

The question changes its espect, if we call miracle, as we nost generally do, all that goes beyond ordinary experience.

Many apologists delight in showing that the unheard of, the inexplicable, are met with all through life. They are right and I agree with them, on condition that they do not at the close of their explanation replace this now notion of the superpatural by the former one.

It is thus that I have come to conclude the reality of the stigmata. They may have been a unique fact without being more missentons than other phenomena; for example, the mathematical powers or the masical ability of an infant product.

Those are in the homen creature almost indefinite powers, nonvellous energies; in the great unjority of men these lie in trapid churcher, but awaking to life in a few, they make of them prophets, men of genius, and saints whe show turnsouty its trac nature.

We have eaught but the sing glimpees into the domain of mental pathelogy, as yout in it and unexplored; the bearing more of the future will perhaps under, in the realist of psychology and physiology, such discoveries as will bring about a complete revolution in our laws and purctous.

It remains to examine the eliginate from the point of view of history. And though in this field there is no back of difficulties, email and great, the testimony appears to me to be at once to columbant and two precise not to command conviction.

We may at the outset set aside the system of those who hold that Brother Elias helped on their appearance by a pione feard. Sinch a claim might indeed be distouded if those marks had been gaping wounds, as they are now or in most cases have been represented to be; but all the testimony agrees in describing them, with the exception of the mark on the side, as blackish, fleshy excrescences, like the heads of mils, and in the palms of the heads like the points of mils clinched by a hammer. There was no bloody exudution except at the side.

On the other hand, any deception on the part of Elias would oblige us to hold that his accomplices were actually the heads of the party opposed to him, Leo, Angelo, and Ratino. Such want of wit would be surprising indeed in a man so circumspect.

Finally the psychological agreement between the external circumstances and the event is so close that an invention of this character would be as inexplicable as the fact itself. That which indeed almost always betrays invented or numerical incidents is that they do not fit into the francowerk of the facts. They are extraneous events, purely decorative elements whose place might be changed at will.

Nothing of the sort is the case here: Thomas of Colano is so verticious and so exact, that though holding the atigmata to be actraculous, he gives us all the elements necessary for explaining them in a diametrically opposite manner.

- 1. The preponderating place of the passion of Jesus in Francis's conscience ever since his conversion (1 Cel., 1.15; 2 Cel., 1, 6; 3, 29; 49; 52).
- 2. His sojourn in the Vorm coincides with a great increase of mystical forver.
- 3. He there observes a Lent in henor of the archangel St. Michael.
- 4. The festival of the exultation of the cross comes on, and in the vision of the crucified scraph is bleided the two ideas which laye taken passession of him, the angels and the crucifix (1 Cel., 91-96, 112-115).

This perfect congruity between the circumstances and the prodigy itself forms a normal proof whose value connot be exaggerated.

It is time to pass the principal witnessess in review,

1. Builton Elian, 1926. On the very day after the death of Francis, Buether Elian, in his capacity of view, near letters to the entire Order amounting the event and prescribing prayers.

After laying expressed his source and imported to the Brothers the Identity with which the dying Francis had clonged him for them, he adds: "I amounted to you a great jay and a new miracle. Never has the world seen such a sign, except on the Son of God who is the Christ God. For a long time before his death our Brother and Father appeared as cracified, laying in his budy live wounds which are truly the stignates of Christ, for his hands and his feet hore marks as of nails without and within, forming a sort of source, while at the side he was as if pieces with a lance, and often a little bload might from it."

9. Brother Leo. We find that it is the very adversary of Elian where the natural witness, not only of the slig-

The test was published in tillucky topostion in the Revision of the his Equivalent of the Revision of Authority of Authority to the property additional to brook and then property indicates in transact and then property in the consent of the Residents in Arbeit huses. If were improduced by Walding Ann. 1200 on 420 and 15 and 16 an

It electrons approximates as a spitch it contact in both from both from the desired. There is no longer access for any since the publication of the chroniches of the publication of the chroniches of the publication of the chroniches of the following of the letter titled, fith The Addit Anneal has also published this test fat the close of his following to the Levine food one. However, then the following to the depth each to hat it in a trajector to be taken on his has drawn it. This to the treates to be reposited that a treate of the free treates to the region of the This to the treates to be reposited that a Total of the depth and the third in the treates. As a state of the region is a treate to the treates to the region of the treates to the region of the treates and the first treates. As a state of the region of the treates that the treates are included in the treates and the treates are treated as a treated to the region of the treates and the treates are treated as a treated of the region of the treated and the treates are treated as a treated of the treated as a treated of the region of the treated and the treated of the tr mata, but of the circumstances of their imprinting. This fact adds a peculiar value to his account.

We learned above (Critical Study, p. 377) the untoward fate of a part of the Legend of Brothers Lee, Angele, and Rufino. The chapters with which it new closes (68-73) and in which the narrative of the miracle occurs, were not originally a part of it. They are a summary added at a later time to complete this document. This appendix, therefore, has no historic value, and we neither depend on it with the occlesiastical authors to affirm the miracle, nor with M. Hase to call it in question.

Tappily the testimony of Brother Leo has come down to us in spite of that. We are not left even to seek for it in the Speculum, the Pioretti, the Conformities, where fragments of his work are to be found; we find it in several other documents of incontestable authority.

The authenticity of the autograph of St. Francis preserved at Assisi appears to be thoroughly established (see Critical Study, p. 357); it contains the following note by Brother Too's hand: "The Blessed Francis two years before his death kept on the Verna in hence of the B. V. Mary mether of God, and St. Michael Archangel, a Lent from the festival of the Assumption of the B. V. M. to blie festival of St. Michael in September, and the hand of God was upon him by the vision and the address of the seraph and the impression of the stigmata upon his body. He made the laudes that are on the other side,

Again, Recleston (13) shows us Brother Lee complaining to Brother Peter of Towkesbury, minister in England, that the legend is too brief concerning the events on the Verm, and relating to him the greater number of the incidents which form the nucleus of the Fieretti on the stignment. These memorials are all the more certain that they were immediately committed to writing by Peter of Tewkestory's conquision, Brother Carin von Sedenfeld.

Finally Salemberi, in his chronicle (ad ann. 1994) in squaking of Expedime da Remance is led to oppose him to Francie. He suddenly remembers the stigmata and says, "Nover man on earth, lott he, has had the live wounds of Christ. His companion, Bridher her, who was present when they washed the body before the burial, told me that he leaded precisely like a cencified man taken down from the cross."

 Thomas of Colano, before 1230. He describes then more at length than Brother Phins (FCel., 91, 95, 119).

The details no too precise not to suggest a lesson learned by heart. The author newhere assumes in he manys witness, yet he has the tope of a legal deposition.

These objections are not without weight, but the very movelty of the margete might have induced the Franciscans leads it in a sort of canonical and no to say, decentyped margative.

- 4. The portrait of Francis, by Borlinghiod, dated 1996, preserved at Pessia (previous of Lucea) alowethe alignate as they are described in the preceding domethods.
- b. Gregory IX. in 1937. Pull of March 31; Confessor Dioxidi (Potthast, 1930). Cf. 1931; A movement of opinion against the stigmata had been produced in restain countries. The pope asks all the faithful to believe in them. Two other ladds of the came day, one addressed to the Bishop of Dhoutz, the other to the Dominicano, encyptically constenue them for calling the stigmata in question (Potthast, 1930) and 1930).
- 6. Alexander IV., in his bull Healigns operatio of Ontabor 29, 1256 (Polthest, 16077), states that having formerly been the demestic prelate of Cardinal Ugolini, he knew St. Francis familiarly, and supports his description of the stigmata by these relations.

¹ Engraved in italiat François d'Assiso, Pario, 4to, 1985, p. 277.

To this pontiff are due several bulls declaring excommunicate all those who deny them. These contribute nothing new to the question.

- 7. Bonaventura (1260) repeats in his legend Thomas of Colano's description (Bon., 193; cf. 1 Cel. 94 and 95), not without adding some new factors (Bon., 194–200 and 215–218), often so course and clumsy that they inevitably awaken doubt (see for example, 201).
- 8. Matthew Paris (* 1259). His discordant witness barely deserves being cited by way of memoir (see Critical Study, p. 431). To be able to forgive the fanciful character of his long disquisitions on St. Francis, we are forced to recall to mind that he owed his information to the verbal account of some pilgrim. He makes the stigmata appear a fortnight before the Saint's death, shows them continually emitting blood, the wound on the side so wide open that the heart could be seen. The people gather in crowds to see the sight, the cardinals come also, and all together listen to Francis's strange declarations. (Historia major, Watts's edition London, I vol. fel., 1640, pp. 339-342.)

This list might be greatly lengthened by the addition of a passage from Luke bishop of Tny (Lucas Tudensis) written in 1231; based especially on the Life by Thomas of Colano, and oral witnesses.

The statement of Brother Boniface, an eye-witness, at the chapter of Genea (1254). (Eccl. 13.)

Finally and especially, we should study the strophes relating to the stigmata in the preses, hymns, and sequences composed in 1228 by the peoc and several cardinals for the Office of St. Fixneis; but such a work, to be done with accuracy, would carry us very far, and the authoristics already cited doubtless suffice without bringing in others."

¹ Bibliotheon Patrum. Lyons, 1677, xxv., adv. Albigenses, 11b. ii., cap. 11., of. iii., 14 and 15. Reproduced in the A. SS., p. 052.

The objections which have been opposed to these witnesses may be reduced. I think, to the following:

- o. Francis's functal book place with surprising precipitation. Dead on Saturday evening he was funied Sambley morning.
- b. The body was enclosed in a coffin, which is contrary to Italian habits.
- e. At the time of the removal, the body, wrested from the multitude, is no can fully hidden in the lacilies that for continues its precise place has been unknown.
- $\rightarrow t$. The bull of canonization realors we mention of 100
- e. They were not admitted without a contest, and among those who deried them were come hadrops.

Nome of these arguments appears to me decisive,

- of In the Middle Ages band do almost always took place immediately after death characterist III, dying at Perugia July 16, 1216, is intered the 17th; Homorina III, dies March 18, 1227, and is intered the next days.
- b. It is more difficult then many employee technical which were the ladital concerning function in Unitalia in the thirteenth century. However that may be, it was vertainly necessary to put Francis's tody into a collin. The looing already extremized by popular continuous, his couper was from that measured a relic for which a reliquery was FThe emplois man contains the following moment instead off, and 1960 of Sufficient, 1984 of Julia 7, Danie, 2004, West-Trees, come 1979, and 78, A. 1944, p. 1994. Managering Contains of the following of these legistes. The Applica 1, p. 345.

The learned producer denote being a desire. Leipting Land, lient, 1856, Phe learned producer denotes an interesting charge basely printed pages 10 the study of the athena 4.42 2.00 necessary; may more, a strong box such as the secondary seemes in Berlinghieri's picture shows it to have been. Without such a precaution the sacred body would have been reduced to fragments in a few moments. Call to mind the wild enthusiasm that led the devotees to cut off the ours and even the breasts of St. Elizabeth of Hungary. Quardum cares illius truncabant, cliam summitatem mamiltarum ejus quidum praecidebant et pro reliquiis sibi servabant,—Liber de dictis iv. ancillarum, Mencken, vol. ii., p. 2032.

c. The ceremony of translation brought an innumerable multitude to Assisi. If Brother Elias concealed the body, he may have been led to do so by the fear of some organized surprise of the Perugians to gain possession of the precious relie. With the customs of those days, such a theft would have been in nowise extraordinary. These very Perugians a few years later stole away from Bastia, a village dependent on Assisi, the body of Conrad of Offida, which was performing immunerable mirades there. (Conform., 60b, 1; cf. Giord., 50.) Similar affrays took place at Padua over the relies of St. Anthony. (Hilaire, Saint Antoine de Padone, sa légende primitive, Montrouil-sur-Mar, I vol., 8vo, 1890, pp. 30-40.)

d. The bull of canonization, with the greater number of such documents, for that matter, makes no historic claim. In its wordy rhotoric we shall sooner learn the history of the Philistines, of Samson, or even of Jacob, than of St. Francis. Canonization here is only a pretext which the old pontial soizes for recurring to his favorite figures.

This silones signifies nothing after the very explicit

The more I lidnic about it, the more incapable I become of attributing any nort of weight to lids argument from the disappearance of the body; for in fact, if there had been may pleas fraud on Elias's part, he would on the contrary lave displayed the corpse.

lestimony of other bulb by the same positif in 1927, and after the pad given to the stigmeds in the latergical sauge which in 1923 he composed for the office of St. Francis.

e. These attacks by rectain bi hope are in newise our prising; they are opesales in the struggle of the secular elegy against the mendicant order:

At the time when these negations were brought forword (1937) the narrative of Thomas of Celanu was ufficial and everywhere known, nothing therefore would have been easier, buff a serve of years after the events, than be bring witnesses to expose the frauch if there had been any; but the Bishop of Olanutz and the others base their objections always and only upon degrantic grounds.

As to the attacks of the Dominicans, it is needless to recall the rivally between the two Chiles (* is it not then singular to find these protestations country from Bilesia (f) and never from Central Raly, where, among other eyes witnesses, Buthou Love was yet hving (d) 127117

Thus the witnesses appear to me to maintain their integrity. We might have preferred those metrosimple and shorter, we could wish that they had reached no without details which awake all surfaced anaparisms, but it is very solden that a witness does not try to prove his affirms

Then, for example of Pet , if, tel, so well as the encyclical of Fiber and the Paris and University of Romano, in 1995.

The following origing many others. Example had particularly high broads a made for him, to detect the second in the side of the effect, that the following many orbits as the place directly the indiction great a light floods I the made is entry, that me change is being in the inner of Carontineau Che Citics in entry, that made in their may. I continue

Have, In his study, is a millionable under the vestile of the bad line pression much up in him by Homesentiera's deposition of a continueds, his sees the other witness only theoregic him. I know know that it had mainfully thromas of relative feet him, he would have assumed at very life fermits emolysions.

tions and the prop then highly arguments which, though the stable has propriete to the valgar audience to which he is speaking 1/3712.

11. THE PARDIN TO AUGUSTED PARTIES INTERPRETATION OF PORTI-

This question might be set aside; on the whole it has no direct connection with the history of St. Francis.

Place most important document is manuscript $144 of the archives of Bacca Conventa at Analsi. Liber indulgentia $8. Maria de Angelis sive the Portionenta in quo libro eyo fr. Franciscus Bartheli de Assisia posui quidquid patai sollicite inventre in legendis untiquis et novis b. Francisci et in altis dictis sociarum ejus da laco codem et commendatione ipsius loci at quidquid excitatis et certitudinis potui inventre de sucra indulgentia profati luci, quamenta sedicet fuit impotrata et data b. Francisco de miruculis èpsius indulgentia quae ipsam declarant ocrtam et verum. Bartheli lived in the fluit ind fonteentin century.

thin work in still unpublished, but Futher Lee Pairem M. O. is preparing it for publication. The name of this learned monk gives every guaranty for the necessary of this difficult work; meanwhile a dotation description and long extracts may be found in the Miscellanea (ii., 1987). La storia let predom its Francesso de Burthoti, by Don Michaic Falaci Pulguant, pp. 140-15il (of. Archiv., I., p. 486). Suc also in the Miscellanea (i., 1886, p. 16) a bibliographical note containing a detailed list of fifty-aight works (of. ibid., pp. 48, 145).

The Ballandist Suyakan also makes a long study of it (A. SS., pp. 870-810), no also the Racaltact Father Cambide Challppe, Vis de saint Franpais d'Assisa, B vida., Svo, Parls, 1874 (the first cultion is of 1720), vol. 111., pp. 140-427.

In coult of those works we flud what has been said in all the others.

Yet it occupies too large a place in modern biographies not to require a few words; it is related that Francis was in puryer one night at Portiumenta when Jesus and the Virgin appeared to him with a retinue of angels. He made hold to ask an unbeard of privilege, that of plenary inhalgence of all sins for all those who, having confessed and being contrate, should visit thus chapel. Jesus granted this at his mother's request, on the sole condition that his vient the pope would ratify it.

The next day Francischet out for Perugia, accompanied by Massec, and obtained from Honorius the desired installence, but only for the day of Angust 2d.

Such in a few lines, is the summary of this legend, which is surrounded with a crowd of maryellous includents.

The question of the nature and value of includgeness is not here concerned. The only one which is here put is this. Did Francis set this includgeness and did Honorim III, grant it?

Merely to reduce it to these snaple proportions is to be brought to messer it with a categorical No.

It would be tedious to refer even briefly to the difficultion, contradictions, impossabilities of this abory, many a time point of our by orthodox writers. In spite of all

The numerous writings against the Indulgence associtive a collection of volgstifier or demonstrate treatises. It refeats them bore beauty these pages with them. The principal ones was indicated by Greenest and Chrispin.

Among contemporables Patters Danisative of Alexics. Protectional order Gracks life I received below II in the relief of the Bush the, I will, two, Pittly imprecents the tradition of the Other, and the Alde to Mounting Children de Shard Francis, Stanta, two, Varia, 1990, no describ Patholla uplition to non-Francis, associatives

The Lesk minimary is that of Cather Cashle As Ma, that it is the Model composition. It has been complete Land strend 1 in the thermal translation. Her MAR desk Economics with the Limitaria in a attraction that Levillet was Ex. Quintlance Maller, vol. 1, Martin, 1964, pp. 200-200.

they have come to the affirmative conclusion: Roma locata est.

Those whom this subject may interest will find in the note ahove detailed bibliographical indications of the principal elements of this now quieted discussion. I shall contine myself to pointing out the impossibilities with which tradition comes into collision; they are both paychological and historical. The Bollandists long since pointed out the silence of Francis's early biographers upon this question. Now that the published documents are much more numerons, this silence is still more over-Neither the First nor the Second Life by wholming. Thomas of Celane, nor the anonymous author of the second life given in the Acta Sanctorum, nor even the anonymous writer of Perngin, nor the Three Companions, nor Bonaventura suy a single word on the subject. more do very much later works mention it, which sin only by excessive critical samples: Bernard of Besse, Giordiano di Giano, Thomas Eccleston, the Chronicle of the Tribulations, the Fioretti, and even the Golden Legend.

This conspiracy of silence of all the writers of the thirteenth century would be the greatest miracle of history if it were not absurd.

By way of explanation, it has been said that these writers refrained from speaking of this indulgence for fear of injuring that of the Grusade; but in that case, why did the pope command seven bishops to go to Portinneula to proclaim it in his name?

The legend takes upon itself to explain that Francis refused a bull or any written attestation of this privilege; but, admitting this, it would still be necessary to explain why no bint of this matter has been preserved in the papers of Honorius III. And how is it that the bulls sent to the seven bishops have left not the slightest trace upon this pontiff's register?

Again, how does it happen, if neven bishops officially promulgated this includence in 1217, that 34. Francis, after having related to Brother beachis interview with the paper said to him: "Transcription has neglective modern tunn; quin near labet leanne college. Quin har includenties occultulating and tempors; sed theminus tealer came extra at manifestalature," Conform, 1731, 2. Such an average is not wanting in simplicity. It alumdantly proves that before the death of Brother Leo (1271) no one had spoken of this famous paydon.

After this it is insedless to mend upon according difficulties; how is it that the chapters general were not lixed for August 5d, to allow the Brothers to seem a thi halidgenes?

How explain that Francis, after having reseived in 1946 a privilege unique in the arneds of the Church, should be a stranger to the paper in 1949?

There is, however, one more proof whose value exceeds all florothess. Financials Will:

"I forbid absolutely all the Brothers by their obedience, in whatever place they may be, to sub-suy bull of the court of Bonce, whether directly or indirectly, nor under protext of church or convent, nor under protext of preaching, nor even for their personal protection."

thefore closing it remains for us to glasses at the growth of this legeral.

It was definitively constituted about 1230-1240, but it was in the air long before. With the patience of four Renediction for the best days we should doubtless be gibt to find our way in the modes of decrements, more or has corrupted, from which it remove to us, and little by little we might find the starting point of the dream in a fring who seem blinded humanity kneeding around Portineula to recent eight.

It is not difficult to soo in general what led to the nontorialization of this graceful fancy: people remembered Francis's attachment to the chapel where he had heard the decisive words of the gospel, and where St. Clara in her turn had entered upon a new life.

When the great Busilies of Assisi was built, drawing to itself pilgrims and privileges, an opposition of principles and of impiration came to be added to the petty rivalry between it and Portiuments.

The zealots of poverty said alond that though the Saint's body rested in the basilies his heart was at Portimental. By dint of repeating and exaggerating what Francis had said about the little sanctuary, they came to give a precise and so to say doctrinal sense to utterances purely mystical.

The violences and perseentions of the party of the barge Observance under the generalship of Crescentius? (1344–1347) around a vast increase of ferver among their adversaries. To the bull of Innocent IV, declaring the basilies Theoreforth Caput et Mater of the Order? the Zeulota replied by the parratives of Colano's Second Life and the legends of that period. They went so far as to quote a promise of Francis to make it in perpetuity the Mater et Caput of his institute.

In this way the two parties came to group themselve, around these two buildings. Even to-day it is the same. The Franciscaus of the Strict Observance occupy Portimenta, while the Basilica of Assisi is in the hands of the

A Conference 2000, 3.

^{*}Rico by parthedar Archiv., II., p. 250, and the bull of February 7, 1734. Pulthed, 12007; Glassberger, ann. 1244 (An. fr. t. ii., p. 69).

^{*} Is yel corleshon, March 6, 1246, Potthast, 11578.

¹³ Pol., 4, 12 (af. Conform., 318a, 1); 8 Sec., 56; Spec., 82b ff.; 49b ff.; Ponform., 144a, 2.

^{*} Conform., 163a; 2, 217b. i ff. Cf. Flor., Amoni's ed. (Appendix to the Codex of the Bib. Angelica), p. 378.

Conventional (Large Observance), who have adopted all the interpretations and mitigations of the Rules; they are worthy folk, who live upon their dividends. By a phonomenon, unique, I think, in the number of the Church, they have pushed the freedom of their infield ity to the point of easting off the habit, the popular brown cassands. Dressed all in black, also and butted, nothing distinguishes them from the accular dergy except a modest little cool.

Proor Francia! That he may have the joy of feeling his tends branched by a course gown, come dramg from must evercome his very natural repugnences, and come to kneed there. The indulgence of August 251 is then the mply of the Zealote to the persecutions of their brothere.

An attentive study will perhaps above it amarging little by little under the generalship of Raincooks Gostroli (1989-1996); Consider Offichaely Elwis seems to have had none effect upon it, but only with the root generation do we find the legend completed and axioned in open day.

Regun in a misapprohension it ends by imposing itself upon the Church, which to day guarantees it with its installible authority, and yet in its congin it was a veritable ary of result against the decisions of Herms.

